THE INDEPENDENT

ON SATURDAY

TODAY'S NEWS

Life for wife murderer

An RAF squadron leader who murdered his wife because of an obsessive love for a young Serbian interpreter was jailed for life over his "planned, callous and coolly executed act". At the end of a 13-day trial at Norwich Crown Court, Mr Justice Gage told Nicholas Tucker, 46, that he had no doubt that the murder of his wife Carol was motivated by the fact that he was besotted with 21year-old Dijana Dudukovic, whom he had met during service with the UN in Bosnia. Page 9

Cover-up lawyer jailed

A solicitor and her former policeman lover who ruined their careers by telling lies about his drink driving offence were jailed at the Old Bailey yesterday. Penelope Schofield, 35, wept as she was jailed for perverting the course of justice, Detective Constable Nigel Philips was jailed for 16 months. Schofield was told by the Recorder of London, Sir Lawrence Verney: "I have to bear in mind not only your personal position. but also the concern of the public that a practising solicitor had on this occasion, practised deception and deception against the public makes it essential I pass a prison sentence." Page 9

China will be worst polluter

Today China produces only a tenth of the pollution of the United States. But by the year 2015, it may overtake the US as the world's biggest producer of greenhouse gases. The big problem is coal and the dirty industries that burn it. But it may be too late to reverse what is happening. Page 17

Blair warns farmers

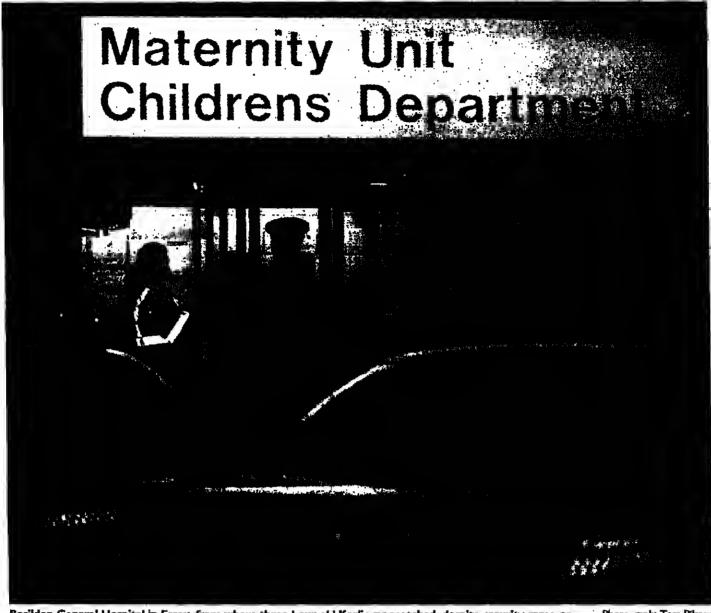

As farmers conditued their protest over beef, Tony Blair said he understood their concerns but warned that they must stay within the law. He said: "We fully understand the distress and difficulties of farmers and we have been working to assist them.

"The taxpayer will pay £1.4 billion this year in support of the British beef industry and of course we do everything we can to support them. It is essential, however, that the rule of law must be upheld." Page 8

CEATHER Time Off, page 2 ELEVISION The Eye EROSSWORES Time Off, pages

leb address: http://www. dependent.co.uk

Parents' nightmare as tiny baby is snatched

Essex police were engaged in a race against time to find a newborn baby girl snatched from her mother's side in a maternity unit. Clare Gamer was at Basildon Hospital to hear a harrowing tale.

The father was making a telephone call to relatives to share the joyful news of the birth wheo the baby was grabbed from her cot at the foot of her dozing mother's bed, just three hours after being born.

The baby, named Karli, was last seen being smuggled out of the hospital just before 1pm under the left arm of a blonde-haired woman, aged between 25 and 30. Karli had not been fed since being born at

At the time of the kidnap, Karli's mother, Tanya, was still drowsy from the anaesthetic. But the woman in the bed opposite saw what happened and raised the alarm. Maternity nurses chased after

No doors in the unit were locked - they are only locked at night -- so it took less than a minute for the woman to go from the first floor to park. She was last seen leaving the hospital grounds in the passenger ing driven by a man. They accelerated at high speed the wrong way down a sbort road with beadlights blazing. Police said it was possible that Karli was not with them because ground floor anything could have appened".

At n press conference Detective Superintendent David Bright, of Essex Police, appealed to anyone with any information to contact the emergency line immediately, on 01245 490990. He said people should be alert to "anyone buying baby food, baby clothes or seeking advice about how to look after a baby".

As darkness fell, the hours passed, and temperatures dropped. concern grew for Karli's welfare. Christopher Welch, consultant maternity and paediatrics at the hospital, said: "As the hours march on our concern gradually deepens ...

this baby is small. She requires food, milk and warmth: If she goes withthe ground floor and out into the car out, she will be seriously damaged." He added that, without adequate milk and fluid, Karli's blood sugar seat of a black Renault Laguna be- levels would be affected, causing debydration and brain damage. Karli weighed 6lb 15oz and was wearing a bospital smock and was wrapped in a blanket. The parents, who were a "very dis-"from the maternity ward to the tressed state" last night have two other children Nicola, 9, and Ben, 4. Yesterday was tanya's 30th hirthday. Det Supt Bright said: "The mother is never ever going to forget this day. What a terrible, terrible day. It's lovely to give birth on your birthday. Terrible to lose it hours later." Sixty polices officers were preparing to spend the night searching the hospital "top to bottom" as well as the grounds. They were examining video footage - evidence that is only available to them because 13 video cameras were installed at the hospital following the inquiry into the the kidnapper but failed to catch obstetrician and clinical director of kidnapping of baby Abbie Humphries in Nottingham.

However, the hospital was auxious to stress that now was not the time to apportion blame.

Sue Jennings, chief executive of the hospital, explained that following the full security review after Abbie's abduction, the bospital had decided against tagging babies, adding: "In this case the tagging wouldn't have made any difference. Measures that were takeo included issuing specific instructions to parents not to let their child go with anyone they did not know. She added that, for a long time, children had not been left unsupervised in the nursery area. Asked if she felt the bospital could have had tighter security, she said: "It's always easy to do more and, until we know precisely what's happened in this case that's all I can say. We will have a future review to make sure that any other loopholes are tied up." Tanya was admitted at 3pm on Thursday. Her pregnancy was full term and she opted for a caesarian

Why steal a baby? page 3

INSIDE TODAY

TAX: do you face a fine? SEE PAGE II

Lies and schmaltz: Mary Braid's fury about

Winnie's 'game show 15/NEWS

ALSO IN YOUR

Investor 90

Take advantage of rates of up to 7.55% gross C.A.R. with our 90 day account. Plus, if the Base Rate rises during 1997, we guarantee to match it. To open an account, just call us, quoting code A556, or pop into your. local branch.

Savings

0800 100 801

ABBEY NATIONAL' Because life's complicated enough.

Lines are open Monday to Friday 9am to Spm and Saturday 9am to 1pm. To assist us in proving our service we may record or manktor telepho me calls. Rates effective from 19.11.97. The minimum investment is £2,000. Until 31.12.97, If the average Base Rate of all UK Clearing Banks is increased, the annual gross interest rate payable will be increased by on less than that increase. 7.55@ gross C.A.R. is payable on balances of £200,000 or over. See leaflet for full conditions. You may be able to register with us to receive interest gross; otherwise it will be paid net of income tax at the prescribed rate. The Compounded Annual Rate (C.A.R.) is the equivalent annual gross rate that would be achieved if interest, which is paid either monthly or quarterly, was credited to the account. Abbey National and the Umbrella Couple symbol are trademarks of Abbey National pic, Abbey House, Baker Street, London WW1 6XL, Dolled Kingdom

Should you recycle this paper? Maybe not

When you've finished with this newspaper, will you, a little smugly, take it to be recycled? Charles Arthur. Science Editor, discovers that some environmentalists now think you would be better to burn it instead.

A growing number of environmentalists who bave carried out detailed economic studies of the costs of recycling - a practice that has an almost religious place in the greener lifestyle - believe it may be environmentally unfricodly.

"The higher you value the environment, the better incineration comes out," according to Matthew Leach, an energy policy analyst at Imperial College's Centre for Environmental Technology. per is rapidly becoming a raw material: in west- International Institute for Environment and Deem Europe more than half of newsprint is velopment yesterday. "There have been scientifrecycled, and the paper disposal business in Europe handles 130 kilograms (286 pounds) per head annually. Now Leach says: burn it - for instance in your fireplace. You don't speed up global warming, since 99 per ceot of virgin paper comes from sustainable forests, not rainforest. And you can use the heat to save electricity. This is not the sort of answer that consumers. who for years have been trained to obediently collect their newspapers and dump them at the local collection site, expect to bear. But it gets worse. Those local collection sites, and the few companies which in this country pulp the papers, are the worst model of recycling you can dream up. Instead, we should have kerbside collection, and recycling (or incineration) at as many locations as possible. Why? Because the fuel used by the lorries transporting it adds more to global warming than the process of making fresh paper. This debate seems to have become fashion-That's a startling thought, given that used pa- able receotly," said Marianne Grieg-gran of the ic papers in the past four years arguing that recycling might not be the best solution." There are some glimmers of reassurance. It is always good to recycle aluminium cans, because so much electricity is needed to extract the metal from its ore, bauxite. Saving electricity means saving fossil fuel. Recycling aluminium "saves about 95 per cent of the energy," said Amelia Craighill, of the environment department at the University of East Anglia. Glass recycling is less clear-cut - but recycling can make significant energy savings. So yes, recycle that wine bottle.

But paper recycling is less simple. Maybe it should be composted on a landfill - where the methane gas produced could be burnt for evergy. Or it should be burnt outright. Or it might be recycled. The environmentalists are still arguing.

The European Commission though seems to have made its mind op already. Its 1994 directive oo waste management insists that by 2001, 50 per ceot of paper waste should be recovered and recycled. Perhaps someone should tell them about

A romantic Christmas? It's as simple as ABC

Already wondering how you are going to survive the festive season? The marriage guidance specialists Relate have compiled a Christmas quiz to see whether your relationship, at least, will last as long as the turkey left-

Cherida Fletcher, manager of the organisation's Wolverhampton branch, which devised the questions, said that couples should use their quiz in place of more traditional Christmas diversions, "to decide whether they need to make that appointment with Relate straight away."

The questions are as follows:

- 1. Did you decide together who was coming to stay at Christmas?
- A. Yes B. No C. Haven't decided 2. What do you usually buy first for Christmas?
- A. Drinks B. Your partner's present C. Other people's presents 3. What do you buy for your partner?

 A. A surprise B. Gift vouchers or money C. You wait for the sales
- 4. Do you remember what your partner bought you last year?
- A.Yes B.No C.You didn't get anything
- 5.Did you have to change it? A. No B. Yes C. It broke before you could use it

6. When was the last time you spent a quiet Christmas night together? A. Can't remember B. When the telly broke C. Never 7. How would you like to be treated at Christmas?

A. Like you're special B. Like a lover C. You want to be left alone to

8. What springs to mind when you think about Christmas?

A. Arguments B. All the work C. Getting drunk 9. Would you love one of those Christmases that everyone else seems

A. Yes B. They're just a myth - aren't they? C. You just want to sleep

10. Do you wish those messages on the late-night radio programmes were for you and...

A. From your partner? B. From your lover? C. What late-night mes-

According to Relate, the answers give "an accurate portrayal of the state of a relationship". Their conclusions are as follows: Mostly As, and you should talk to your partner about what kind of C want. Bs. and you've been disappointed too many times already.

If most of your answers are Cs, you and your partner need to do some serious talking about how to have fun together, "says Ms Fletcher. "Maybe you should consider talking to Relate before it's too late."

PEOPLE

Tracey Emin: Back on Channel 4 days after her last foul-mouthed, drunken performance

Moralists primed as rebel artist goes back on TV arts show on Channel 4 on Tuesday night, conceptual artist Tracey Emin is back on the channel tonight in another discussion programme.

Ms Emin, who appeared on The Future of Painting as drunk as a Clyde welder with the language to match before walking off set, is to appear with the the novelist Will Self, Mr Self, who is bosting the show, is no stranger to controversy himself.

The show is Something of the Night, a pilot latenight discussion programme that will look at the week's events and will discuss whether Britain in the aftermath of the general election and the death of Diana is a more radical, less puritanical, place.

Mr Self did his best to test this thesis himself earlier this year when he was exposed as having smoked heroin on John Major's campaign plane during the election campaign, an incident that ultimately cost him his joh on the Observer.

Just in case the combination of Ms Emin and Mr

Fresh from her successful attempt to liven up a turgid Self is not enough for television moralists the programme plans to air the video of the Prodigy's new single "Smack My Bitch Up". The video features scenes of full frontal nudity and drug-taking and has been banned by other broadcasters. The programme starts at 11pm.

To save the moralists the trouble of complaining about the show, Channel 4 has invited on as a guest Daily Mail columnist Paul Johnson, the man who labelled the channel's former chief executive Michael Grade "Britain's pornographer in chief". Presumably he will be able to object to the channel's output on

The other guests, the novelist Martin Amis, the journalist Nick Cohen and the celebrity therapist Susie rbach will be hard-pressed to get a word in. But Channel 4 is not taking as many risks as at first we might think. The programme was pre-record-

Paul McCann, Media Correspondent

Man, 76, escapes wheelchair drink-drive charge

A drink-driving charge against a war veteran caught licence off me when I haven't got one?" The veterlimit when he was stopped by police outside his home ving licence to use it.

But the case was dropped yesterday after the Crown Prosecution Service decided it was not in the public interest to pursue the charge. Mr Hammond said: "I couldn't believe it when they arrested me - how were they going to take a driving I go for a drink I'll use a cah."

doing 8mph in his hattery-powered wheelchair-style an of the Burma campaign in the Second World War huggy has been dropped. Sam Hammond, 76, was said he had bought the huggy, which is powered by allegedly more than twice over the legal drink-drive two 120-volt batteries, because he did not need a dri-in Pitsmoor, Sheffield, South Yorkshire: -- He added: "I've never had a licence in my life The great-grandfather, who suffers from heart hecause I don't think I would be a competent driproblems and arthritis, was arrested and fitched in a ver. It's all a hit daft really. I was hardly rolling about cell for six hours after the hreath-test proved posi- drunk and being a danger to anybody, certainly not arged with drink-driving last Sentember. at eight miles an hour. I had travelled two miles home from the pub when they stopped me.

"Even if I had bumped someone I was only going 8mph - that's the scooter's top speed - and I'm not sure that they would have felt it. But next time

Letters sold for £90,000

An archive of letters and papers which tell the remarkable story of a Jewish woman, whose struggle to survive the Second World War resulted in her marrying a Nazi, fetched £90,000 at auction yesterday.

The collection charts the suffering of Edith Hahn, a law student in Vienna at the time of the Anschluss. who spent time in two Nazi labour camps. Many of the 250 or so letters sold by Sotheby's in central London are written to two men: Hahn's first and greatest love, "Pepi", a fellow law student Dr Joseph Rosenfeld, and Werner Vetter, a member of the Nazi Party who fell so deeply in love with her that, despite knowing she was a Jew, persuaded her to marry him.

The collection was bought jointly by two private hidders, businessman Dalck Feith and his colleague Drew Lewis, who want to lend the papers to The Holocaust Museum in Washington.

UPDATE

EDUCATION

Funds for further learning dry up

Funds for further-education students are steadily declining, it was disclosed yesterday, as the cost of advertising the Government's policy on unition

In a written answer from the office from the Secretary of State for Edfees exceeded £330,000. ucation and Employment, it was revealed that average funding per full-time student in further education had dropped from £3,080 to £2,860 since tn a separate question, the office was asked how much the Government the 1993-4 academic year. had spent on advertising on commercial radio, television and newspapers in relation to its policy on tuition fees for university students. The reply, from Kim Howells, minister for lifelong learning, states: "The cost for advertising, in relation to the policy on tuition fces for university students, is, for commercial radio, £222,209 and for the national press, ater

Lord

CRIME

Truce fails to stem Ulster violence

A total of 334 people have been charged with terrorist-related and serious public order offences in Northern Ireland this year, it emerged yesterday. The figures were revealed in a written answer from the security minister Adam Ingram to the Ulster Unionist leader David Trimble, Mr Trimhle had asked "how many persons have been charged with offences in connection with paramilitary beatings in 1997".

Many of the offences took place during the current ceasefire, which began in July. Despite this, the office of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Mo Mowlam, has said she is satisfied the ceasefire is genuine,

The previous IRA ceasefire from September 1994 to February 1996 was broken by the Canary Wharf homh, which killed two people.

Letters page

We apologise to readers who received editions yesterday containing the previous day's letters page. This was due to a production error. We would also like to point out that the Bluebird evening in today's magazine is sponsored by Taittinger champagne

CONTENTS

Leading stories	. 3	Despatches - I	ŧ
Home news	4	Environment 1	7
Race hate	5	Saturday story
Home news	6	Leader, letters 2	(
Politics	7	Comment	Z
Beef crisis	8	Ohituaries 2
RAF murder	9	Business 23-2
Money	10	Big picture 2	ĺ
In the courts	12	Sport Time Off, 16-2	1
World News	14	TV & Radio The Ey
		•

TOURIST RATES

Í
Australia (dollars)	2.38	Italy (lira)	2,82)
Austria (schillings)	20.13	Japan (yen)	212.75
Belgium (francs)	59.19	Malta (lira)	0.62
Canada ($)	2.30	Netherlands (guilders)	3.22
Cyprus (pounds)	0.83	Norway (kroner)	11.67
Denmark (kroner)	10.97	Portugal (escudos)	291.]]
France (francs)	9.57	Spain (pesetas)	241.07
Germany (marks)	2.87	Sweden (kroner)	12.65
Greece (drachmei)	453.20	Switzerland (francs)	2.32
Hong Kong ($)	12.48	Turkey (lira)	318, 105
Ireland (punts)	1.10	USA ($)	1.62
			Source: Thomas Cook
		Rates for and	ication purposes only
]

The day started with

ME AT BREAKFAST.

HY MOM RAGGING ON

ZITS

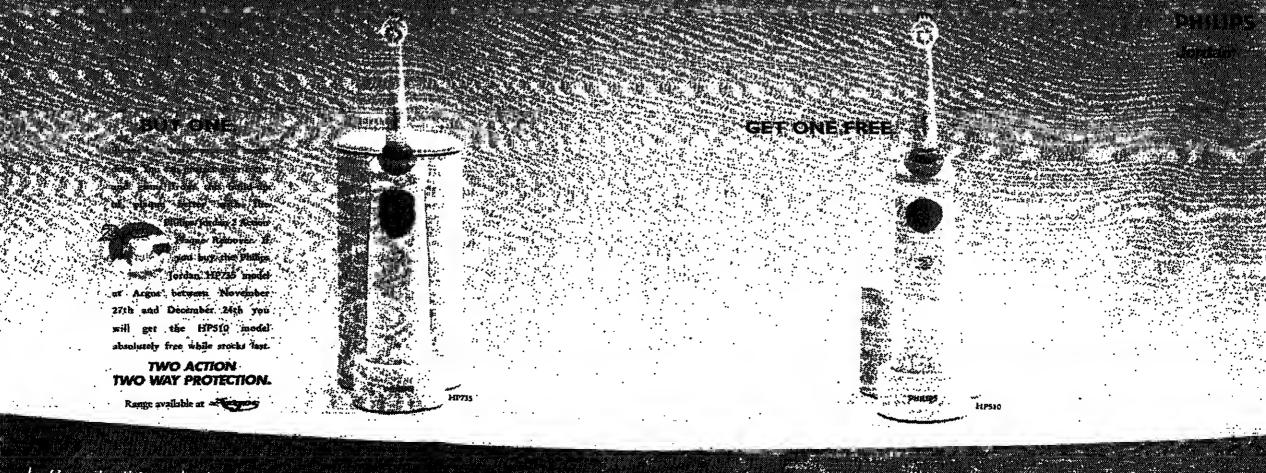

by Jerry Scott & Jim Borgman

WOW! I THOUGHT I WAS

Let's make things better

IN MONDAY'S INDEPENDENT

Deborah Ross interviews Lord Chadlington

The Prodigy: can they still start the fire?

Jenny Agutter: flies back in Peter Pan

What is it that makes a woman want to steal a baby?

HOSPITALS' SECURITY DILEMMA

Hospital authorities had hoped they were winning the battle against baby snatching. But lan Burrell says that vital lessons in security have not been learned.

One might have thought that the hysteria which followed the snatching of Abbie Humphries from a Nottingham hospital three years ago would have led to a radical overhaul of security at matermity wards.

Yet the ease with which a three-hour-old baby was taken from Basildon General Hospital yesterday demonstrated how powerless hospital authorities still are when faced with a determined snatcher. After the Humphries case, the Government issued guidance to NHS hospitals. It proposed tags to identify babies, identity badging for legitimate staff, closed-circuit cameras and controls on access to hospital premises.

But it stopped short of being prescriptive: hospitals were allowed to decide which security measures fitted their cir-

The Basildon hospital has closed-circuit television, staff are issued with badges and internal doors have security locks. But tags can fall off bables' arms, security cameras cannot cover every corner of hospital corridors and identity badges can be forged. Other hospitals have gone further. St Thomas's, in London, has guards outside maternity wards checking ID cards and signing visitors in and even safe in a maternity ward. She was two days old when her father unwittingly handed her to a baby-snatcher posing as a health visitor at St Thomas's. When her mother, Dawn, 20, appeared on television weeping and shaking, thousands of viewers wrote or phoned in offering

It was a fortnight before the nurse, was spotted in the after admitting the offence.

Reunited: Dawn Griffiths with baby Alexandra, who was snatched from St Thomas's Hospital in January 1990 Photograph: David Rose

Cotswold village of Burford. She had taken Alexandra in an attempt to prevent her married lover dumping her. Ms Griffiths was sent for It was the case of Alexandra treatment in a mental hospital Griffiths seven years ago which and was released five months stunned the nation into the re- later. Shocking though it was, alisation that babies were not the incident was allowed to fade into history as a one-off action by a disturbed woman.

It was not until four years later, when five-hour-old Abbie Humphries was snatched from the Queen Elizabeth Medical Centre, Nottingham, that memories of Alexandra came flooding back. The baby was taken by Julie Kelley, 24, who lived near the Humphries. She spent six kidnapper. Janet Griffiths, a weeks in a psychiatric hospital

Over 15 days, while Abhie's snatches by desperate, psycho-rents, Karen and Roger, ap-logically disturbed women. "If parents, Karen and Roger, appealed for their baby's return, calls were made for security measures in maternity wards.

Since then some hospitals have introduced haby-tagging systems and closed-circuit television. But despite the notoriety of these two cases, baby-snatching is a long-standing problem in this country.

The Portia Trust, which tries to help counsel women driven to snatch babies, was set up in 1970. Ken Norman, the trust's chairman, said that at one time security would not stop baby- to three years in prison.

you made hospitals into fortresses, babies would be taken from prams in the street."

Within nine months of Ab-Lydia Owens was snatched by a bogus visitor from Glan Clwyd Hospital in Bodelwyddan, Wales. The baby was missing for 20 hours. By the time the culprit, Susan Brooke, 39, a grandmother, appeared in court in June 1995, public sympathy for baby-snatching women had evaporated. Whereas previous it was dealing with up to 40 cas- offenders escaped with relaes a year, although the rate has tively light sentences Brooke was branded cruel and wicked Mr Norman said improving by the judge who sentenced her

THE ABDUCTOR'S PROFILE

The typical baby thief will go 'window shopping' in local hospitals to look for the weakest security, Jeremy Lourance, Health Editor, looks at why women become so desperate that they snatch babies from hospitals.

Hospitals can deter abductors but they cannot keep them out altogether. John Rabun, of the US National Centre for Missing and Exploited Children, who has visited Britain to advise hospital managers on security, said that although a determined abductor would evade any security cordon, the task was to make it as difficult as possible.

The typical abductor was a woman who might have miscarried and appeared pregnant. She was often not living with her partner and had planned the baby "to get him back". When she miscarried she went in search of another baby. . British experts stressed that the cases were extremely rare. Anthony Black, former head of the psychology unit at Broadmoor hospital, said the abdactors, who were always women, tended to be people who had been let down, usually by a man, or suffered a set-back such as a miscarriage or a failure to conceive.

The cases tend to figure around the break-up of a relationship or a loss of some kind. The woman may even be deluded that she has a baby. She may go through a phantom pregnancy. Some women pad themselves out to please a partner."

He said the abductors tended to be sensitive, vulnerable people who had had nnhappy experiences which involved being let down or deserted.

"Ordinary people will cope with a lot of distress. They grin and bear it or try for adoption or for infertility treatment, depending on their circumstances. These women invariably turn out to have had a chequered life history and the break-up or the miscarriage is the latest in a succession of ouslaughts, insults and mishaps."

The upside was that because the babies were wanted they tended to be well looked after. "They treat them as their own. If a couple had snatched the baby one would worry that the motive was a hit more ma-

Alice Lovell, psychologist at South Bank University, London, and an expert on the effects of miscarriage, said that the idea that women who lost a baby might think of taking someone else's was a myth. "These women want their own baby. There is no evidence that miscarriage leads to abduction. To compound the loss these women suffer by assuming they might resort to abduction is very hurtful."

In the US, 170 infants have been abducted since 1983, nine so far this year. Ten are still missing. Cathy Nahirny, of the US Center for Missing and Exploited Children said yesterday: "The recovery rate is very good. The babies are very rarely harmed. The women who take them raise them as their own.'

She said when a new born baby was taken it was possible the woman would have faked a pregnancy keeping her partner. family and friends in the dark.

She said although there was no criminal intent they lived their lives by lying and deceit. They are incredibly convincing con-

In one case in the US, a woman whose marriage to a soldier was going through a rocky patch told him she was pregnant. She then convinced him that there was a tradition in her family going back generations that the pregnant couple did not have sex or sleep together during the pregnancy. Her husband, anxious not to upset her, accepted

During her "pregnancy" she stuffed padding in her clothes and when she was "due" and her husband was away for a few days, she applied for a babysitting position

Ruin for lawyer who lied to save police boyfriend from drink-drive charge

A disgraced solicitor wept at the Old Bailey yesterday as she was iailed for three months for perverting the course of justice to protect her policeman boyfriend from a drink-drive charge. Jojo Moyes reports

Penelope Schofield wrecked her career in a "moment of madness" when she claimed she was behind the wheel of the drunken detective's car when he drove home after a CID Christmas party. But she had left earlier by taxi, after having a row with Detective Constable Nigel Phillips because he was canoodling with another woman at the party.

The lawyer, from Hampshire, was told by the Recorder of London, Sir Lawrence Verney: "I have to bear in mind not only your personal position, but also the concern of the public that a practising solicitor had on this occasion practised deception and deception against the public justice."

Phillips, 31, also from

Schofield: 'Moment of madness' Photograph: James Horton

drink-drive limit when he left the party on 6 December last year. On his way to the cottage he shared with Schofield he hit a kerb, had a puncture and drove to the police station where he was based. There he was breathalysed and arrested.

But after emotional calls from the station. Schofield rang to say she had driven most of the way home. Phillips was jailed for 16 months for perverting the course of justice and for driving while three times

Hampshire, was well over the over the limit. The judge said the couple's behaviour had "rumed two promising careers in which each of you had given good service to the public over a long period. That those who offend are deeply involved in the process of public justice makes it even more serious."

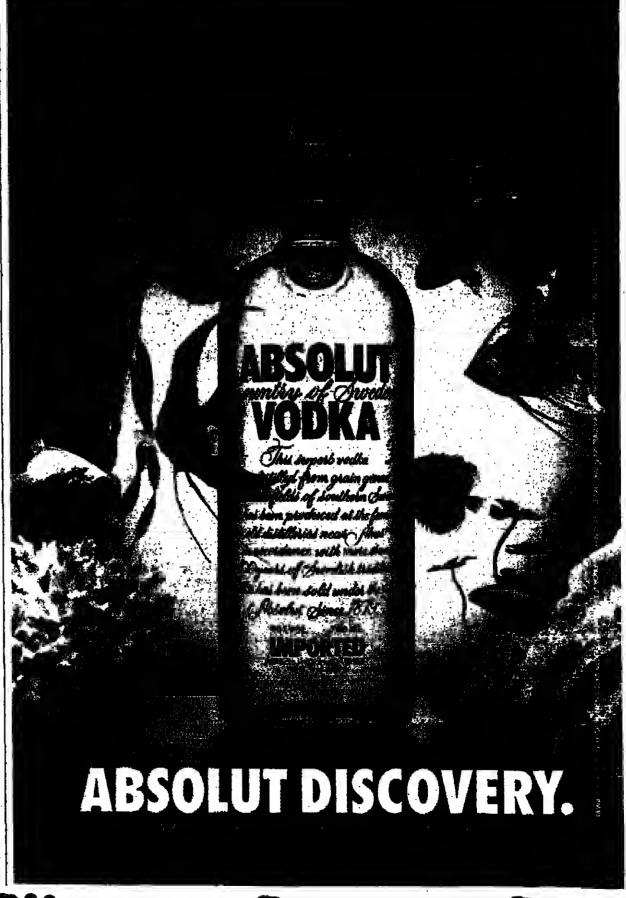

Phillips was near to tears as be stood to one side to allow the sobbing Schofield, 35, to be taken to the cells. He had involved the woman he loved in a "desperate attempt to keep the jobhe loved", said his counsel,

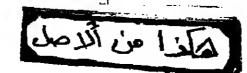

Michael Egan. Phillips's shame over ruining their lives led him to try to commit suicide last March, the court was told.

Mr Egan said the trial had brought home to Phillips "the full enormity and gravity" of his conduct. "He has destroyed a promising career. He has destroyed the relationship with the woman he sincerely loved."

Richard Lissack QC, defending Schofield, said it was hard to think of a greater shame for someone in the legal profession. As a lawyer she was confident, successful and highly regarded. But as a woman she was vulnerable, under confident and was always blaming herself as the result of an earlier, 13-year physically abusive relationship with an-

When Schofield confessed to police, she said: "In a moment of madness, when I agreed to say that I had driven, I lost everything ... I did it for Nigel, out of stupidity, without thinking of the consequences." Now she had "lost her name, position in the community and career which is, or was, her life. She almost certainly will be struck off by the Law Society, Mr Lissack told the court.

Police superintendents yesterday called for research into the effects of laser pens, amid growing concern about their use.

At a meeting of the national executive of the Police Superintendents' Association in London, half the forces said they had received reports of pens being used to temporarily blind or distract people.

The association vice-chairman, Peter Gammon, said not enough was known about their ability to cause damage or distress to people.

"The issue is: are they being used by people to inflict distress or harm on other people? ... We think there should be a definitive examination of laser pens. I think there are sufficient laws to deal with someone who uses a laser pen. The issue is whether they should be freely available." Incidents reported include attasks on police officers, drivers, racehorses and the footballer Vinnie Jones.

Businessman puts a high price on walking invited to join an association offering healthier living and charitable goals. But it is likely to be the most expensive organisation of its type in Britain. As Stephen Goodwin discovers, serious questions need to be asked about the Serious Walkers Association.

Advertisements have been planned for outdoor magazines urging those who enjoy the beauty and freedom of the countryside" to join the Serious Walkers Association. The title sounds like a leg-pull, conjuring up images of long-faced.

SOFTWARE & KEYBOARD

SME 135 £149.51

:49.99

along and worrying about the state of the hedgerows. But it is not.

The advertisements were placed on behalf of the SWA whose founder, Stephen Drury, a 44-year-old husinessman living in Claverdon. Warwickshire, has a history of VAT fraud and bankruptcy. His aim is for the SWA to be a national body with 60,000 members by

Even before an SWA boot has taken its first public step, the association is declaring: "Every year we donate funds to many major charities". Readers are offered the prospect of "healthier living through regular walking", challenge walks and support with planning a walk anywhere in the countryside.

No membership fee is mentioned in the advertisement but valkers who request further information may be in for a shock. Individual membership is provisionally set at £36 and life membership at £540. Even the voung persons rate (for 16- to 21-year-olds) could be £18.

By comparison, full membership of the Ramhlers' Association, a charity, costs £16 a year and for local walking groups subscriptions can be as low as 50p. One club official said Mr Drury may believe that walkers are an "untapped market". If they could spend £200 on a waterproof jacket why not .

£36 to join the SWA? According to a draft business plan of August 1997, by the end of 2002 the SWA wants to be grossing £2m a year and raising a further flm a year for "good Walkers are about to be cagouled figures marching "bold", Mr Drury said. The bers a lot more than existing clubs and would not be joining the access campaign.

We are not about taking money off people for no return," he told The Independent. "We are in the husiness of letting people join an alternative to the Ramblers' which is much better organised and dedicated to good causes." Having founded the SWA, he said he would he promoting the charitable side. "I will be having nothing to do with the money," he insisted. Start-up money for the association was coming from a very well-heeled henefactor".

Listing his own accomplishments as a walker, Mr Drury said there was no fitter 44year-old. He had walked the Pennine Way, Land's End to John o' Groats, and across 1,000 miles of America.

But Mr Drury is also familiar with the courts. He served a prison sentence this year for threatening behaviour towards a woman after their relationship ended, and in 1995 was sentenced to three months in jail for a £46,000 VAT fraud. He was ordered to pay the £7,000 costs of the VAT case and to repay the sum defrauded.

A civil action is being brought against Mr Drury for rent arrears on his former home at Knowle, near Solihull. He has heen granted legal aid.

Two magazines were planning to publish the SWA advertisement in January issues - The Great Outdoors and Country Walking, but TGO confirmed it had withheld the advertisement causes". The objectives were to make "further inquiries".

Jailed peer fails to have term reduced after assault

Lord Brocket, the disgraced peer, failed yesterday in a bid to have his five-year sentence for a £4.2m insurance fraud reduced when three judges dismissed his appeal.

The Vice President of the Court of Appeal, Lord Justice Rose, said the sentence was "not out of line" with other fraud jail terms and he could not intervene over disputes between prisoners in fail as there were other remedies available The appeal had been bailed as a test case over whether jail terms should be reduced for inmates assaulted in prison. The Court of Appeal last month granted him leave to appeal after hearing the peer was knifed and violently assaulted

Lord Brocket, 45, a sporting friend of the Prince of Wales. has been in jail for 20 months and now faces a release date in August next year at the earliest.

Steven Barker, his solicitor, said after the hearing on his way to the cells to visit the peer: "We are very disappointed. Lord Brocket had his hopes up high."

Asked if Lord Brocket would apply for compassionate early release he said: "It is too early to say what will happen." Lord Brocket was jailed at Luton Crown Court in February last year after admitting that he arranged to have four classic Italian sports cars "stolen" in a bogus raid on the family home. Brocket Hall, his 5,000 acre estate in Hertfordshire.

Death gully revisited

A former soldier is returning to the scene of an expedition which came close to a disaster in which five of his colleagues nearly died. Rich Mayfield will set off in a 15-strong team next March on a new expedition to Low's Gully in the jungles of Borneo.

Their target is to complete the first ever descent of the gully – also known as the Place of the Dead – a 10-mile stretch of granite cliffs, massive waterfalls and thick vegetation.

In 1994, a 10-man expedition led by Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Neill should have taken 10 days on an army exercise in the area, but two officers and three soldiers were not plucked from the guily until almost a month after they set off. They were on the brink of starvation. Their five colleagues had ing "over ambitious" and criticised decisions made by his deputy. Major Ron Foster. No disciplinary was taken against them. Mr Mayfield, 29, said he was optimistic the 1998 team would be more successful than the previous expedition. Asked why he wanted to return to Low's Gully, he said: "I don't like fail-ian Extra Virgin Olive Oil off its shelves after it was revealed it contained oil from Greek and Spanish olives.

ian olives, the store accepted that the label gave the wrong impression about its contents. The BBC programme Weekend Watchdog said the error showed up during a taste test with a chef for the show which was transmitted last night. Sainsbury said: "We can assure customers that a full and thorough review has been undertaken of all products within the olive oil range and no other products are affected." Vasectomy claim fails

ing for twins born after the husband's vasectomy yesterday lost their High Court action for damages against the doctor who carried out the operation. Deputy Judge Mark Strachan OC, who heard that Andrew and Louise Fullcylove already had three children when Mr Fulleylove was referred by the family planning clinic to Dr Michael Duggan in 1991, said it was a sad case, but ruled that Dr Duggan, from Stevenage

Electrolus, 1856 Out Olinder
1200 wats power
Complete with bolds normally $29.99 . SAVE $30 £69.99

Paramonic MCE486 Upryh 1000 was porer/Autorian carpet type adusta: was CS4.29 privously C114 29... SAVE (2.5 e89.66

When $100 are your and Waster 130 rets; power Time how uper each system ass $199.99
New Time AND CARTER
Whomatheurs AND CARTER
Checker Time AND CARTER

On-beard looks Swe (100 : 159.99

Due Cyclore Endrodoy SCR 100 wasts power 100 as the cyclore Endrodoy SCR 100 wasts power 100 as the cyclore Cyclore System 100 as the cyclore Cyclore System 100 as the cyclor

SAVE 50% ON MICROWAVES UP TO 40 IN STORE REE HOME GUIDE SOOK PROC.

750 sets 60 06 out capacity5 power levels 169.99

0.6 cult rapecty SMEIDO (99.50

1112 Person Fouch Control
93 out reament was CC9.99
previously (139.9) CC9.99

Panesonic Neador Brown Touch Cyard wit Cei, 900 with EC 08 cut capably was $199.90. SAFE 40 £159.00 PRICE HOLDES ON CREMATOLA

SANTYO 9409505 Sher Fouch Control Combination, 900 waits EC 1 0 cull capacity, was $259.99

2349 (9 SAE(100 : 249.99

Vertures coccas 3 Dec Muliciay CO Min

ATULA NSK-SZ 3 Dec Malphy CO Min 25 welts RMS power output

SHARP RESON Touch Control 800 salts EC

SAVE RE130 ON DISHWASHERS

UP TO 20 IN STORE

.. swed30 $269.98

ZAMISS (1990) 12 place settings Approximates 4 programmes save £30 £299.99

SAVESE200 ON COOKING

UP TO 120 IN STORE

BUILT-IN COOKING

200 139.99 SAVE 100 £ 139.99

FREE STANDING COOKERS

Gass dror was 217: 99 persous, 218949 5279 99 Swed 10 2 169 49 5279 99

Carrier from County over 100 from 100 f

Cannon C. Double Oven 101836

...svet150 £799.se

OUR PRICES CANNOT BE BEATEN

product from us, then within 14 days find the same after on sale locally at 11 lower price, we'll willingly relund the difference,

PLUS 10% OF THAT DIFFERENCE Ask in stone for full details.

The Comet Price Promise guarantees that if you buy any

FOS 160 years Becom Single Oven Glass dow/Marding nob assiste

German Gel 501Gas 500mm webb escaped in two separate groups days earlier. An army board of inquiry later accused L1 Col Neill of being. When I fail I go away, become more capable and try again. Olive oil fails taste test The Sainsbury supermarket chain is pulling hottles of Ital-Although blended in Italy, and made up mostly of Ital-

A couple whose marriage collapsed under the strain of car-

MOST STORES OPEN SUNDAY AND NOW 9AM UNTIL 8PM WEEKDAYS

Check the Comet Price Index for the latest Christmas gift ideas highly recommended products.

Experts from leading independent magazines test and review our range. Products displayed with

■ denote award winning products and □ denote

Hertfordshire, had properly carried out the operation.

IT'S

The

COMIC RE

Christmas

Website

Al Sharpton: 'This is a vendetta against those who challenged a family not used to being questioned'

Echoes of 'Bonfire of the Vanities' in court fury

The dilapidated courtroom in Poughkeepsie, upstate New York, has never seen a case like it – yelling lawyers, spectators cursing "white justice" and a judge struggling to gain control. It verges on comedy, but, as David Usbome saw from the gallery, it cuts to the heart of America's black-white divide.

The Pagones defamation trial under way in Poughkeepsie, two hours north of New York City, is emerging as the Christmas pantonime to beat all others. The story is about a black woman named Tawana Brawley and about truth. Top of the hill: the Rev Al Sharpton.

There is scant joy in it, however. Its playing-out in this creaking chamber of the State Supreme Court is resurrecting one of the country's darkest and, arguably, most disgraceful episodes of racial confrontation.

For many blacks, it is a chance to advertise what they know about American justice: that, for them, it does not exist. For as many whites, it promises final reckoning for Mr Sharpton, the New York City street-preacher and politician widely thought to have been an inspiration for the scurrilous figure of Rev Reggie Bacon in Tom Wolfe's late-80s novel The Bonfire of the Vanities.

It began 10 years ago, on 28 November 1987, when Tawana Brawley, then 15 years old, was found in a dustoin liner by the side of the road near here, her hair matted with faeces and racial slurs scrawled on her body. She claimed she had been kidnapped by six white men, and raped and sodomised.

In March 1988, Mr Sharpton and two black lawyers, Alton Maddox and Vernon Mason, went before the press to name the man they said was the leader of the gang. He was Steven Pagones, a white assistant district attorney of this county and the son of a local judge. Other prominent blacks, including the comedian Bill Cosby and former world boxing champion Mike Tyson, associated themselves with campaign.

Challenged by sceptical reporters on that day to provide some proof, Mr Sharpton laid down the gauntlet to Mr Pagones: "If we are lying, then sue us ... sue us – sue us. Sue us right now!"

Tawana Brawley: Crowd cheered when she insisted her story was true

Ten years on, that is what Mr Pagones is doing. With a defamation lawsuit asking for damages totalling $395m (£243m), Mr Pagones, who is now 36, is setting out to prove that the trio maliciously set out

The battle lines are already drawn. The three defendants will contend that the day before their press conference, Ms Brawley had seen a photograph of Mr Pagones in a Poughkeepsie newspaper and identified him to them. They decided to take action, they will argue, because they believed a white-man cover-up was being perpetrated to protect Mr Pagones from prosecution.

Mr Pagones and his lawyer, William Stanton, will try to show that the three made no effort to seek corroboration of her claim and, therefore, that they acted in reckless pursuit of their own self-aggrandisement. An associate of Mr Sharpton later said the minister had told his colleagues that he had taken on the case to make himself the "biggest nigger in New York".

Mr Stanton faces a difficult challenge. However, he has some powerful ammunition. A report from a grand jury empanelled in 1988 to investigate the claims concludes that Ms Brawley was guilty of perpetrating a hoax and that Mr Pagones was innocent. Indeed, there was never a trial, because no formal charges were filed.

Reminding the jury this week of Mr Sharpton's challenge to Mr Pagones to sue.

Mr Stanton declared in his opening argument: "Well, here we are. You're going to decide, we called their bluff. The Brawleys hatehed this story. These defendants were the screenwriters."

As if to ensure that passions were inflamed to the maximum. Ms Brawley herself broke 10 years of silence about the case by appearing before 600 supporters, almost all hlack, in a Brooklyn ehurch last Tuesday. To loud cheers and chanting, she stuck by her story, proclaiming: "I'm not a liar, I'm nnt crazy." So far, she has never testified to it on the Bible. Whether she will appear during these proceedings is one of their greatest elements of suspense.

Judge Barrett Hickman, meanwhile, must keep the trial on the rails. Sharpton supporters arrive daily by bus from the city and are not watching quietly. Yells of "white justice" shook the court when Judge Hickman revealed he had a letter showing Mr Sharpton and the two lawyers had been invited to testify before the grand jury. They never did. As Judge Hickman stalked from the court, the defence lawyers, enraged ahout the letter. screamed after him, "Judge! Judge!"

A finding for Mr Pagones could spell disaster for Mr Sharpton. He has toned down his rhetoric and is trying to enter the political mainstream. Last month, he won a respectable showing in the New York mayoral race and next year he is expected to run for Congress. Talking to The Independent, he refused point blank to express regret for his words 10 years ago, or back down from his original claims. "This is a vendetta against those of us who had the audacity to challenge a family that is not used to being questioned," he insisted calmly.

Pushed further on what might have motivated Mr Pagones to reopen the wounds that cut so deeply into both the black and white communities, Mr Sharpton declined speculation: "I get sued when I speak in America. I get sued when I think in America. Please, please don't make me think,"

IT'S BIG, IT'S RED, IT'S RUDE (in parts) ... IT'S ON-LINE!

(1st - 31st December 1997)

See you there @

www.comicrelief.btwebworld.com

ST$

A mobile phone doesn't make a good present. Unless it's in a package. All inclusive 18 month package £149.99. Up to 18 months Time rental normally £315. • Connection to the Cellnet Occasional Caller Plus Tariff. · Alcatel One Touch 3_{DEF} The ideal way to give a mobile phone is in our all inclusive package. One with all the important features. Not just a handset, battery and recharger, but also the connection charge and the line rental. That way the person you give it to doesn't end up paying more for their present than you did. At a single price of £149.99, we will provide you with everything you need to make sure your loved ones keep speaking to you over the next eighteen months. And you'll even be giving them up to £5 of inclusive calls each month to do just that. What's more, the Alcatel 'One Touch Easy' handset has lots of clever features # and standard AA alkaline batteries can be used as a convenient backup. Make sure the only surprises you give this Christmas are pleasant ones. For further details and to order call 0800 216 613 between 8.30am - 8pm Monday to Friday and 9am - 4pm at weekends. quoting the reference number below. Centre

كذا من ألاصل

Nuclear waste timebomb threatens future generations

Low-level radioactive nuclear waste is seeping into the Welsh water supply. But is it dangerous? Inn Burrell hears the warnings from nuclear physicists and the reassurances from the industry.

Frank Barnaby has spent a lifetime studying both military and civilian nuclear projects all around the world, and right now he has special concerns for the people of Cardiff.

The nuclear physicist and former director of SIPRL the famous international peace institute in Sweden, believes local people may be at risk of pass-nons to future generations because their water supply contains tiny traces of the radioactive material, Trinum.

The radionuclide is used by local company Nycomed Amersham in the manufacture of equipment used by drug companies to develop new products and by medical researchers for studying the activity of cells.

There is some indication now that Tritium can induce genomic instability. In other words, the radiation can damage the chromosome but the damage may not show up," said Professor Barnaby.

"It now appears that the damage can come in the second, third or even fourth generations." The damage to cells could lead to cancer and other conditions, including Alzheimer's and motor neurone disease. Environmentalists have dubbed Cardiff the Tritum capital of Trevor Jones, a Cardiffhased researcher in radioactive isotopes and radiation, said: "Because the energy level of Tritium is so low it is very difficult to measure. In the US it has taken two generations before the effects of Tritium have manifested themselves in cancers or central nervous disorders."

The epidemiologist Professor Alice Stewart, from Birmingham University, is also concerned, after making a study on the long-term health effects of those exposed to the Hiroshima bomb. She said that her latest research, to be published next year, will show that the dangers from low-level ionising radiation are 10 times greater than previously thought. The scien-rists were all present at a conference in Cardiff yesterday called to discuss possible dangers to the local population from lowlevel radiation. The conference was called after it was revealed that Amersham made an application to store 285 drums of radioactive waste on the site.

The company said yesterday that the waste was merely the standard laboratory equipment worn and used by scientists when handling minute quantities of the radionuclides Tritium and Carbon 14.

Spokesman Alan Huw Smith said Tritium was stored in steel jars within steel containers. Although, as a hydrogen, tiny amounts of tritium escaped into the air, the company operated well within agreed safety levels.

ison of hope: A homeless man in Kensington, west London, who may be able to find shelter in temporary accommodation which has been arranged by the homeles charity, Shelter, over the Christmas period Photograph: Andrew Buurman

All stores open 8.30am until late today.

(Check with your local store for Sunday opening times.)

Home

FURNITURE & FURNISHINGS

- * All Furniture
- ★ All Beds
- * All Carpets and Rugs
- * All Cushions
- * All Curtains

ELECTRICALS

- * All TV Video and Hi-fi
- * All Large and Small Electrical Appliances

HOMEWARES

- * All Cookware
- * All China[#] Glass and Table Linens
- * All Casual Dining
- * All Cutlery and Silverware
- * All Lighting
- Most Towels and Bed Linens

hristmas

- * All Trees, Crackers and Boxed
- Decorations
- * All Adult Games
- * All Toiletries

FASHION ACCESSORIES

- * All Bags, Scarves, Jewellery, Gloves, Hats and Belts
- * All Hairdressing Services

... and on Fragrance

Spend £25 on women's or men's fragrance and receive a £5 voucher towards your next fragrance or cosmetic purchase of £25 or over.

Fashion

WOMENSWEAR

- * All Lingerie
- * All Coats
- * AII Plus Collections
- * All Bridalwear
- Most Eveningwear
- Most Knitwear
- Most Suits & Separates
- Most Designer Jeans
- Most Shoes

MENSWEAR

- * All Coats*
- * All Gifts & Accessories
- Most Suits & Jackets
- Most Formal Shirts & Ties
- Most Knitwear
- Most Designer Jeans
- Most Shoes

ALL CHILDRENSWEAR

HOUSE OF FRASER

ARMY & NAVY - DAVID EVANS - DICKINS & JONES - BINNS - BARKERS - DH EVANS - HOWELLS - JOLLYS - ARNOTTS - CAVENDISH HOUSE HOUSE OF FRASER · FRASERS · DINGLES · KENDALS · RACKHAMS · HAMMONDS "Excludes Crombie, "Excludes Hermes in Frasers Glasgow, "Excludes Bang & Olussen." "Excludes Lladro.

This discount is not available in conjunction with any other offer or reduction. Certain merchandise is not available in all stores.

BBC banks on a comic Christmas

Comedy heads the festive fare cludes an adaptation of Wilkie in BBC TV's £42m Christmas season, with a "triple whammy" of special episodes of One Foot In The Grave, Men Behaving Badly and They Think It's All Over one after each other.

Other Christmas Day treats unveiled today are the Hollywood films The Flintstones, starring John Goodman, and The Mask. starring Jim Carrey.

Boxing Day brings The Vicar Of Dibley and Before They Were Famous II, while Teletubbyland takes on a festive air for five weekday episodes.

The ubiquitous Spice Girls pop up twice on BBC1 over the Christmas season - once on Live and kicking and again as hosts of Top Of The Pops. Lily Savage, Mrs Merton, Shirley Bassey and Bette Midler are among the stars featured in programmes over the period.

Peter Salmon, controller of resistible line-up of comedy and entertainment.

Court defeat for Zito killer

The schizophrenic killer of the musician Jonathan Zito was yesterday barred by the Court of Appeal from bringing a damages action against a London health authority over its alleged failure to care for him. Three judges allowed an appeal by Camden and Islington health authority against a High Court decision that Christopher Clunis was entitled to sue.

The ruling also blocks a damages action brought by Zito's widow, Jayne, against Clunis with a view to his including her compensation in his claim against the authority. Lawyers for Clunis may still petition the law lords for leave to appeal against the decision. Clunis was detained indefinitely in Rampton hospital in 1993 after admitting stabbing Zito to death at Finsbury Park Tube station. Lord Justice Beldam, sitting with Lord Justice Potter and Mrs Justice Bracewell, held that it would not be fair or reasonable to hold the authority liable to Clunis for the consequences of his crime.

The Woman In White, as well as visits to Ballykissangel and East-Madame Butterfly is BBC2's Christmas Day opera offering

Collins' Victorian ghost story and the actor Simon Callow once again becomes Charles Dickens in A Christmas Dickens. Modern Times' "The Shrine" explores the public pilgrimage to Kensington Palace in the wake of Diana, Princess of Wales's death and Arena pays tribute to the banana and the The BBC traditionally triumphs in the Christmas ratings as il pumps resources into a period when large audiences are available but advertising pickings are slim. Last year's Only Fools And Horses trilogy won recordbreaking audiences.

But there is one empty place BBC1, said: "BBC1 has an ir- at this year's Christmas feast no new Wallace and Gromit adventure, as the animator Nick But Christmas drama in- Park explores new projects.

Inquest on gas death teenager

An inquest opened yesterday on a church-going leenager who had just won a role in an anti-drugs play and who is believed to have died after sniffing lighter gas.

Chantelle Bleau, 16, collapsed at a friend's house on Monday after sniffing the gas and died in hospital. She had just won a role in a play, Deadly Deals, which has been on tour at schools in her home city of Bradford, west Yorkshire. She and her parents, Richard and Pat Bleau, were members of the Abundant Life Church, where she sang in the choir and helped in the crèche.

The inquest was opened and adjourned vesterday. Mrs Bleau told a local pa-pet that she and her husband were told Chantelle had fallen and bumped her head at friend's house.

She arrived at the hospital as staff were trying to revive Chantelle. Neither she nor her husband knew that Chantelle experimented with Special needs pupils get £11 m boost for access to schools

The Government yesterday announced a boost of £11m to help mainstream schools become more accessible to special needs children. Estelle Morris, the schools minister, told MPs that the almost three-fold increase on the £4m set aside by the previous administration for the Schools Access Ininiative was the most that had ever been spent on the initiative in any year.

The initiative is part of the Government's overall commitment to improving special needs education, which is the subject of a consultative Green Paper, entitled Excellence for All annnuncing a significant ex-schools".

pansion in the School Access Initiative, to help mainstream schools become more accessible to children with disabilities. We are honouring that commitment. We inherited funding for this initiative running at £4m a year.

That sum would be increased to film next year - "the most that has ever been spent on the initiative in any year.

She said all mainstream schools would be eligible for support under the initiative. which is designed to increase physical access to mainstream Children. Ms Morris said: "In as "an important part of our schools and which she described our Green Paper ... the Gov- programme to help disabled ernment committed itself to children attend mainstream

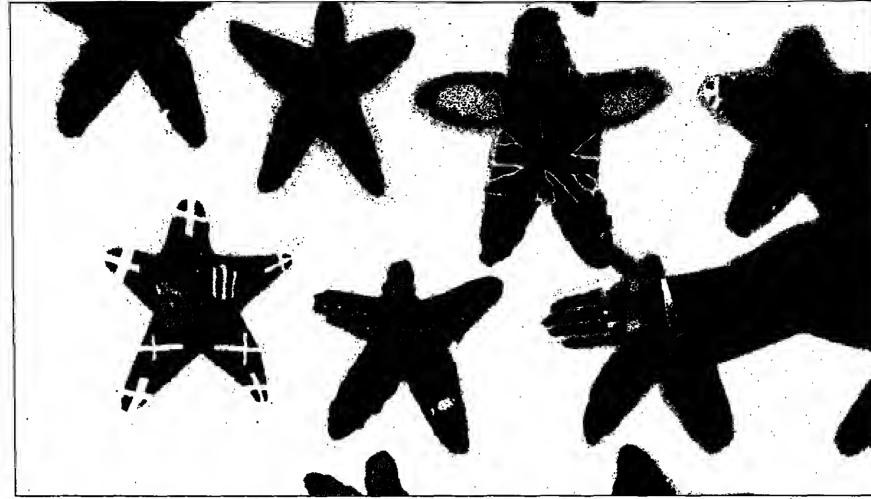

Blair points to a new image for EU presidency

Tony Blair yesterday opened festivities for Britain's forthcoming Presidency of the European Union, unveiling a spanking new logo for the event and vowing to find a European 'Third Way' to the sunlit economic uplands. Rupert Cornwell went along to watch the fun at Waterloo Station.

Hand it to New Labour: they're oot ones for the subtle approach. At exactly 11.20am in the modern and dynamic setting of the Channel Tunnel rail terminal, a modern and dynamic Eurostar express glided in to Platform 24, and a modern and dynamic Prime Mioister launched Britain's modern and dynamic stewardship of the EU for the first six months of 1998.

True, the specially chartered train had come only from Clapham Junction, not Brussels. for the occasion. But it was decked out in the new logo of 15 different stars, designed and painted by children from each EU member country, and whose image Downing Street and the Foreign Office had been guarding beforehand as tightly as the Trident missile leunch codes, And like everything else yesterday, the logo was on message.

The children who produced

Hands on approach: Tony Blair pointing to the new star logo designed and painted by children from the IS member states of the EU that works together as a team. with most set-piece Euro- a test for the Government's ortries retain their distinctive with pious generalities. The identities as the children do in British presidency was a test of said, "And we want a Europe the practical benefit of all." As (and - he might have added - over the six months to 30 June). cessful launch of the single cur-A Europe in which our coun- occasions, the air was thick ganisational skills, given the 50 and probably future, he railed ministerial and summit meetings, 150 gatherings of senior the logo, but work together to British leadership and Europe's EU officials, and 1,500 expert icy. Dutifully, Mr Blair negotiations that begin on 31

Like Prime Ministers past rency, in which Britain of course against the "cost and waste" of again, he stressed the importhe Common Agricultural Pol- tance of the EU enlargement tackle common problems for capacity to embrace change working groups it must chair promised to work for a suc- March, and promised new com-will not be taking part. Once mon action on crime, drugs, and the environment. Tory "indecision, vaciliation and, let's face it, anti-Europeanism" were a thing of the past, he vowed. Most striking perhaps was Way" for Europe, pitched between outmoded state interveotion and unrestraioed laissez-faire capitalism. It would depend on "education not regulation", and on open markets rather than protectionism. The crucial tests would come over completion of the single market, and reform of Europe's over-rigid labour

But Mr Blair will only put flesh on these bones in January. with a speech detailing Britain's plans for the presideocy. Yesterday, he devoted scarcely a word to such unpleasantnesses as the row over Britain's exclusion from the single currency inner council, and the ban on beef exports. Britain would be a leader of Europe, he iosisted. But he did not say how it would achieve this while shunning the соттоп ситепсу.

But at least there was that logo, 15 cute little stars that looked like multicoloured starfish, painted by 30 cute little children who were guests at Downing Street yesterday.

It looks harmless enough. certeinly less risky than the logo marking the last British EU presideocy in 1992. That one depicted a lion putting its head into the Euro-flag's circle of stars - only to have it comprehensively bitten off when the pound was driven from the ERM on Black Wedoesday.

This time though, it is Italy which may be miffed. Bang in the middle of the stella Italiana sits not an Olivetti, a Fiat, or a Ferrari - but a pizza.

Labour ministers accused of conducting 'government by review'

Ministers were accused of "government by review" last night as a full list revealed a total of 54 different such exercises launched since I May. A monitoring exercise by the Conservatives, completed yesterday, shows note" of this Government. the extent of the inquiring and investigat-From the comprehensive spending review, taking in all departments, to the small-scale review of silicone breast implants, almost every aspect of government is involved. The Conservatives claim there is a stark contrast between the amount of re-words of the Labour leadership, Andrew Cooper, director of political operations for the Tories, said reviews were a "character-

"It's become a habit," he said, "The Goving which is going on across Whitehall. ernment which talks about hard choices seems to be extremely adept at puoting things into reviews rather than taking decisions. This is a party which had 18 years to prepare for government."

power the control of interest rates had been en in weeks, if oot days," he said. handed to the Bank of England. Since then there had been, among many other initiatives, the Windfall Tax, referenda on devolution for Scotland and Wales, the abolition of the Assisted Places Scheme in independeot schools, a ceasefire in Northern Ireland, a Referendum Bill for London, health actioo zones and a Crime and Disorder Bill.

"It isn't unreasonable after 18 years that A Downing Street spokesman said there a new government should look at whole arhad in fact been plenty of real governing go- eas of policy. Also, some of the big deci-viewing which is going on and the bold ing on. Within days of Labour coming to sions the government has made were tak-

Government reviews:
Comprehensive spending review;
Bureaucratic burden on teachers;
Criteria used in considering licence applications for export of conventional weapons;
The law relating to surrogacy; The law relating to silicone breast implants; Proposed NHS Private Finance Initiative schemes; Breast cancer acreening services; London health services;
Assumement for achievating the millerning.

screening services; London health services; Arrangements for celebrating the milleantum; National Lottery; Film policy; Sport on television Compulsory Competitive Tendering regulations; Transport policy; The roads programme; Buses; Enforcement of rules on welfare of animals exported live to the Continent; Inoculation as a Development Council; International Development policy, Economic regeneration in Wales; Proposals for reform of civil litigation and legal aid;

Private finance machinery. Tax and benefits system; The Post Office; Programme to identify technology opportunities; Effectiveness of export promotion programmes; Steps to strengthen democratic control of public water authorities in Scotland; Scotlish Enterprise Ways in which social rented housing is supported in Scotland; Skye Bridge tolling arrangements; Transport policy in Scotland; Scotlish roads programme:

programme; Code of practice on access to government information; Ministerial accountability, Non-departmental public bodies Child Benefit, Welfare-to-Work task-force; Social Exclusion Unit;

Long-term welfare; Disability benefit: Industrial injuries compensation; Royal Commission on long-term care; Admission charging by national mu Immigration detention policy: The coal industry; Level of Cabinet salaries; Party funding; The handling of the BSE crisis; December Intributions

"Survey undertaken by NOP Merket Research among 1,000 randomly selected bank customers, intergews were conducted by telephone between 20 Nov 1996 and 12 Dec 1993. Enquirest must be aged 18 or over, in order to safeguerd our customers, certain transactions may require written confirmation. All First Direct customers automatically receive an overdraft of $250, First Direct reserves the right to decline to open an account for you. First Direct credit is:sittles are subject to stables. For written details of our services write to First Direct, Freey ost, Leeds LS98 2RF First Direct is a division of Midland Bank plc. Calls may be monitored and/or recorded, LLOYDS Chaque Account details are based on the Cla comprise fees of 29 per month. BARCLAYS Chaque Account dataits are based on the Barclays Bank Account. The costs comprise fees of 15 per month. NAT West Chaque Account details are based on the Current Plus Account. The costs comprise fees of 25 per month, All fees may vary in the future. First Direct variable interest rate for overdrafts of 250 is 12.6% EAR. All information based on authorised overdrafts of 250 for 5 days or more per month and correct at 9 September 1997.

Member HSBC 429 Group

charge Cheque Account customers for everyday banking transactions, even if you're overdrawn. And all nur customers automatically receive an overdraft of £250 - also free of any fees. So compared to other high. street bank accounts you're better off with First Direct from day one. We're a member of the HSBC Group which is one of the largest banking and financial services organisations in the world, and in the course of e year you'll find we offer more cost effective current account banking. And the service we provide means you benefit in many other ways too.

By telephone, 24 hours a day

We provide the ultimate in convenience. You can bank with us at eny time, 365 days (and nights) of the year, from wherever there's e telephone, in your home, office or car. And all UK calls are charged at local rates.

Personal and professional service

Every call is answered by our Banking Representatives. They have all they need at their fingertips to deal with your day-to-day banking needs. And when you require more specialised assistance, such as a loan, they can instantly refer you to someone who can help.

First Direct Card. This allows you to withdraw up to £500 e day from over 12,500 cash machines around the UK, including those of Midland. It also guarantees cheques for £100 and includes the Switch payment facility.

Our service includes a free bill peyment service. Simply call, tell us who to pay, how much and when, and we do it. This means you can pey your bills at the most convenient time without the need to keep having to remember to orgenise it.

A full banking service with more benefits

As well as our Cheque Account we offer saving, borrowing, travel and Insurance services cost effectively by telephone. Take saving; our rates are always competitive, we offer transfers to and from your Cheque Account. So your money is always working hard without the need for you to do the same.

We work hard to maintain the service

The best people to demonstrate the quality of e banking service are its customers - 87% of ours have recommended us to their First Direct, FREEPOST, Leeds LS98 2RF friends and colleagues in the last 12 months.

Transferring your account is straightforward

We appreciate how daunting changing bank accounts can be. So we help you to make it more straightforward. We can save you time by completing the epplication form with you over the phone. and giving you a decision, subject to e couple of further checks, almost immediately. Then we help you to make transferring your salary, direct debits and standing orders as simple as possible too. But first we make it easy (and free) to find out more. Call now on 0800 24 24 24 or complete the coupon.

if you don't enjoy free banking...

Annual current account charges
Lloyds Classic	£96.00
NatWest Current Plus	260.00
Barclays Bank Account	£60.00
First Direct Cheque Account	£0.00

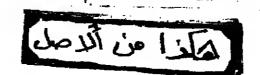

...you're with the wrong bank

Join us today and never be with the wrong bank again

2 0800 24 24 24 Call free anytime quoting reference BB839 or complete the coupon and post to:

ı.	Mr/Mrs/Miss/Ms or Title
U	Surname
	Forename(s)
'	UK Address
Ĺ	BR84
	Postcode Postcode
۱,	Telephone No
1

Blair warns farmers to stay within the law

Farmers were given scant hope of significant extra compensation for BSE last night as ministers warned that blockades of ports must stop. Fran Abrams watched the developments.

Protesting beef farmers must Minister said yesterday. But he failed to signal any new money which might help them over the latest crisis.

We fully understand the discoming presidency of the Eu- emerged. ropean Union.

The taxpayer will pay f1.4bn this year in support of the British beef industry and of course we do everything we can to support them. It is essential, however, that the rule of law must be upheld," he said.

But Mr Blair's official spokesman was underlining the Givernment's reluctance to dig ever-deeper into its pockets.

"The Government is keeping in touch with the issues." he said. "But as the Prime Minister made clear... on Wednesday, there is no European pot of gold which we can go to."

connection with the Common Agriculture Policy, £1.9bn had gone to the beef sectors, of which £1.4bn went oo BSErelated speoding. The warning came as it emerged that Paddy Ashdown, the Liberal Democrat leader, will today urge the Government to tap EU funds to help beef farmers at a meeting in Copenstay within the law, the Prime hagen of the liberal party leaders from around Europe.

In Cardiff yesterday, the Secretary of State for Wales, Ron Davies, held a 90-mioute meeting with farmers' leaders tress and difficulties of farmers who travelled from Holyhead and we have been working to as- and Fishguard to air their grievsist them." Mr Blair said at the ances. Around 200 farmers and launch at Waterloo statioo of their wives crowded the steps of the festivities for Britain's forth- the Welsh Office wheo he

It also became clear that an order would be laid to Parliament to formalise the ban shortly, and that it would come into force within two weeks.

The shadow agriculture minister, Michael Jack, said the government should "come clean" over what it planned to do to help the farmers.

"Playing hard and loose with the anxieties of anxious and desperate farmers is irresponsible government," he said.

"The Government must also make clear where the money will come from to fund the pack-

Every week we check the prices of hundreds of products in the national press to make sure that Dixons Price Check prices can't

24 HOUR ORDER HOTLINE

08000 68 28 68

" The The Space Name of Space Discrete Control over $1000 United credit qualities available on request from Dept FOAK Mark

He added that of the £4bn a rob-Peter-to-pay-Paul exerspent in the UK in 1996-97 in cise. Any compensation package should be to the benefit of the hardest-pressed and not leave other areas out."

Later, a Labour source accused him of "teetering on the edge of condoning violence by strikers".

It hecame clear last night that the options open to the Government on how to compensate farmers were limited. A spokeswoman for the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food said there were no plans to change the over-30 month scheme despite a statement by a minister that he was unhappy with its operation. Jeff Rooker, the agriculture minister, said farmers were getting hundreds of pounds for "clapped out old milkers" which used to be worth "a fiver".

The Maff spokeswoman also indicated that a special payment to hill farmers of £60m last year was unlikely to be repeated at the same level.

If farmers are to be given the mooey they are demanding some have claimed they need almost £Ibn - the only source would be Europe. Maff said £980m was available to Britain uoder a scheme to compensate for the rise in the value of sterling, £340m of which would come from the exchequer. But Europe's contribution would be deducted from payments by

Photograph: Brian Harris

DAIRY FARMS UNDER FIRE:

farms were criticised yesters day in a report commit sioned by the Government It said levels of lameness among dairy cattle were "uni acceptably high" and called for urgent action to end suffering on farms.

Studies showed an average of 55 per cent of cattle were going lame each year and levels were rising.

Some farmers were accused of not taking the problem seriously - leaving cattle in pain and distress even though lameness led to reduced yields.

The report by the Farm Animal Welfare Council, an Independent body of farming experts, blamed intensive farming methods and poor

Too many animals were being housed in tradequate cubicles or forced to stand in slurry, wet straw or were walked along poor tracks causing foot and leg problems.

The report laid before agriculture ministers said: Lameness is almost always a painful condition and it interferes with accountability to interact fully with her environment, especially her social environment, hence it is a major animal welfare issue. There are many farms where lameness is causing unnecessary pain and distress."

Irish union leaders head for Holyhead to stake their case

Irish farmers' leaders travelled It's a simple question of to Holyhead last night to plead for the blockade to end.

Frank Allen, who represents 30,000 dairy farmers, told Welsh farmers they were aiming at the wrong target: "The solution to your problems lies with the UK Government, We will suffer grievously if your action continues much longer."

Mr Allen, president of the Irish Creamery and Milk Supply Association, accused the British Government of failing to appreciate the crisis in farming and make use of EU compensation funds for the industry.

But as Irish companies and the Road Haulage Association threatened to sue the Britain for loss of business, farmers showed no sign of abandoning dom of farmers to protest.

Hodges, said: "It's not a question of whether farmers do or can lead to claims of either be-last night, with new pickets exdo not have a legitimate dispute. ing too femient or harsh with pected at Plymouth.

whether or not we wish to see a return to the dark days of the Seventies and early Eighties when whole sections of British industry and the economy were effectively held to ransom by anyone with a grievance."

This week's action by farmers was not "helpful" to the association's efforts to secure compensation from the French government for losses incurred during the blockade by French farmers at Calais last year.

The forces policing the farming protests have to deal with competing interests. While their primary duty is to keep the such deals officers are likely to peace, they have to balance the right of businesses to carry on their activity against the free-

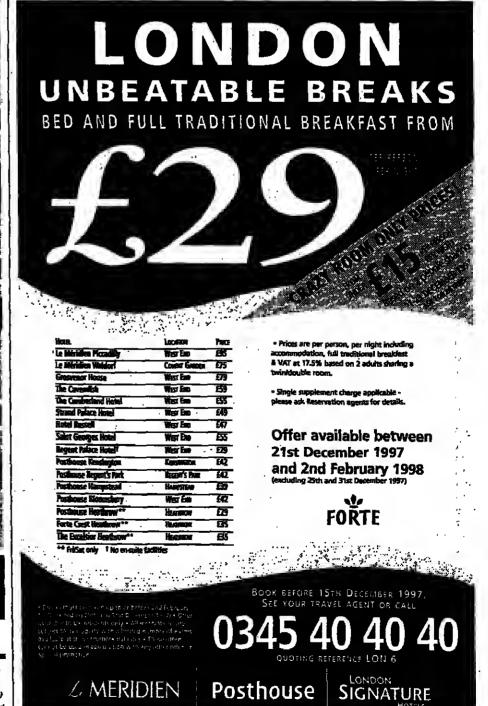

Senior police officers b rying out their duties, and this protesters. For example, neither North Wales police or Dyfed Powys police have yet arrested anyone at the Holyhead or Fishguard protests. In cootrast there were three arrests - and one charge - after a similar protest at Dover.

Yet the Welsh forces insist that they will do everything neoessary - including arrests - to ensure that lorries get through. The defining factor is likely to be the level of agreement, if any, between the lorry drivers, port authorities and the protesting farmers over the nature of the demonstrations. If there are take more of a back seat.

Police in North Wales said they are considering criminal damage charges over the toss-RHA spokesman, Daniel considerable discretion in car- by demonstrators at Holyhead.

More protests were planned

9/RAF MURDER

on dairy

ed yester. commis-_{etument} lameness were "up. end suffer ed an aver-nt of cattle

each year s were ac-

ng the prob-

≥aving carde stress even 355 led to

by the Farm

Council an dy of farming

ds and poor animals were n inadequate

ed to stand in

JAW OL MELE

poor tracks

i leg problems

t laid before inisters said:

almost always ition and it in accountability ly with her enpecially her so-ent, hence it is il welfare issue. ny farms where zausing unnecnd distress,"

for case

r example, neither

police or Dyfed

have yet arrested he Holyhead or otesis. In contras-bree arrests - and

- atter a similar

Weish forces insist

I do everything nec-are ķω rísing.

RAF officer guilty of wife's murder in fake car crash

A senior RAF officer was yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment for killing his wife. Kim Senguptn describes how Squadron Leader Nick Tucker's obsessive love for a Serbian interpreter led to murder.

Squadron Leader Nicholas Tucker prided himself on being meticulous and careful, and he planned the "perfect murder" of his wife meticulously and carefully. The prizes he must have felt so near tu his grasp were a new life with Dijana Dudukovic, a beautiful woman half his age, and more than £300,000 from his wife's life insurance.

But the elaborate planning that went into staging a car crash which killed 52-year-old Carol Tucker was unravelled by painstaking investigation by detectives who simply refused to accept the Royal Air Force ufficer's account of an accidental death.

in the river Lark at Lackford, Sutfolk, in July 1995 before faking the crash.

Yesterday, Tucker became the most senior officer ever to be convicted of murder outside a war zone. After a 15-day trial, a jury took seven and a half hours to find him guilty on a majority verdict of 10 to 2, Senteneing him to life imprisonment, Mr Justice Gage said; "This was a planned, calluus and coolly executed act. The motive for it is that you have become besorted with a young woman interpreter you had met while serving with the [United Nations] furces in Bosnia. This is an appalling crime."

Detectives who arrested Tucker described his arrogance and condescension towards them. Detective Chief Inspector Michael Bier, in charge of the investigation, said: "The Squadron Leader thought he had planned the perfect murder, he was too cocky. He was a deceitful man who had planned the murder of his wife, a woman who was a devoted wife and mother, supportive and loyal."

While carrying out investigations in for-team discovered that a former boyfriend of Ms Dudukovic had died in a car crash under suspicious circumstances, and she had been interviewed by the local police. However, officers pointed out, that accident had taken place in 1993 before she met Tucker. and there is no suggestion that she had any connection with the murder of Mrs Tucker.

Ms Dudukovic said about the accident: "Yes I was interviewed by the police but it was not my fault. This was a horrible thing to happen to someone close to you." She is now married and living in Switzerland. She did not give evidence in court, and has said she knows "nothing about the murder".

The Tuckers' daughter, Vanessa, gave evidence against her father in court, describing huw her mother had suspected he was having an affair just a few weeks before she was killed. Her brother, James, has stayed with his father.

After the case Tucker's solicitor, David Shipman, said that his client maintained his

Police found husband had double motives of sex and money

Wheo Dijana Dudukovic was interviewed in Zurich by British detectives following the murder of Carol Tucker, they made no secret of the fact that they were investigating whether she could be a spy.

As details emerged about the liaison betweeo Squadron Leader Nicholas Tucker and the daughter of a Serbian army colonel alarm bells began ringing at the Ministry of Defence and Foreign Office. They discovered that the Royal Air Force officer had been making inquiries with ageocies dealing with refugees and asylum seekers. One fear was that he may have been used, unwittingly, to provide aveoues of escape for suspected war criminals.

/who had become retug in the former Yugoslavia.

After leaving Bosnia Ms armpit and left upper arm. Dudukovic moved ioto the Geneva home of a United Nations official dealing with in Zurich. Speaking at her knocked unconscious, and did not know how she had died. At least that was the story that he tearfully told the police. paramedics, doctors, his children Vanessa and James, and his wife's family.

But detectives were sceptical from the start. Tucker told them he had been driving at more than 50mph, but the damage to the car was so slight that accident investigators were convinced it was going no more than 10mph wheo it struck the riverbed.

The river was oo deeper than 3ft, and at points only 18in. Mrs Tucker was known to have a fear of water, but did not appear to have attempted to scramble on to land. A post-mortem examinatioo revealed that she had Tucker told the police that his haemorrhaging in both eyes, ininquiries with the agencies were dicating asphysiation, and there oo behalf of Ms Dudukovic's was bruising consistent with finger marks on her chest, and cuts and scratches to the back, left

As well as money, sex was a motive for murder, according to the police. Son Ldr Tucker had refugees, Bertrand du Pasquier. volunteered for a six-mooth She is now married and living posting as an United Nations military adviser in Bosnia where home Ms Dudukovic said: "The he had met 21-year-old Dijana police tried to make me out to Dudukovic, who was working as not know anything about that. cer. then 44, was plainly hooked nothing about his wife's death. at his trial that he found Ms The police say he killed his wife Dudukovic "very flirtatious, because he wanted to be with fascinating to be with, very vime. They are saying he mur- vacious and, incidentally, "a dered her so he could live with me. But that is oot true." An MoD source said: ple, the small plump bespecta-Think of the equation - a cled officer and the glamorous, British officer infatuated with 6ft-tall blonde. According to anthe daughter of a Serbian other officer serving there at the colonel, knowing that man had links with the senior echeloo of hold on the squadroo leader the Krajoa Serb factioo. Inquiries were carried out."

Nicholas and Carol Tucker on their wedding day

Tucker had become besotted with the beautiful woman half his Dudukovic to get a visa for age but he was also married to a 15-stone wife four years older than himself with whom mar- in Piccadilly, central London. In ital relations had effectively ceased. However, if Carol Tucker died, he would get £136,000 Dudukovic but stated that the from various life insurance policies. If she died in a car crash the figure would go up to £307.500.

On the night of 21 July 1995 that is what happened. Driving home with his wife after dinner it bluntly I couldn't hack it." at the Red Lion, in Icklingham, allik, Tucker missed a turning and met some deer on the road. Wife grabbed the steering and the car plunged into the River Lank Mrs Tucker was had written repeatedly, line by found dead, face down in shallow water. Tucker had beeo be some kind of a spy, but I do an interpreter. The RAF offi-"I am not a spy and I know on her. He was to tell the court good interpreter".

They made an unlikely coutime, such was Ms Dudokovic's that military operations began to be run oo her "whim". Tucker arranged for Ms Britaio, and in June he spent a week with her in the RAF club court, the officer admitted haviog a brief affair with Ms sexual side of their relationship had been a "bit of a disaster" The two occasions on which they tried to make love had ended in failure. He added: "To put

He claimed that Ms Dudukovic simply became a good friend. But this appears not to tally with "schoolboyish" love letters he sent to her. In one he line, "I love you" over six pages. - Kim Sengupta

MONDAY-THURSDAY 8AM - 8PM . FRIDAY 8AM - 9PM . SATURDAY 8AM - 8PM . SUNDAY 10AM - 4PM! ubject to availability Products and offers may vary in Northern tretand and Eire 1Stores in Scotland open Sunday gam-apm Opening times may vary. Please call 0645 801 800 during office hours to

THE COMPUTER SUPERSTOR

BUSINESS CENTRE LOWEST EVER PRICES

> LOWEST EVER PRICE

SAVE £100

LOWEST

SAVE £350

LOWEST EVER PRICE

SAVE £100

166MHz Pentium* Processor with

16Mb RAM. 1.6Gb hard disk. 256k cache memory. 16 speed multimedia. 33.6Kbps

200MHz Pentium* Processor with MMX Technology. 16Mb RAM. 2.1Gb hard disk. 256k cache memory.

24 speed multimedia. 2Mb 30 graphics card. 33.6Kbps data/fax modern with speakerphone. 14" monitor.

LOWEST EVER PRICE

LOWEST EVER PRICE

£1399

SAVE £200

IBM

233MHz Peatit

with MMX Techn

256k cache memory. 24 speed mustimedia. 2Mb ATI Rage 3D Graphics. 33.6Kbps data/fax mc home. Was £1699. MODEL: Aptiva £33.

HEWLETT PACKARD LOWEST EVER PRICE

255ARHz Pentium Processor of 1699 with BAMX Technology. 526b RAM, 43Cb bard det. 256k ache £1699

memory, 24 speed multimedia. 2Mb ATI Rage 3D graphics, 56k SAVE £100

data/fax modern with speakerphone. Over 30 top sufficient titles. Was E1799. MODEL: Pavilion 8165.

VIGLEN MICROSOFT LOWEST EVER PRICE

233MHz latel Perdina" II Processor. 32MH SyncDRAM. 4.3Cb hard disk. 512k cache memory. 24 speed multimedia with sub-woofer.

33.6Kbps data/fax/voice modern. SAVE E400

MMX™ Technology.

Was £999. MODEL: Acros 5:166.

data/fax modem.

IBM

CTX

Was £1449.£1349. £1 199.

speakers. 14" monitor. Was £799. MODEL: LCM166+.

200MHz Pentium* Process with MBMX Technology. 16Mb RAM. 2Gb hard disk. 256k cache memory. 16 Speed Multimedia. 33.6Kbps data/fax modem. MODEL: Pavilion 3130.

COMPAQ

20010Hz Pentium Procussor with MMAX Tachmology. 16Mb SyncDRAM, 3.2Gb hard disk.

16 speed multimedia with IBL 3D Artual Theatre & Dolby Digital 166+ Cyrtx Processor. omb v/ds. 1.76: in d disk.

512k cache memory.
PCI graphics card. 16 speed multimedia with stereo

HEWLETT PACKARD NEW

MODEL: Aptiva E31.

ON ALL PCs

PACKARD BELL 166MHz Pentium® Processor with MMX™ Technology.

16Mb RAM. 2Gb hard disk. 256k cache memory. 20 speed multimedia. 1Mb PCI graphics card.

FREE over £1000 worth of software. Was £1199, £1099, MODEL: 9029.

LOWEST EVER PRICE

YOUR NEW PC CAN BE INSTALLED AND SET UP

OFFICE BY ONE OF OUR

We'll check your PC is correctly set up and demonstrate the basic functions of your new PC working and we'll

TRAINED PROFESSIONALS

IN YOUR HOME OR

AVE £200

Up to £1990 worth of software. Was £1593: £1499, MODEL: Presado 4506.

15" monitor. Microsoft Natural Keyboard. Was £2499. MODEL: Home Pro Pil 233. HEWLETT PACKARD 200MHz Pentium' Processor with MMX

Technology. 32Mb RAML 2.5Gb hard disk. 24 speed multimedia. 2Mb ATI Rage II 3D Graphics card. 56k data/fax modem with speakerphor Over 30 top software titles. Was £1499. MODEL: Pavilion 8110.

LOWEST EVER PRICE SAVE £100

NOTHING TO PAY UNTIL SEPTEMBER 1998 ON ALL PCS

osit then nothing for the deferred period indicated with the product. You can then repay bull, interest free, or by monthly instalments when interest will be charged at an APR of in the date of the agreement. Typical example: Cash price viat. Nil deposit and loan amount of £1800 No payment this, then either settle the balance in full, (total amount 29.5% (VARIABLE)

FOR YOUR NEAREST STORE CALL 0990 464 464

ABERDEEN COVENTRY DERBY BIRMINGHAI NCTION 9 OFF BRISTOL CANTERBURY

FROM BRITAIN'S BIGGEST COMPUTER SUPERSTORE

WE'LL INSTALL YOUR

NEW PC AND GET YOU GOING

DONCASTÉR EAST KILBRID

ALL PCs WE SELL ARE GUARANTEED YEAR 2000 COMPLIANT BRITISH STANDARD PD2000-2

· LIVERPOOL MANCHESTER ERRY HOLL DUOLEY HUDDERSFIELD NORTH SHIELDS LEEDS NORWICH LEICESTER

NOTTINGHAM PETERBOROUGH PLYMOUTH POOLE PORTSMOUTH

SHEFFIELD SLOUGH SOUTHAMPTON SPRUCEFIELD STOCKPORT STOKE SWINDON

LONDON AREA BRENTFORD GUILDFORD LAKESIDE ENFIELD STAPLES CORNER

CANTERBURY NOW OPEN

ON SELECTED PCs

PACKARD BELL 166MHz Pentium Processor

with MMX" Technology. 16Mb RAM. 2Gb hard disk. 256k cache memory 20 speed multimedia with sub-woofer. 2Mb graphics card. 56k data/fax modem with 200MHz Pentium Processor with MMX^M Technology. 16Mb RAM. 2.1Gb hard disk.

APRICOT

256k cache memory. 16 speed multimedia. 33.6Kbps data/fax/voice modern. 14" monitor. MODEL: MS540 P200. PACKARD BELL PRINTER with MMX Technology. 16Mb RAM. 3.2Gb hard disk. pofer, 14" monitor FREE over £1000 worth of Software.

MODEL: Pulsar 19. GMb RAM 3.2(5) hard disk, 24 spee itunedia with subwe 2Mb 3D Graphus card. 56k modem SAVE E80 with speakerphone. FIEEE over £1990 worth of Software. Was £1529. MODEL Pulsar 20.

family, and 24 speed multimedia. Zwo Aut Roge L. 1 Pro 3D ACP Graphics, 56Kbps data/tax modern.

FREE 12 MONTHS UNLIMITED INTERNET ACCESS. MODEL: MS600 PII 233. PACKARD BELL PRINTER

APRICOT

32Mb SyncDRAML 4.3Gb hard disk. 512k cache memory.

512k cache memory, 24 speed multimedia. 4Mb Matrox Mysique, 30 Graphics card. 56kbps data/fax modern with speakerphone. FREE over $1000 worth of $600 mars. MODE: Pulsar 30.

PACKARD BELL

233MHz Intel Pentium" Il Processor. 32Mb SyncDRAM. 4.3Gb hard disk. 512k cache memory. 24 speed multimedia and sub-woofer. 4Mb Matrox Mystique 3D Graphics card. 56k modern with speakerphone. 14" monitor. MODEL: Pulsar 24

OF SOFTWARE

THE COMPUTER SUPERSTORE

صكنا من الاعل

DEPUTY PICTURE. EDITOR

Taxman prepares to fine 1.5 million as deadline looms

Up to 1.5 million people face fines for failing to complete the new-style tax self-assessment forms in time. Louise Jury says the stress of filling in the boxes even forced one taxpayer in West Yorkshire to call the Samaritans.

Almost one in five taxpayers have not returned the inland Revenue's new forms, only weeks before the 31 January deadline. A MORI survey indicates the tax man is awaiting had the most taxpayers who returns from 1.7 million tax- completed the form with case. payers, 42 per cent of whom say they have not got around to filllog them in.

Another 16 per cent say they are having difficulty and are likely to seek advice. awaiting help. Those failing to return the forms in time face an immediate £100 fine and the Leicester firm, called for the possibility of investigation - £100 fine and interest charges people out there who need specialist advice and are unsure where to turn for help. Some have had to resort to family and friends, which is not ideal." The ICAEW found that of those who had returned their forms, more than a third had had difficulties completing them and half sought advice.

The most common source of advice was a chartered accountant but this still accounted for only 28 per cent. Many turned to family and friends and 3 per cent or less went to their employer or to a bank or building society.

The South-west of England with the Welsh, followed by those in Yorkshire and Humberside, finding it the most difficult. Londoners were most

Richard Shooter, a selfassessment expert from a

Snowed under: The Inland Revenue is in overdrive, but 20 per cent of taxpayers have still not returned the nev forms, due on 31 lanuary. Those failing to deliver them by then face a £100 fine and the possibility of investigation by the Revenue. Photograph: David Rose bringing in millions of pounds to be deferred to the end of io penalties. Interest on tax March to give people more owed will be 9.5 per cent from time to sort out problems. But that date and a surcharge of 5 an IR spokesman said: "People per cent will be imposed on anyone who still has not paid by 28 of the January deadline and we February. Anyone failing to are aiming to get every return make their return by 31 July faces a second £100 fine.

Although most people found the forms easy to fill in problems were evident from 300,000 returns rejected by the Revenue found them easy to complete. already for "serious errors or Michael Jack, financial secretary the Institute of Chartered Ac- that at least 15 per cent of taxcountants in England and Wales payers would be fined at least (ICAEW), which commissioned the survey, said: "This is £150m. The forms went out in a new and complicated tax. April to 9 million high carners, regime, causing massive problems 10 taxpayers.

will be aware of the importance back next month." They were delighted by many of the survey's findings, he said. A majority of people who had completed their tax forms had to the Treasury, predicted after Anita Monteith, chairman of a pilot study in Leicester in 1996 £100, adding up to nearly people who are self-employed and those with more than one

AFTER LAUNCHING THE AUDIO CD PHILIPS LAUNCHES THE AUDIO CD RECORDER

DEPUTY PICTURE EDITOR

The Independent is looking for a Deputy Picture Editor.

Experience is essential as is an extensive knowledge of agencies and photographers.

Enthusiasm, an eye for detail and the ability to think laterally are vital. The successful candidate will have previously held positions of responsibility within the newspaper industry and have appropriate management skills. You will be someone who takes an entirely different look at the news, who has a creative talent and the ability to search out an exclusive. To apply please send a current CV with a daytime telephone number and salary details to:

The Editor, The Independent, One Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 5DL

Quoting reference IND 003 by 19th December 1997

6 murdared her, says

ion Eurrell.

Kayleigh Ward had only popped out for a bag of chips. It was an errand for a woman who shared the hostel in Chester, Cheshire, where the nine-year-old had lived since her family had been—al that at a remote spot by the evicted from their council house for rent arrears.

But it was on the way back from the chip shop last December that the child humped into another resident of the hostel, John O'Shaughnessy.

The chips were never delivered. O'Shaughnessy, who today starts a life sentence for Kayleigh's murder, was described as a "drifter and shifter" who hung around the pubs. He had arrived at the hostel a month earlier with his pregnant girlfriend and her three children from a previous relationship.

When the 31-year-old suggested that Kayleigh took a walk with him by the river bank she went along. Her impoverished upbriogiog had forced her into a street life where she felt at home to the city centre, making friends with travellers and older children.

But Mold Crown Court was told during O'Shaughnessy's tri-River Dee, he fell upon the girl, barely four feet tall, and raped her. "I'll tell my mum, I'll tell my mum," she sobbed during the attack. As she walked away in tears. O'Shaughnessy determined that she could not escape, and strangled her with his belt and her tights.

Wheo Kayleigh's mother became worried that her daughter had not returned home nearly a day later. O'Shaughnessy was one of the most zealous in the search party.

He was interviewed several times by police and an attempted drug overdose fuelled suspicions. But it was not until late February, two months after the murder, that he finally cracked. The body was found in ruary and O'Shaughnessy made a midnight call to police to say: "I killed Kayleigh Ward."

He threw her body into the rice Kay said O'Shaughnessy should serve a minimum of 30 river. Then he took what John years. "There is no crime more Rogers QC, for the prosecutor. described as "carefully calcuhorrific than the murder of a ·lated steps" to avoid detection. child. What you did to Kayleigh He told his girlfriend that his Ward was unspeakable." he clothes had become muddy in said. He called the killing "depraved, cruel and cowardly". a fight and returned his boots

From the public gallery. to the shop where he had bought them, saying they were Kayleigh's mother, Yvonne. screamed at O'Shaughnessy: "I hope you rot in hell." Outside the court she said: "Our lives will never be the same now that Kayleigh has gone forever, and with the knowledge of the terrible circumstances around

Alex Carlile QC, for the defence, said that O'Shaughnessy had heen "at risk" when very young but had been nothing more than "a drioker and a bit of a nuisance". He was the fathe riverbed mud on 10 Feb- ther of "several" children from other relationships and there was "never an inkling that he was a child-abuser" before Yesterday, Mr Justice Mau- Kayleigh was murdered.

Kayleigh Ward: Only nine, but at home with street life John O'Shaughnessy: A drifter who hung around pubs

Rape victim's trial ordeal angers judge A judge called for a change in the law that allows alleged rapists to cross-examine their victims, but support groups fear there are more cases to come. Michael Streeter, Legal Affairs Correspondent, considers the issue.

Judge Timothy Pontius yesterday jailed for 16 years a rapist who had "mercilessly" ques- at the women's court ordeal.

tioned his two victims in court. was inighty regrettable the law allowed an unrepresented tered right to personally question his victims in needlessly extended and agonising detail for the obvious purpose of intimidation and humiliation". Later Victim Support, which works for witnesses and victims of crime, said the Government needed to act "as a matter of urgency" to reduce the agony of witnesses in future cases.

A spokeswoman said: "This will not be the last case - we fear there are others in the pipeline. The danger is that it will discourage other witnesses from coming forward."

In June the Government set on vulnerable witnesses. Its report is due in the New Year and terrified to give evidence. early legislation or a change in regulations is expected.

protect rape victims from crossexamination by their alleged attackers. At present child witnesses are afforded this pro-this right. Another option is to recommend fresh guidance for judges, giving them powers to prevent cross-examination if they feel a defendant is abusing their right to a fair trial. At present ministers believe. judges are too constrained by fears that hy preventing effective cross-examination defendants would have strong grounds for an appeal.

Following the trial of the 41-year-old rapist last month. the Home Secretary, Jack Straw, said he was "appalled"

Passing sentence at Knights-The judge said he was not bridge Crown Court the trial punishing the rapist for the way judge said the rapist, who had he defended himself but added sacked his lawyers, had made revictims, whose courage in redefendant "virtually an unfet- porting the crimes then giving evidence he praised.

He said the sentence reflected the fact the defendant posed a serious risk to the publie and that the rape offences last year had involved "protracted and repeated sexual violence of a horritying degree".

The man, who cannot be named for legal reasons, was told that when he is eventually released he will have to register himself with the police under the Sex Offenders Act.

The jury was not told that in the past six years the defendant had been cleared of rape charges on four previous oceaup an inter-departmental review sions, twice because his alleged victims were apparently too

One of the victims had to give evidence twice after the first Ministers are thought to be jury was discharged following a considering plans which would heated clash with the judge over his behaviour and attitude towards her. She later asked the judge: "Do I have to put up with this? I have never been so hutection, and the idea is to extend miliated in my life."

18 years for animal rights firebomber

jailed for a total of 18 years yesterday for waging firebomh terror campaigns against high street stores.

Barry Horne, who blitzed the supporters in the public gallery Isle of Wight in a £3m night of terror, stood impassively as he was sentenced at Bristol Crown Court, But more than two dozen supporters erupted angrily at the sentence and shouted and banged against glass partitions of the public gallery before being removed by police. Passing sentence Judge Simon Darwall-Smith told Horne, 45, from Northampton, that pre-seotence reports indicated that he had shown no form of remorse and his intention was to cause the maximum amount of physical and economic damage against his chosen targets. "This was urban terrorism for a particular cause by which you

The judge said he accepted that he did not intend to attack

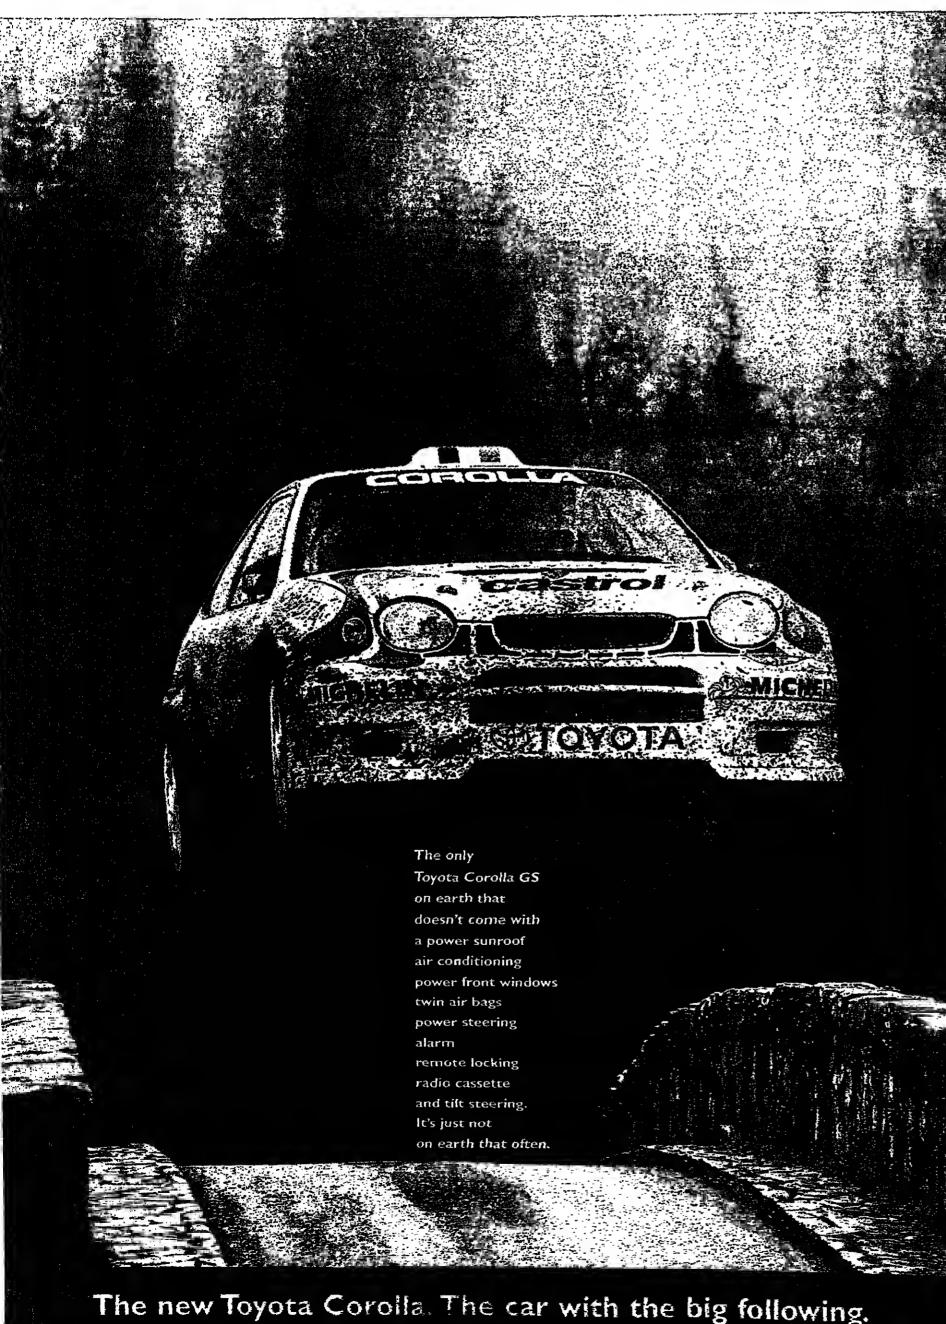

An animal rights activist was human life or limb. Horne. who was convicted last month on 12 counts related to his arson campaigns, smiled briefly and gave a thumbs-up salute to > as he was led from the dock. Police believe that he operated as a lone wolf in his terror campaign, believing that his solo operation was the best strategy to prevent detection. Following his arrest in sum> mer last year in Bristol's Broad-mead shopping centre he has refused to say anything to investigators. He was detained in July 1996 after he had planted firebomh devices in two city ceotre stores and had moved on to a third. Undercover officers found four more small incendiary devices in his jacket - all timed to go off after midnight -which they made safe. The firebomb devices matched unexploded devices recovered in August 1994 after four arson incidents on the Isle of Wight.

NEVER BE BE

put communities in terror. MADEL SHOWN: TOYOTA COROLLA WORLD RALLY CAR, £299,995. TOYOTA COROLLA 3 DOOR SS FROM £12,660. CALL 0800 777555 FOR DETALS. THE CAR IN FRONT IS A TOYOTA

LAUNDRY

SAVE UP TO A £ 180

SALE PRICE

-TOOVER 200 Spin "Soft Wave" 120 £30999 120 £30999

SING Price (348.99. BUTY PROVE PROF 10 MONTHS LATE

EXTRA VOUCHER
BOSCH
1000 Splin Autowasher
Model VVFEZ004.
1800 £ 36999
In-store Price GRASH. MITV MORE PAY 12 MONITHS LABRE

HOTPOINT 1000 Spin 'Aquarius

Authorwisher Available in Folar White, Linen or Mercury, Wodel WM62.

OS £449.99. BUY NOW PAY 10 MONTHS LATER

DISHWASHERS

SAVE 48 £130

BOSCH

■ 12 place settings. ■ Very quiet operation.

In-store Price £369.99. BUY NOW PAY 12 MONTHS LATER

TRICITY BENDIX

Full-Size Dishwasher

■ 5 programmes. Model SGS5002. Was £469.99.

VOUCHER PRICE

HOTPOINT

Also available in Linen, Mercury.

Pistachio Green, Ice Blue or Lilac.

EXTRA VOUCHER

CANDY EXCLUSION 1000 Spin Autowaster 1000 Spin Autowaster 1000 $259 pg $259 pg

EXTRA VOUCHER

CANDY EXECUTED 1200 Spin Automather Model C1261.
Was £399 99. in-store

Price £299.99, BUY HOW PAY 6 MONTHS LATER

EXTRA VOUCHER
CREDA (1600 Spin Tecovash)
Automasher Model
17086, Was (390.94)

II-Store Price £299.09. BUT HOW PAY & HOWING LATER

1100 Spin 'Aquarius'

Autowasher

Model WM63.

Was £499.99.

169.91 BUY NOW PAY 9 MONTHS LATER

HOTPOINT 1100 Spin 'Aquarius

Wesher Dryer Augitable in Polar White. 110 £449 99 Model WD61.

EXTRA VOUCHER

ZANUSSI 11fb Condensor Dryer Reverse tumble action, 12 heat settings, Model TC470, 40 £12999

£100

VOUCHER PRICE

£130 £299 g

.120 .39999

PEACE OF MIND

FOR YEARS TO

Up to 5 years expert

Service Agreement.
PLUS INTEREST FREE

OPTION WHEN PURCHASED WITH ANY PRODUCT OVER £100.

Ask in-store for details

EKCUSIVE

MODELS

L OFFERS

For exception

service support when you buy a Mastercare

Coverplan

WHIRLPOOL

Model AWM321.
Was (369.99.
In-Prore Price (289.99.
BUY NOW PAY
6 MONTHS LATER

£269.99

1000 Spin Autowasher

ZANUSSI Full-Size Dish

Model DW907.
Was E429.99. BUT NOW PRY 10 MONTHS LATER

HOTPOINT Full-Size Dishwapsher

Model DF61 POLAR. 100 TRADE-NI PICE Price Excluding Trade-in £449.99.

BUY NOW PAY
12 MONTHS LATER PROGRESSES At for detail

BOSCH Pull-Size Dishw

MASTERCARE

Coverplan

■ Unique 'multirack' baskets. ■ Quick wash cycle.

■ LED salt in

m S programmes. Model 5G55302.

Was £519.99.
BUY NOW PAY
12 MONTHS LATER

■ Variable spin. ■ Rinse hold.

■ 11 programme o Model AWM321.

Was ESSO.SO, BUY NOW PAY TO ME

WHITE KNIGHT

In-Store Price 109 99

Model 412, Was £169.99,

£3

GLEN Glen

CURRYS PRICE

£23.99

SUPERB F24.99

With Currys Premier

Advantage Account you can take advantage of any credit offer in-store

Ask for details

REPERENT

REVIEWS

AWARD

IN-STORE

REPAIR SHOP

Repairs 7 days a week

(same day wherever

CARLTON

EXCHANGE Fan Heater

Model 2000. Was £16.99.

control. Model HD3346. Was £26.99.

DREAMLAND

PHILIPS Fan Heater a 2.4kW heat output.
Thermostat

£3

TELEVISIONS

TOSHIBA

MATSUI ENDER K Rem

110 11199

APP To Mark Same Trigger protection in 1300 general to the girts Tell - T åest -1400 APPRAINTED TO المتعالم ا 2215 1011 who hung around out

judge

TATALAN TO A TANAS

¥5.

Marie Contraction

Y PET COLUMN

- Contracts

Terre

Demois of the 2000 C

the second

20 86

434 rained the service

4 122

wer to r

der de

J 77: -

HE ---

The same

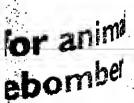

17 (BS2)

70.

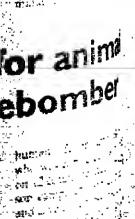

93,425, 7

1080

Y

50.77 T

. 45 S.2 W.C.

7. ...

123757

المجاه وإميرا

- Tvi (- * *

Part of the

gg (page) at

Section 1

That was in first with the

The state of the

g (302)

重新的社会 ari di la

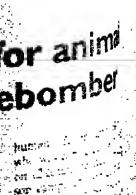

figural 1 1 2.7

· 有情态 50.1 $000 · and the America AND THE RESERVE OF THE PERSON OF THE PERSON

· #5:

43.16

grade in the

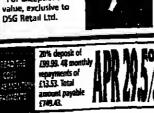

Many of our current prices are Currys topest ever, Find a lower price for the same product and offer, complete, new, a local shop within 7 days of purchase and we'll match it.

(or with) the 12th monthly repayment. Total amount pay-(469 99, BITEREST 07

UPGRADES

DIGITAL

vailable in-store

COMPATIBLE

All TV's Currys sell are compatible with future diginal technology

ubject to the purcha decoder planned for

aunch during 1998.

DELIVERY AND INSTALLATION

gas and electric cookers by CORGI registered engineers (excludes Northern

COMBINED

GAS

ELECTRIC

£49.99

Calls cost 50p per

SAME DAY

SERVICING

IN

HOME

MOPS

For most large items

il you phone before 10am Monday to

CURRYS DIRECT

For direct, doorstep delivery, Freephone 0500 304304 or fax

01442 888145 (Yam-8pm Mon-Fri, 9am-5 30pm Sat, 10am-5pm Sun), Delivery charges from £3.25

Part of DSG Retail Lt

Friday and live within 10 miles of a Currys store.

OPEN IN

AB Superstores offer easy parking, late night shopping and Sunday opening. Ring 0990 500049 for details of your nearest store. Written quotations from Currys, Dept MK, Hemel Hempstead. Herts HPZ 7TG quotations from Currys, Dept MK, Hemel Hempstead, Herts HP2 7TG.

Currys are licensed credit brokers. Ask wisstone for details.

it home nov. Ask in-stere for full datails. Pay 20% deposit and nothing for the deferred period indicated with the product. You can then repay the loan in full, interest free, or by monthly instalments when interest will be charged at an APR of 12.5% from the date of the agreement. Example based or 12 months Buy Now Pay Later. Cash Price £399.99.
20% deposit £80. Either pay the loan amount of £319.99 within 12 months or 36 monthly payments by direct debit of £16.74 Total amount payable £582.64. 20% deposit of 199.99. 48 monthly repayments of 199.99. 48 monthly repayments of 199.99. 48 monthly repayments of 199.99. 49 monthly BUY NOW PAY UP TO 12 MONTHS 29% deposit of £99.99. 12 monthly payments of £13.53. Salance of £237.64 before Account is interest free if repaid in full before (or with) 6th, 9th, 10th, 12th or little according to the period stated with the product. See our "Hour it Words" showcard in-store for details. Example based on Cash Nice of 4469.91 90ED 16 LATER 11 11 11/10 (Applicants must be 18 or over, 21 in Northern Irelan

APR 205%

WATCH OUT FOR OUR VOUCHER SPECIALS! Look, out for the special woudow naturage on selection products throughout this telephoneurs. Simply take this advent to any Comys store to class prior distance. Does no class covering per produces from secondar offers are an advenuable to existing could be delice. May for our with other address, produce are also counted to the classification of the counter of th

GRIMSBY - CHESTERFIELD

UDDINGSTON - GLASGOW

When animal rights mean human wrongs

Animal welfare campaigners in India want to banish performing animals from the streets. Peter Popham in New Delhi says it will be a long time before the country accepts Western standards of animal welfare.

It was the saddest, shabbiest little political demonstration you could imagine. Yesterday in the business heart of New Delhi, outside the Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi, several dozen ragged youths sat 'cross-legged in the road. A few held banners. Maybe half of them were accompanied by the performing animals - monkeys or bears - which enable them to scratch a living of 20 or 30 rupees a day, or around 50p; rather less than £200 a year.

The golden-haired, red-bottomed monkeys, all on chains, foraged for fleas in each other's scalps, or lashed out at enemies with fierce hind legs. One was wearing a purple velvet coat embroidered with sequins. The brown bears, muzzled, or with the ropes cows that stand about in the roads. Visithrough their noses that make them respond to orders, lay face down on the tar- way, but locals will tell you it has got much mac as if doped, paws covering their eyes. worse since Mrs Gandhi launched her on show. They had gathered to campaign structive cattle by municipal authorities. of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), chaired by Maneka Gandhi, widow of Sanjay, Indito outlaw the barbaric treatment of animals, of which dancing bears and prancmerisingly archaic Indian cityscape, and and carrying off the manuscript.

all equally out of tune with modern ideas of animal welfare, let alone animal rights.

The animal boys have their champions, too. The small gathering outside the bank bad spun off from a larger demonstration outside the Presidential Palace, demanding the right to save themselves from starvation. It is the latest initiative in a campaign that has been running for 10 years, and claims the support of 100,000 people.

How do they respond to the argument that treating animals like this is intolerably cruel? Direndra Pratap, one of the organisers of the demonstration, said: "This is just propaganda put out by westernised environmentalists. So many goats and other animals are killed in the country.

"If they offered some alternative way for the bandlers to make a living it would be different, but they don't. Without this work, the boys will starve."

Importing western standards of animal welfare to India is undoubtedly treacberous, because the context is so different. Some places in Delhi are practically impassable to traffic because of the herds of tors may assume it has always been this For once, the boys and bears were not campaign against the slaughter of ob-for the right to continue plying their trade.

For years, the Society for the Prevention

So at the Presidential Palace yesterday the boys and beasts were in the midst of what has become a monkey playground: Lutyens's heroic architecture is now a vast ra Gandhi's older son, has been fighting climbing frame for wild monkeys. They regularly raid the Ministry of Urban Affairs, tearing up files. The Booker Prizeing monkeys are vivid examples. Also on winning novelist Arundathi Roy lives in the list is the mistreatment of elephants the area. While she was finishing The God for carnival purposes and the charming of of Small Things she says sbc dreaded the pythons and cobras - all a part of the mes-monkeys coming in through her window

CONGRESS ENDS UNHAPPY ARRANGEMENT

Front government, composed of 14 mutually noxious parties and with the Congress Party propping it up from outside like a flying huttress, finally fell apart on py arrangement. Sitaram Kesri, Con-Thursday when President Narayanan dissolved the 11th Lok Sahha (lower bouse of parliament). A general election will be Gowda, after 11 months. Mr Deve Gowheld between the third week of February da's successor, Inder Kumar Gujral, once and the first week of March.

The end came, predictably, when Congress withdrew its support. India's oldest months. Hamstrung by his government's ruling coalition by left-wing parties; it had around the world's capitals. lent its support solely to block the "com-

The ungainty structure of India's United munalist Hindu Bhartiya Janta Party (BJP), the largest force in parliament with 161 seats out of 543, from taking power.

But for Congress this was never a hapgress's 77-year-old leader, dispatched the coalition's first prime minister, H D Deve a protegé of Nebru and a successful forparty and the architect of independence confliction uses, he has sport much of that had been barred from participation in the time parading his distinguished whiskers

- Peter Popham the debate.

Bear necessities: Those who work as handlers of performing animals say they will starve if welfare campaigners win Photograph: Mary Ellen Mark From India - A Celebration of Independence', published by Aperture

Mugabe rethinks farms seizure

The Zimbahwean government will revise a list of 1,503 farms, mainly owned by white commercial farmers, that it had earmarked for seizure in a peasant resettlement programme. The Zimbabwe Broadcasting Corporation said the list published on 28 November was "full of mistakes and farms that should not have been designated". The decision was reached at a meeting of the central committee of President Robert Mugabe's ruling Zanu-PF party "after several provincial governors made representations that the list did not represent their submissions." - Reuters, Harare

Israel snubs Europe

The Israeli Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, said it was committed to peace with the Palestinians but excluded a big role for Europe in the process. Mr Netanyahu, visiting France, met his counterpart, Lionel Jospin, and the US Secretary of State. Madeleine Albright. He said he told Mr Jospin of a proposal for a period "in which the Palestinians would be able to discharge their obligations, especially in ... security ... to assure us that any territory that is handed over will not become a base for additional terrorism." France bas been prominent among nations pressing for a greater role for Europe in moving the peace process forward.

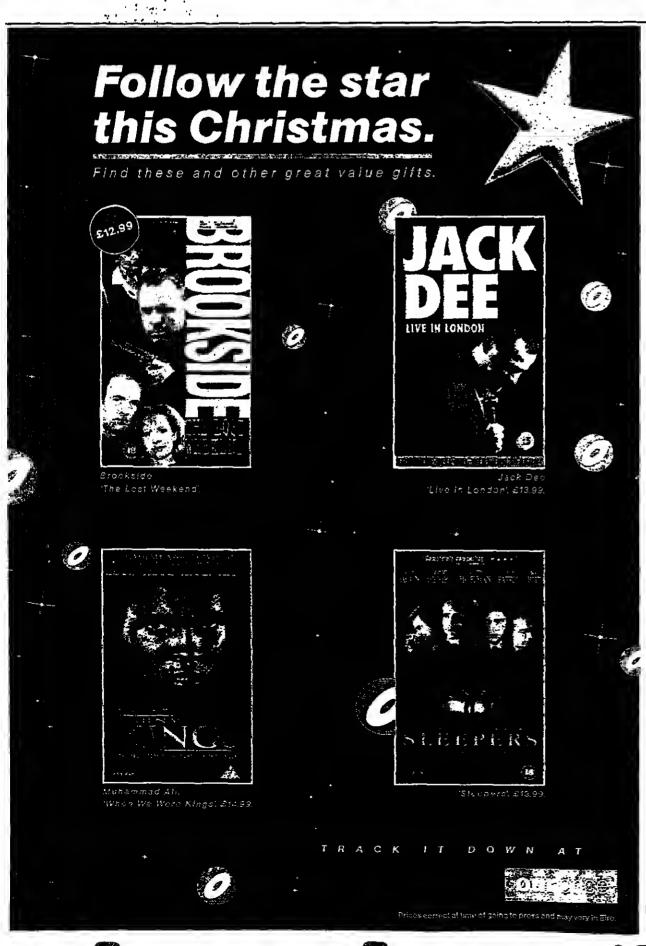

Basque violence

A politician's bodyguard was shot and a car-bomb exploded in San Sebastian in attacks authorities blamed on the Basque Eta group. The violence erupted as 23 leaders of Herri Batasuna, Eta's political wing, were due to be arrested to begin serving sevenyear sentences imposed on Monday for collaborating with the separatist guerrillas. Police said the shooting victim. Jose Maria Lobato, a bodyguard for a San Sebastian city councillor of Spain's ruling Popular Party, was in serious condition.

- Reuters, San Sebastian

Boris to the rescue

Russia's lower house of parliament approved the 1998 draft budget in its first reading minutes after a dramatic intervention by President Boris Yeltsin. The outcome was thrown into doubt after the biggest parliamentary group, the Communists, said they would vote against. The government views the budget as vital to help craft a recovery in 1998 after years of economic depression in post-Soviet Russia and recent world market lurmoil. - Reuters, Moscow

'Winnie, the arch-manipulator, reduced South Africa's time for healing to little more than a cheap gameshow

South Africa and the world hoped Desmond Tutu's commission would reach the truth about Winnie Mandela snubs Europy engineered an act of

be rethinks b

In a decade of reporting, no single moment has made me as

The embrace between the and the liberation movement. women will be notched up as an eternal shame to the Truth and the brave and dangerous experiment in nation-building it is board to the presidency. currently spearheading.

That Archbishop Desmond Tutu, the TRC chairman, actually halted crucial cross-examination of Mrs Mandela over and surely only racist whites totally unrepentant. On Thursher alleged involvement in were intended to be called to ac-Stompic's murder for the fake count by the TRC. event to take place still seems unbelievable.

The truth and reconciliation theory runs something like this. South Africans are bitterly divided by their racist past. Whites, in general, lived safe and comfortable lives. ignorant or indifferent to the britial injustice meted out to blacks. Through the TRC it is hoped a new and healthy nation can be built by confronting South Africans with the truth about their past. Only through truth, the theory goes, is forgiveness and reconciliation possible.

South Africa's attempts to heal itself are slow, arduous and painful, with no guarantee of success. The watched by a world in which for dealing with it few.

That is what makes Thursbeing used, or Mrs Mandela, for man rights ahuses are all black. bave had as much as a sniff of using it.

rious assaults.

It became obvious during the hearings that most of the charges against her would not Mary Braid, the archbishop were simply too flaky, criminal ible witnesses did emerge, particularly from the families of Mrs Mandela's orders.

The Itearings also produced targely consistent and exfurnous as the plastic "recon-tremely ugly picture of Mrs. ciliation" manufactured on Mandela and her "boys", Few Thursday between Winnie can really still doubt that the Madikizela-Mandela and Joyce Mother of the Nation was by the Scipei, the mother of Stompie late 1980s a violent, unpre-Mocketsi, 14, one of her alleged - dictable despot, totally unaccountable to her community

That alone matters when Reconciliation Commission and trom seeking high office in the ANC; which would be a spring-

For some, of course, race is the only concern. Mrs Mandela must be protected because she is a prominent black leader

The view is ill conceived,

CROC STILL HAS TEETH How many chances can a former state pres

Yesterday PW Boths was expected to be arrested and charged for failing to comply with a TRC subpoena to testify at a public hearing into the workings of the apartheid state. Instead the Commission gave him another chance - his third - to get involved with a process he has dismissed as a circus. The official reason given by the TRC for the issuing of a third subpoena is that the second had technically expired. But it's no secret that the Groot Krokodil's (Great Crocodile) previous refusals to attend the hearing are a major political headache. The Commission does not want its pursuit of him to become seen as the persecution of an old and ailing man. — Mory Broid experiment is being closely. Firstly, in this quasi-religious people were once again used process, sin had been discovered wholesale human rights abuse is to be fairly widely spread. And all too common and mechanisms secondly, the Winnie hearings two district camps - hlack and day's Teleuthby-style reconcil- white. After all, those who suf- for so long. As the TRC would iation so galling. It is still fered were her own; and the usually tell you, there is no short difficult to decide whether I'm families demanding the TRC in- cut to truth or reconciliation. more angry with the TRC, for vestigate her alleged gross hu-

For eight days Mrs Mandela leader of the Methodist Church, had listened to allegations that hit it right. He said the Winnie the TRC, of which I have been she and her notorious Mandela scandal was about the abuse of a defender, to a gameshow with least six murders and many se- with Mrs Mandela in mind) to become like those we most despise (the hrutal custodians of the apartheid system). The context in which Mrs stand up in a court; the wit- Mandela's alleged abuses took this week. Instead, writes nesses closest to the violence place was clearly laid out. Azar Cachalia, one of the few brave or discredited. But some cred- ANC figures to unequivocally condemn Mrs Mandela (and for that he can expect to suffer if victims allegedly murdered on she does rise to power), said anarchy reigned in Soweto. Thousands of youths, displaced and psychologically disturbed by the civil war, roamed the township, using on each other the torture techniques the state had inflicted on them.

Jerry Richardson, Mrs Mandela's former henchman, now serving life for murdering Stompie, also testified that the boy was fortured using techniques Mrs Mandela is just two weeks borrowed from the Boers. Violence had bred violence on an horrific scale.

Mrs Mandela showed no understanding of this. She was deficint, unwavering and, despite a vague apology prised from her by a begging Archbishop Tutu, day she was the same old Winnie; charismatic and strong but without insight or humility. She made a mockery of the Commission by denying everything and leaning on witnesses who later failed to show, A consummate populist, she turned the TRC into a political rally and used smears, racism and sareasm to swipe at her detractors and ac-

So why was she feted like a heroine at the end when the mother of Lolo Sono, in whose murder Mrs Mandela was implicated by credible witnesses, was weeping that there was no justice and Mrs Seipei, having delivered the PR cuddle, was sitting alone and rather lost in the emptying hall. The little and discarded.

This was no time for cuddles. Small people do matter and so have not divided opinion into does truth: particularly in a country which lived a filthy lie

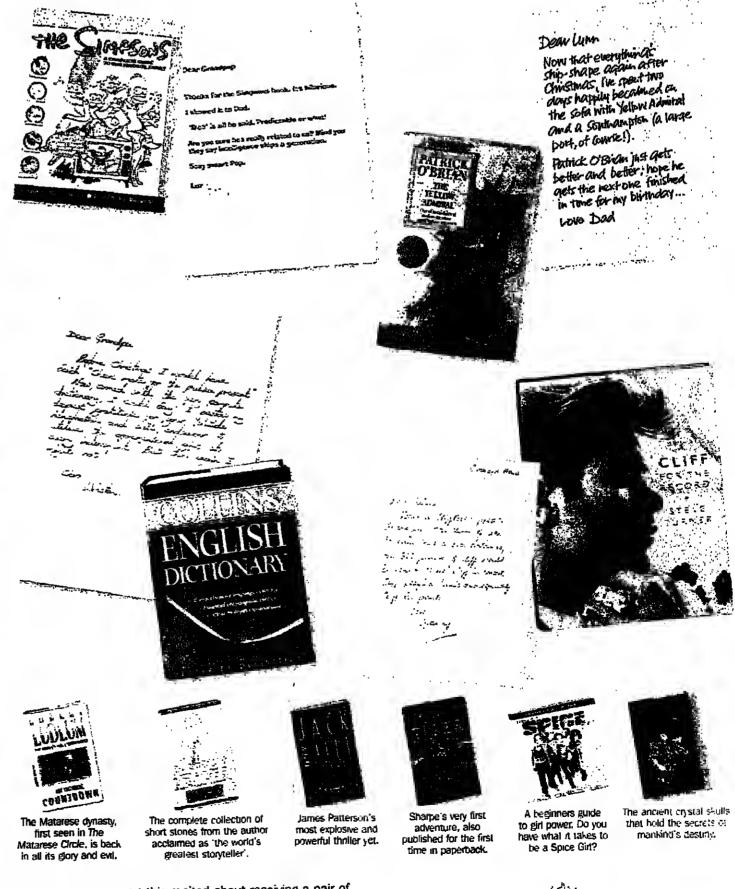

Mrs Mandela should never Bishop Peter Storey, the reconciliation when truth was so obviously absent. It reduced United Football Club were in-volved in the late 1980s in at is possible, he said, (clearly meaning but misguided host.

Gameshow host? Archbishop Desmand Tutu, who halted proceedings when Winnie was on the ropes

Photograph: Anna Zieminski/AFP

lmagine the thanks you'll get this Christmas.

Does anyone ever get this excited about receiving a pair of socks or bath salts? It's really rewarding to give someone the perfect present, so we've made the task easier by selecting some of our most popular books.

Yours could be the only thank you letter they'll enjoy writing this Christmas.

*5*5 € •

HarperCollinsPublishers

The perfect choice is right in front of you . . . and in all good bookstores

A Mossad agent manufactured false information about Syria for five years, misleading the last three Israeli prime ministers. Patrick Cockburn reports from Jerusalem on the scandal that may finally destroy the reputation of Israel's foreign intelligence service.

In the summer of 1996 Mossad hegan to report that Syrian forces were massing in southern Lehanon, preparing to launch a lightning strike on the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights. The attack never came. But Israeli fears created a diplomatic furore at the time. Benjamin Netanyahu, the Israeli prime minister, persuaded President Clinton to ask Syria for an explanation. Damascus came to believe that Israeli alarm was a aggressive intentions.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt told Yitzhak Mordechai. the Israeli defence minister. on a visit to Cairo: "This week President Assad [of Syria] called me at least five times, and told me that you are about to faunch a surprise attack on him." Gen Mordechai was cautious about the Mossad reports, but increased the supply of ammunition and equipment to the army.

It now emerges that a Mossad agent had manufactured the information, as he had been doing since before 1993. Israeli censorship has prevented the media revealing the identity of the agent or why he was considered such a reliable source, but for five years he delivered reports exaggerating the Syrian threat posed to Israel. The news could not have happened at a worse time for Mossad, which means Institute for Intelligence and Special Tasks, tis reputation, aided by Hollewood and thriller writers. was always exaggerated. But in September it suffered its worst and most public disaster since it was founded in 1951. In the Jordanian capital Amman, two agents were captured when they tried to poison an official of Hamas, the Islamic militant organisation. To get them back Israel had to release Sheikh further. The disinformation was distributed by the agency when it was led by Shahtai Shavit and Uzi Arad, now the diplomatic adviser to Mr Netanyahu, At a time when Israeli military intelligence was saying that Syria had made a strategic decision desire to impress his superiors. for peace Mossad was claiming the opposite.

Yassin, the jailed Hamas leader.

the Mossad official in fabricat- the affair. Politicians and gen-

The present affair will dam- ing the information? Israeli age Mossad's reputation even commentators suggest he may have come from the ideological right and wanted to sabotage negotiations with Syria. They add he may also have been acting out of greed, suggesting that he was pocketing money inrended for a Syrian agent, or a

The US reportedly wants an explanation from Israel, which What were the motives of has set up its own inquiry into erals are denying that they took wrong decisions based on the false reports. But there is no doubt that the credibility of the agency has been permanently damaged among Israel's political and security decision-makers. "As far as we are concerned the Syrian mess' is much worse than the [Amman] affair," a Mossad source told the daily Yediot Aharanot. "It is hard to fathom how such a thing could sprout among us."

Aborigines' quest for land forces Australia to the polls

Aboriginal land rights have returned to divide Australia. After the upper house of parliament yesterday rejected a bill limiting Aboriginal rights. Robert Milliken in Sydney says the country faces an election dominated by race.

John Howard, prime minister of the conservative coalition government, has threatened to have parliament dissolved and to call a general election if he cannot win agreement to legislation which he says of political hrinkmanship, the Senate yesterday sank Mr Howard's bill when it struck out key clauses that he says are not negotiable.

The issue has catapulted Aboriginal land rights to the forefront of Australian politics and sparked the country's most fiery debate on race in memory. It has divided city and country against each other and pitched church leaders against politicians. Some churchmen have described the government's proposals as "racist", while government MPs have called on farmers and their families to boycott their local churches.

On Thursday, De-Anne Kelly, an MP in the National Party, the coalition's junior, rural-based partner, claimed that farmers in north Queensland were amassing illegal guns to fight off Aborigines who may lay claims to their land. She described Noel Pearson, a prominent Aboriginal barrister islation amounts to "legal npartheid" and has described those who drew it up as "racist

Mr Howard and his ministers have man-1.5 per cent of the population - as a threat from which the rest of Australia, particularly farmers and miners, must be protected. The prime minister raised the stakes earlier this week when he told government MPs that he had entered a "covenant" with farmers and miners from which he would not walk away. "We don't intend to be morally intimidated," he declared. Last Sunday, Mr Howard made an unprecedented address would protect outhack farmers from Abo- to the nation on prime-time television apriginal land claims. But, after a stormy week pealing to the Senate to pass his legislation

The dispute has arisen because of a High Court judgment last December over the leal status of pastoral leases. These leases were first granted late last century to allow white farmers to settle on vast outback holdings covering land the size of small European countries. Aborigines, whose forebears had lived on such lands for centuries, were not consulted and were often taken away and put in white-run reserves.

The concept of native land title itself was established only in 1992, when the High Court overturned the legal fiction that Australia was "empty land" when Europeans settled in 1788. That historic judgment allowed Aborigines to make claims only on unused land owned by the state. But in last December's judgment, on a case brought by the Wik people of north Queensland, the court extended its earlier ruling by saying that native title and pastoral leases could "thug". Mr Pearson says the disputed leg- that pastoral rights would always prevail in the event of any conflict.

The ruling has sent rural Australia into spin, with farmers demanding that Mr Whether they have intended to or not, Howard legislate to extinguish native title on farming leases altogether. His bill did aged to portray Aborigines - who comprise not go that far, but it did make it hard for Aborigines to make claims to such land hy refusing them the right to negotiate and insisting that they would need a physical. rather than a spiritual, or ancestral, connection with the land to qualify.

When the hill reached the Senate a fortnight ago, after passing the House of Representatives, Brian Harradine, an independent senator who holds the balance of power, joined with the Labor opposition. Greens and Democrats, to amend it in ways that would give Aborigines wider power to make claims

Now that the Senate has made those changes, Mr Howard can submit his original bill to the Senate once again after three months. If the Senate still refuses to pass it injact, he can advise the governorgeneral to dissolve parliament and call a general election, gambling that he will win and then call a joint sitting of both houses to pass the bill.

But it is a big gamble. The coalition, and Mr Howard personally, have failen dangerously behind Labor and their leader. Kim Beazley, in opinion polls. Leading newspapers have called on Mr Howard to ahandon any idea of an election fought on land rights, which everyone agrees would degenerate into an ugly focus on race and do Australia irreparable damage as it prepares to host the 2000 Olympics. But Mr Howard is stubborn. The further he digs himself in, the less inclined he will be to from Cape York, north Queensland, as a co-exist on the same land. It added, though, back down and to jeopardise his leadership.

Land and freedom: The concept of native title in the Australian outback was established in 1992. A further judgmen allowed native title to co-exist with pastoral rights Photograph: Colorif

Talk about a good offer. For a limited SMARTSULTE 97 period, buy Lotus SmartSuite 97 for £159

123 spreadsbee WORD PRO word processo APPROACE database

FREELANCE GRAPHIC

presentation graphic

ORGANIZER

time managemen

SCREEN CAM

Personal Competer Work

Saite at the Year 1997

and IBM's Simply Speaking (mp £49) comes free, Lotus SmartSuite 97 has ready-made templates and in-built Internal access. And now it's safer than ever, thanks to IBM AntiVirus that we're also offering for free as part of this promotion.

Simply Speaking, your voice appears as the Internet, with Lotus SmartSuite 97.

To order, call us on 9890 123 222, or pop in for a chal with your local dealer or visit our website at www.intos.com/wk

PC WORLD

LOTUS SMARTSUITE 97 AND IBM SIMPLY SPEAKING £159. NOW WITH IBM ARTIVIRUS FREE. This vaucher entities you to IBM AntiVirus FREE (rrp £36.25) when you buy the hoxed Lutus SmartSuite 97/IBM Simply Speaking set.

by croof of perchase of the based set of Lotus SmartSuite 97 and 1914 Vo Simply Speaking (which will be returned to you with your copy of Authrian) and the compl non cards from both IBM and Lotus. 2. In-pack reg SmartScale 97 and b) IBM Voicel (pe Simply Speaking, is order palify for the offer, both cards must be filled in and sent off to the eddress below to point 3 - please ignore the other diffesses on the cards. 3. In order to got your free copy of rims send this reacher along with your proof of purchase Offer, Product Fulfilment Programme, Lotus Development, Dult 12. Almans Industrial Estate, Cloghrae, Dublin 17, Iroland.

Green Flag Motoring Assistance All Color eventone stations and life IF WE'RE FASTER AND CHEAPER THAN THE AA OR RAC WHY JOIN THEM? How's this for speed? On average, Green Flag reach you in just 3S minutes. How's this for cost? Cover starts from only £29.50 per annum. That's fasier and cheaper than the AA and RAC. They can'l beal us. So join us. http://www.greenflag.co.uk order than the stance Competed Comment. Registered in England and Wales no. 82051. The thoras for it facts one Landon (C.S.A. 500 Full credit default anglishe on Rights.

"Yershied from customer substantion desistances .

Lines open 8am-10pm Mon-Fri, 9am-Spm Sat

EAGLE STAR

احكذا من الاعل

China: the dirty man of the East with a world to lose

China today produces only a tenth of the pollution that America inflicts on the planet. But by 2015, a rapidly-growing economy may lead to it overtaking the United States as the biggest producer of greenhouse gases.

Tereso Poole asks if it is too late to stop China turning into the world's biggest environmental

In Peking, the first sign that winter is approaching is when squadrons of tricycle carts appear on the streets ferrying stacks of coal briquettes which fuel the heating stoves in the city's traditional houses. The second sign is wheo one washes one's face at the end of the day and the water runs off a dark grey colour. By the time the snow comes, the air is so thick with particles that the flakes act like a welcome air-cleaning system, gathering the coal dust as they fall.

"Today most Chinese cities are covered by blankets of harmful airborne particulates," said a World Bank report on China this year. Two decades of rapid economic growth have hugely improved standards of living, but at considerable cost to the environment. As well as threatening the health of the Chinese, the country's rapidly growing combustion of fossil fuels is a key component in any calculation of how to limit global climate change over the next century. But China is adamant that discussions in Kyoto will not apply to developing countries.

Across China, the main pollution culprit is coal, which provided 78 per ceot of ing to European Commission officials, China admits that coal's contribution will not fall helow 70 per cent before 2050.

ide emissions of China are about half that of its people be constrained by environof the US, with the gap narrowing every mental targets which the Western world did primary energy demand in 1995. Accord-sessing the situation, pointing out that per of economic development? The Eurocapita greenhouse gas emissions now in China are just one-tenth that of the US.

Why, it asks, should a country still strug-At the moment, the total carbon diox- gling adequately to feed and clothe millions year. But China rejects this approach to as-not have to contend with at a similar stage In a position to earmark increased funds peans have some sympathy with China, unlike the US which is pressing for voluntary commitments in Kyoto.

With China embarking on socially risky reform of state enterprises, the environment is down the agenda. Asia, generally, is not for the environment following the recent banned in many industrial countries. Chieconomic upheavals. This means that dirty industries will probably continue to find a home in the East.

largest producer of ozone-depleting substances, after the production of these chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) and halons was tually take global warming seriously, be-na did commit itself to reducing 1996 consumption of these substances to the 1991 level, but that target was not met. Nor is In 1995, China became the world's it clear that China will fulfil plans to ban the use of CFCs in aerosols in 1998.

There is no doubt that China will even-

A cloud of pollution hanging in the air over the traffic on a denselypacked road in Peking. Two decades of economic growth have increased standards of living but damaged the environment Photograph: Rex Features cause if too has a lot to lose. According to Chinese studies, a 1 metre rise in sea levels, combined with storm surges and tides. would displace 67 million people at current population levels. However, there is a difficulty in trying tu focus minds on a problem which will not take effect for a century or more, when little is even being done to address existing

China is an environmental disaster area, as the following World Bank statutics illustrate:

 Children in Shenyang, Shanghai and other big cities have blood-lead levels averaging 80 per cent higher than levels considered dangerous to mental development:

 The levels of particles and sulphur in China's cities exceeds World Health Organisation and Chinese standards by two to five

• The leading cause of death in China is now chronic obstructive pulmonary disease - emphysema and chronic bronchitis - with mortality rates five times that in the US: In 1996, less than 7 per cent of municidal wastewater was treated:

And acid rain affects one-third of Chi-

"Every now and again you see elements of fear in the Chinese government about the extent of the environmental damage which is done by their industry," said an EU official in town this week. But China wants help from the West - primarily technology - to help clean up the mess, it such a clean-up is to everybody's advantage.

Just as Malaysia maintains that the developed world should help pay to safeguard the remaining tropical rain forests, in the 21st century China may start making the same demands over measures to scale back its greenhouse gases.

North-South rift threatens to sink climate treaty

Poor countries are furious about the rich world's proposal to limit their rising emissions of pollution. Nicholas Schoon in Kyoto explains why they are so outraged.

The great north-south divide has long threatened to scupper tions in Japan. With only five days left, the threat loomed larger last night.

That was because of New treaty should be wideoed to inworld as well as the wealthy, industrialised conorries.

"It's absolutely unacceptable." said the chief negotiator hig developing countries, espefor the developing world, Mark eially India and China, must sign Nwandosya, a Tanzanian engineering professor. Argentina's rapid emission growth. representative appealed to New Zculand: "Please, withdraw this proposal for the good of the en this demand firm expression conference."

The unfinished treaty, now the subject of late-night wrangling, was never meant to cover the Third World, Two-anda-half years ago, in Berlin, rich countries agreed that by the time the conference now under way alone - would have agreed on what cuts to make in their climate-changing emissions over the first decade of the next century. It was called the Berlin Mandate, and it bound only the developed world, because it has greenhouse gases to date. These countries still produce more than half the annual total.

But emissions are rising fast in the developing countries and equal and then overtake, that of the developed countries

Seeing that, and under Zealand's proposal that the pressure from a Republicandominated Congress, the Clinclude most of the developing ton administration wants to shift the goalposts.

In the run-up to Kyoto the US has been proposing that the up to at least slowing their

Australia feels the same way, and now New Zealand has givwith yesterday's written pro-

It says that at Kyoto the developing countries must promise, by 2002, precisely how much they will slow down the rise in their emissions over the next 12 years up to 2014, Only in Kyota ended they - and they - the very poorest nations, mostly in sub-Saharan Africa, would be excluded. The conference bost, Japan, said the proposal provided "a good basis for negotiations".

The EU and Britain were more lukewarm, saylog that produced the vast majority of while Third World countries must be brought ioto the treaty soon, this was not expected at Kyoto. The average Chinese produces one-eighth the global-warming carbon dioxide of the UN climate treaty negotia- by about 2015 the Third World's the average American, and the combined anoual output will average Indian only one-twen-

Professor Nwandosya suggested that if countries such as the US insist on the Third World making undertakings now, the Kyoto negotiations will fail and there would be no global warming treaty.

"Global health warnings" should be attached to advertisements for oil and petrol, a pension-fund director suggested at the conference yesterday.

They would be similar to the warnings which accompany all advertisements for tobacco: a short government message stating that consumption of fossil fuels was threatening dangerous changes in climate.

"This is a precaulionary measure which all governments can readily take," said Tessa Tennant, of NPI Global Care In-

CONDENSATION

Condensation and Dampness - these are the enemies within, and the trouble they can cause inside your home can be very expensive to remedy.

Streaming windows, pools of water on sills, peeling wallpaper and mould spots are just some of the most obvious miseries these vandals can inflict on your

But there is one really effective way to defend your home - the Ebac Homedry dehumidifier.

Just one Ebac Homedry can protect your home and make it feel warmer and more comfortable.

The Ebac Homedry comes in a range of finishes designed to fit into your home and is quiet and economical to run.

To get all the evidence call Ebac on 01388 602602 or write to Ebac Ltd, Bishop Auckland, DL14 9AL

Europe's best selling Dehumidifiers

Available from: Aliders, Apollo 2000, Comet, Currys, Euronics, Electricity Plus, Focus DIY, Homebase, House of Fraser, John Lewis Partnership, Miller Bros., Northern Electric, Northern Ireland Electricity, Seeboard, Selected Co-ops, Scottish Power Lifestyle Plus, Tempo Electrical and Compuler Superstores and all good electrical retailers

For your Nearest Stockist Call 01388 602 602 enquiry@ebac.co.uk

Britain struggles to meet emission cuts as demand for electricity surges carbon will be emined into the atmosphere by British householders between 1995 and 2000 as they take advantage of cheaper energy, a report for fall overall by about 22 per the Government has contirmed. It says greater consumer vatisation will mean an 11 per cent increase in demand for electricity and a 5 per cent increase in demand for gas. Extra electricity use will pump between four and t0 according to Oxford Economic Research Associates (Oxera), depending on how much of the demand is met by coal-fired power stations.

The increase in demand for gas will add a further million tons of earbon. The government has already admitted in a written parliamentary answer that another million

Up to 12 million extra tons of tons of carbon will be emitted a wide variety of schemes inbecause of the cut in VAT on fuel to 5 per cent. The report says domestic gas and electricity prices will cent between 1995 and 2000. Although it was completed in August, ministers only agreed choice brought about by pri- to publish it last week in response to parliamentary questions from the Labour MP Alan Simpson.

In another development which will affect Britain's ability to meet the pledges it million tons into the atmos- makes at Kyoto, it has phere in the five-year period, emerged that the Energy-Saving Trust, which channels money from the Government and the electricity industry into energy-saving schemes, is to have its hudget halved.

Staff at the trust are expecting to hear this month whether the cut planned by the Conservative government, will be implemented. The trust channels funds to cluding cheap, energy-efficient fridges for low-income families and help in buying high-efficiency boilers, insulation and thermostats.

Andrew Warren, director of the Association for the Conservation of Energy, said Britain's commitments to cut pollution would be hard to meet. "If the government helieves it is proper to have falling fuel prices for social reasons you have to take counter-cyclical measures."

Angela Eagle, environment minister, said there would be a consultation on energy consumption after Kyolo. "The ... report will be taken into account in the governmeot's consideration of future regulation of the energy industry and of the achievement of energy efficiency climate change targets."

— Fran Abrams, Political Correspondent

nd is nigh: stagehands get ready to move in as the Peter Hall Company take their last bow tonight at the Old Vic

Photograph: Ruc Xairer

Exeunt omnes. Farewell then to the Old Vic

Eight months ago Sir Peter Hall, founder of the RSC, former director of the National Theatre, launched his own round-the-clock, seven-day-a-week repertory company at London's historic Old Vic. Now the 'For Sale' signs have gone up and the curtain must fall. As Hall & Co prepare to give their final performance tonight, Jasper Rees watches from the wings.

the Old Vlc to sec Shining Souls, a homeless man sat with hand cupped at the foot of the central pillar of the famous old portico. From tomorrow morning, the company which for the last eight months bas occupied the building will be able to join him on the pavement. The Peter Hall Company comes to the end of its season tonight and, because the Old Vic bas gone on sale, will not be back in Fehruary as originally intended. It too has lost the roof over its head.

When darkness falls on the Old Vie it will affect the local economy of Waterloo from beggars upwards. But it isn't quite the end for the Old Vic, and maybe not the end at ail. Slava's Snow Show moves in for three weeks over Christmas, by which time we may know who they're really putting everyhas bought the building from its thing into it, working through Canadian owners, Ed and David Mirvish. Most of the hids invited in an informal tender process are apparently from parties with theatrical plans for the place. But not all potential buyers aim to use the building for performance, and would require permission for putting it to alternative use from the local planning authority. It was recently reported in The Stage that Alan Whitehead, who runs the Secrets strip chain, would be interested in turning il into a national lapdancing centre. He must have read somewhere that it used to be the home of Laurence Olivier's National Theatre.

two-pronged sense of loss in the from what we huilding, stemming from the understand fact that both the resident company and the building's management are preparing to evacuale. It's very easy to confuse the two, because the identities of both have become so quickly intertwined. People who work for the company speak as fondly of the theatre itself as of Hall's ambitious rotation of a classic and modern repertoire. "I can't really explain how brilliant it's been." says wig mistress Sarab Palmer. "I was with the RSC for 11 years before, but this bas been more family-oriented. We knew it was special right from the very heginning. The building is very beautiful, and we're all in one place. We have just become closer and closer as the year went on. Everybody is so enthusiastic about working that their lunch breaks and tea breaks, It's very rare." Tonight Sir Peter Hall will invite everyone associated with the huilding up on stage for a final bow. "I'll prohably cry a lot," says Palmer. "There won't he a dry eye in the bouse," agrees Greg Hicks, who, as Edgar in lonight's final performance of King Lear, gets to speak the last lines the Peter Hall Company will deliver on This stage. "I will find it very difficult," he says, "I'm privately extremely touched that it bappens to be me that's saying it. God knows, I hope it's not the last time that Shakespeare will

In the meantime, there's a this stage, but there's no reason to suppose that won't be the case."

Not everyone in the building specifically lamenting that departure of the Peter Hall Company. Andrew Leigh has been the Old Vic's general manager since 1979, three years before the Mirvisbes purchases the theatre. "It is a wrench but 18 years is an awfully long time to stay anywhere. It's probably good for me that I'm leaving. I think the acute sensation will probably come on 31 January. when I come to lock the door and close it down and switch out the lights and nobody else is here. I and my assistant and the accountant will be the last peo- a week. "Even now it's difficult the final month to dispose of the theatre's archive. "I am determined that whoever acquires the Old Vic should not do what many other theatre owners do. which is just to throw it all away." The papers are destined for the theatre collection in the University of Bristol drama department, where there is ple to leave." He will be using nanced by the Mirvishes. Down on the stage door. Matt Harrington is relinquishing his post after a six-year vigil. During the Peter Hall

The last line is from Edgar:

The weight of this sad time we must obey,

Shall never see so much, nor live so long.'

has been three or four times as busy for me. But it's such a family atmosphere, so it's going to feel like the hreak-up of a family. Friends say, 'why don't you get a proper joh? But they

The actor whom Harrington has signed in most regularly this year is Greg Hicks, who has taken on five different roles, including his lank-haired.

dribbling Pozzo in Waiting for

ROBERT HANKS

THE WEEK ON RADIO

don't understand."

a room especially devoted to the Old Vic archive. It is partly fiof cuphoria." Hicks, like many others in the building, has worked in large companies before, including the National Theatre, "hul you have a structural difference Company's lenure, he says, "il here", he to grow a career like you grow

a pot plant," he says. "You're very rarely in the same place of stable growth, which is what is what is so brilliant about this company, it was a company that would grow together. Hopefully it will have a continuity. In an ideal world it would be here.

Were Peter Hall to come on stage and say. 'On I January I start another company'. I think there would be a genuine sense this ເກະ small, warm building with a lifeblood Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say. The oldest hath borne most. We that are young right back to when it was first built in Exeunt with a dead march, carrying the bodies the 1860s. Without be-says, "Here is

ing sentimenabsolutely feel that in this building you can try anything out and you wouldn't be condemned for doing so. The RSC for actors is a more nervous empire. Sometimes people get lost in the system. This building breeds a sense of security. Plus the fact that there is a genuine sense in this company of everybody getting a good crack of the whip." That includes the stagebands, half a dozen of whom were re-Godot, and was at one point percruited as extras for Leur. forming no less than nine times The secret of the relationship between the building and the company lies in their mutual suitability. Each has had something to give the other, and it's unlikely that either will find that with other panners. The impresario Bill Kenwright is looking for a home for the company north of the river. "But it's not going to be so easy in the West End," says Hicks, "just by virtue of the fact that it's the West End." Meanwhile, there will be a diaspora of talent. Leigh is going to the Shaftsbury. Palmer has been offered work at the Globe and the Young Vic. Stagehand Stuart Goodier says: "I may be doing my own oneman show. Stagehand work is filling in for when I can get some acting work." "Other employers," says Hicks, who is bound for the Glasgow Citizens, "look at people who work in this building. either at the administrative level or the stage management level or in costumes or wigs, and think: if they can make that work, they must be good."

Harrington on the stage door is "going to Chicago", he says. It's unclear whether he's referring to the city or the musical. Both seem light years away from a theatre where darkness. bar the brief intervention of Slava's Snow Show, is about to fall. As the audience rushes to earth the last show, it's almost as if you can bear the front-of-house announcement on the PA. "Ladies and gentlemen, will you please vacate your seats. The Old Vic closes in one minute."

The final performance of 'King Lear is tonight at 7.30pm. Boxoffice: 0171-928 7010

It's far from over for laddism's nice guy ences warm to him as though

Lee Hurst Wimbledon Theatre

The game's up for New Lads. critics are whispering. They think it's all over for They Think It's All Over.

There was precious little evidence of the decline and fall of the New Laddish empire, however, in the reception accorded to Lee Hurst's stand-up show at the Wimbledon Theatre on Thursday. His every gag was wildly applauded by a very mixed audience which encompassed both granules and girli 28.

On They Think It's All Over. Hurst's non-stop, over-competitive banter can get on your wick. But on his own with no one else to best, he is much more relaxed, able to run with his more inspired riffs without trampling over other people.

That's not to say that the whole show is as smooth as his trademark pate. Ironically, for instance, his closing routine about They Think It's All Over along the lines of "ob, the laughs we have hebind the scenes" - rather dragged. There he were that funny bloke from the puh who's just happened to wander on stage.

He got hig whoops of recognition when he declared that every bloke in this room will agree that buying a kebab on a Saturday night is the final admission that you're not going to pull. Even the kebab-shop owner joins in - would you like chilli sauce on your no-sex evening?"

For a man known as the most laddish thing this side of a stag night. Hurst is also capable of surprising subtlety. He imagined a yappie on the phone flicking through his Filofax on the phone at the moment the IRA bomh at the Nat West Tower went off: "I've got a window in my diary. No, I really bave got a window in my diary.

Whatever label is attached to him - laddish, childish, or just plain daft - Hurst is an undeniably accomplished and amiable stand-up. As an encore he generously ceded the stage to an audience-member who came on to propose publicly to his girlfriend. When sbe were also sequences blue enough to bring a hlush to the cheeks of the stucco angels strumming harps around the proscenium arch.

At other times, the show vecred into childish material which chimed rather 100 readily with the primary-colours set and teddy-hears-andballoons backdrop left up from the afternoon's Plandays stageshow. Did we need to hear about his bout of diarrhoea in quite such detail?

Hurst's act affords him the opportunity to show off his best profile as Likable Lee. Audiaccepted from the front of the circle. Hurst proved his ad lib acumen by calling up to her. "There's a car available if you want to get away. We've gol a safe-house ready. Salman's a really nice guy - you'll get on with him.

With that, he went off to the sort of cheers once reserved for World Cup-winning goals scored by another diamond geezer called Hurst.

Lee Hurst plays Northampion Derngate (01604 24811) tonight, All the same. The majority of and Phymouth Pavilions (01752 229922) on Monday.

James Rampton

A homespun Irish 👍 tale with heart

Tricycle Theatre, London

Sive, a teenage orphan living with her aunt, uncle and grandmother in the unvielding climate of rural Ireland, is desperate to learn the truth about her parents. "Ali I know about my mother is that she died when I was a baby." Unbeknown to her, she was conceived out of wedlock and her absent father drowned just days after she was born. Anyone who saw Martin McDonagh's The Cripple of Inishmaan will be experiencing a weird kind of déjà vu. That play pivots around an almost identical set of circumstances. This one also opens with a scene between a cantankerous grandmother and her tough daughter-in-law, thus mirroring McDonagh's first bit. The Beauty Queen of Leenane. Before anyone leaps to the conclusion that John B Keane is clambering aboard McDonagh's "Oirish" bandwagon, there are two crucial facts to consider, First, Keane is Irish through and through as opposed to Camberwell's Me-Donagh. Secondly. Sive was written in 1959, before Me-Donagh was born. This engaging tale is the genuine anicle. Then, as now, the key concern for poverty-stricken farmers is money. Mike (doughty Vinnie McCahe) comes home having carned an impressive £16 and 111 shillings. This is put into harsh perspective when he learns from his intractable wife Mena (implacable Marion O'Dwyer) that thanks to the local matchmaker, they could make £1911 if they agree to marry off their niece. The groom has "grass for 20 cows and fal cattle besides"; only trouble is.

he's nearly four times Sive's age. The rest of this everyday story of country folk is taken up with the tussie of their consciences as they lry to separate tomance from reality.

Keane builds up the cases for and against with a ripe poetic language. "Never, if the sun, moon and stars fall down out of the heavens," is Mike's initially horrified reaction to his wife's fierce urgings. Elsewhere, notably in the contrived structure with its all-too-convenient appearances and absences, the almost homespun tale is, frankly, bokey. But just as you are about to write him off, he builds a scene of high tension around an nuread letter sitting centre-stage, its. inflammatory contents burning

That so much of this amusing play works, despite its creakiness, is a tribute to the cast in this Watford Palace Theatre co-production. Director Ben Barnes misses opportunities to investigate and ignite atmospheres between some of. the characters, but Simon O'Gorman as the matchmaker fills the stage with energy. heginning with a seemingly benign cunning and building to a captivating, greedy ruthlessness Keane knows there are good yarns and much dramatic mileage to be spun out of closed communities. Although he leans towards old-fashioned melodrama, he has one characteristic (in spades) that Me-Donagh entirely lacks: heart. The final plot twist is affecting rather than merely elever. Instead of soullessly parading his dramatist's skills, his surprise takes you deeper into the world of his characters.

To 17 Jan (0171-328 1000) David Benedict

THE WEEK IN THE ARTS DAVID LISTER

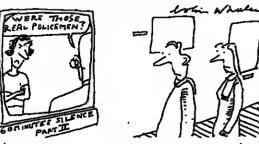

Gillian Wearing is one of the nicer Turner prize winners, chatting affably and openly about her "video art" at the prize dinner last Tuesday until the moment I raised the question of her most famous video - 60 Minutes Silence consists of a group of policemen standing motionless for the best part of an hour until the odd one shuffles, another twitches, a third lets rip a eathartic shriek. Were they real policemen. asked? Ms Wearing became coy and stuttered. We'll take that as a no, then. The Tate press office will neither evafirm nor deny that the subjects may not actually be policemen, nor will Ms Wearing's dealer. Why all the evasion over a prize-winning work of art? Could it be the judges comment publicised by the Tate that "her work reveals the often strange or disturbing realities that lie beneath the apparently calm surface of everya ricb insight into the lives of ordinary people." Is it still an insight into contemporary living if the people are acting a role? oul a leaflet with a plea by artist Definitely, says Virginia Button, Turner Prize historian and assistant keeper in the Modern Collection at the Tate. "The insights still hold good." That has to be taking art criticism on to another planet.

Some of the talk at the Turner Prize dinner was that two artists bad turned down invitations to be on the shortlist. Julian Opie, who has an installation at Heathrow Airport, was one. Perhaps the reason artists give up the chance of £20,000 and national glory is fear of having their work analysed by contemporary art experts.

day appearances. It also offers Some slogans adopted by the campaign for free admissions to museums could do with a bit of spin doctoring. BECTU has put

Anthony Gormley: "I feel passionately that museums should be free - the only way both art and life can meaningfully interact without let or hindrance. It is not a commercial relationship. One should go to museums as often as one goes to the supermarket, to recharge your imagination larder." Not the greatest analogy. Man and supermarket do bave a commercial relationship. You pay to sample the wares.

Meanwhile, different attitudes are evident north of the border. I visited the Museum of Scotland currently being built in Edinburgh to show Scotland's history. The museum opens in a year's time and the views from the top over Edinburgh and the surrounding countryside are spectacular. The different attitudes to museum charges come in the appeal to raise money for the building. Some donors have said they will only give money if charges are imposed. At least one of these is a well-known celebrity. I am not allowed to divulge his name. Even though

I've started, I cannot finish...

Too 'Disney' to be life-affirming When humour doesn't come or acoustic variety. In fact, the off, we abuse it in purely negative terms - it's unfunny, is all. When pathos fails to move us, we have a whole battery of words to train on it: not just sentimental but mawkish, maudlin, up microphone. schmaltzy, soppy, sloppy, slushy.

All of which apply to To the Wedding, last week's Sunday Play on Radio 3. I was looking forward to this. For one thing, it is based on a novel by John Berger, who also helped with the job of dramatising it, and his feature Will It Bc a Likeness? - a playful, buttonholing sequence of paradox and speculation on modern values - was one of the highlights of last year. For another thing, it was produced by Theatre de Complicite, one of our most exciting and original theatre companies, and you'd expect them to have some fresh ideas about radio drama.

Not so, unfortunately. Although much of the play was recorded on location around Europe - the characters are converging from various points on the wedding of Gino and his HIV-positive bride, Ninon this only paid off at one or two production observed quite rigidly the traditional patternings of radio drama - dialogue placed firmly in the foreground, narrative voiceover done with a close-

But you doubt that a more lively acoustic could have convinced you that this cast of characters, with their simple dignity, earthy wisdom and pure, sensual enthusiasms (food, sex, dancing) were anything but puppets. twitching to the tune of Berger's simplistic Arcadian politics - he wants to celebrate the persistence of family, and love, and peasant joys in the jaws of modern capitalism. And much of Berger's tanguage is wooden and mock-profound - like Ninon's lament, when she learns that she has the virus, that she faces "latex solitude for ever and ever" (not exactly a great advenfor safe sex, given that the play was broadcast to mark World Aids Day). It all ended with Gino and Ninon dancing on the sand near the mouth of the Po ("We don't need music," she tells him). The intention, clearly, was to be points in terms of life-like sound life-affirming; but if life can only be affirmed through such artificial, Disneyfied joys, you start to wonder whether it's really all it's cracked up to be.

It's a relief to turn from this to the lightness and scepticism of Hello, Darling, I'm Home (Radio 2, Tuesday), in which Russell Davies looked at how the BBC has depicted the family over the years. This was a far more politically searching programme than To the Wedding: Davies showed how a caricuture of the nuclear family (mum, dad, boy, girl) has been permitted to dominate broadcasting in a way it has never dominated society. and in doing so made you realise how conservative and narrow that vision of the family is.

He also fitted in a range of alternative human experience: Terry Scon's hizarre obsession with the depth of his daughter's sexual knowledge; the Oedipal excesses of the Ronnie Corbett vehicle Somy!; Beryl Bainhridge describing how her mother-inlaw tried to shoot her; and a long, if ultimately fruitless, consideration of the role of the motherin-law joke. No sentimental gravity bere - just lightness and

اح يكذا من الاعل

Ever heard the Algerian national anthem? Why Nike wanted you to, and how the stunt failed

It was the Consumer's Revenge. Or the PR mon's Nightmarc. The Olympic champion, Quincy Watts, was into the back straight of the 400 metres and the gold looked in the bag when suddenly the sole of his Nike shoc parted from its upper. Watts staggered across the finishing line in fourth place. It was a spectacular and humiliating public relations disaster. For the athlete was at that point the focus of a television commercial for super-cushioned Air Max shoes made by Nike. Watts took his shoes and very publicly dumped them in a rubbish bin.

That was at the World Championships at Stuttgart in 1995, but they are still gloating at Adidas, Nike's chief rival, where the year after staff £99 and £200 are common. Football punched the air in triumph wheo their shirts, running pants and sweatshirts man Donovan Bailey, in the space of just 9.84 seconds, became the Fastest Man in the World wearing Adidas

Not that Nike did not get its revenge. At the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta 12 firms paid £28m each to be named official sponsors. Adidas was one of them. Nike was not, But it stole the thunder by buying up every prominent hillboard in town and plastering them with hard-hitting Nike ads which stole all the media attention, it also built its own Olympic village and then paid huge sums to all the top stars to appear there. It was so successful that in the run-up to the receot Olympic hid the games' governing body insisted that every bidding city had to buy up all its poster sites for a six-week period covering the games to prevent a repeat.

So Nike have turned their attention to football and the World Cup in France. There, Adidas have paid to set up an official "village" beneath the Eiffel Tower, Nike have been out-manocurred by the authorities so that they are able to locate their village only on the outskirts of the French capital. In response Nike have set the marketing industry abuzz with reports that the firm is to spend £20m on stunts to upstage Adidas again. Adidas are threatening "counter-stunts".

It's what the industry calls "guerilhi marketing". It is aggressive and impertinent, according to Roger Baird uf Marketing Week, who has spent the past month unsuccessfully trying to find out what the stunts might be. Of course, there may be none. Hype is un integral part of the conflict which for all its "guerilla" tag is taking on the characteristics of a full-scale setpiece big battle which makes the uncient conflict between Coke and Pensi seem tame.

Indeed Nike has recently beaten other pushy contenders in the UK advertising, marketing and PR industries list of Tup 20 "super-hrands". Sportswear is now the hig league. Almost half the shoes sold in the United States now are trainers.

More than that, sportswear is serious fashion. Not that it has that much to do with sport. Everyone from President Bill Clinton to Liam Gallagher of Oasis wears Adidas (for contrast. Blur's Damon Albam wears Nike). Only about a fifth of the gear that Adidas sells is actually worn for sport. "Eighty per cent of our products are used (or leisure," said an Adidas spokesman, "Sport has become the pop of the Nineties. Sportswear sales have gone at a phenomenal rate in the past five years." The ultimate endorsement is that of the crim-popular training shoe among burglars is the Nike Air Max, according to one police survey. Nike has begun to open Nike-only stores, styled in the portentous manner of a cultic temple rather than a mere shoe-shop.

Image is everything. It may only be Nike's technical experts who have its trademark tick -- which Nike-meo call the "swoosh" - tattooed on their street-smart kids with it shaved into their stubbled hair.

But image costs. Between 1987 and 1990, the average price of a training shoe in Britain doubled from £24.99 to £49.99, and today, prices of between 'Eighty per cent of Adidas products are for leisure. Sport has become the pop of the Nineties' are all similarly inflated. Retail prices are often 600 per cent of what it actually costs to produce the goods.

It is not hard to see where a tot of that margin goes. Nike pays out huge sums to major sporting superstars such as Tiger Woods, Pete Sampras and Eric Cantona. Michael Jordan, the legendary point guard for the Chicago Bulls basketball team, is reputed to carn $10m a year from his Nike deal. Andre Agassi, who wore a Nike baseball cap throughout his Wimhledon triumph, is paid about $2m a year. They do their best to earn the money. Michael Johnson wore gold trainers with a massive Nike tick when he won his Olympic gold medals in the 200 metres and 400 metres, Shane Warne, the Australian bowler, wears a Nike

It is all along way from the small shop lit only by a paraffin lamp in which in the 1920s Adi Dassler and his brother Rudolf, two sports-mad cobblers, began in Herzogenaurach, not far from Nuremberg, to make shoes for track and field athletes and footballers. In 1936, the black athlete Jesse Owens disproved Hitler's Aryan theories at the Berlin Olympics when he won four Olympic gold medals wearing their shoes. The distinctive Adidas hrand mark of three white stripes was developed in Those days as a way uf holstering the shoes' sides.

More than 30 years later, Bill Bowerman, a track coach at the University of Oregon, and Phil Knight, a college ruoner, founded a similar business in America. The name Nike - the Greek goddess of victory - came to one of Knight's partners in a dream. A local graphic designer was paid $35 to come up with the Nike

Today both have moved beyond running shoes into a whole range of sportswear. Nike now spends £5.6hn on marketing alone and commands about 35 per cent of the massive globat murket. Adidas trails behind with £2bn, but it has recovered from the losses incurred earlier this decade when it was owned by the disgraced inal classes: the most - French politician Bernard Tapie, who BY PAUL VALLELY from the period of the Antiquities hought it from Dassler's widow. sored by Mizuno to race in "wonder former chairman Robert Louis Dreyproduct range, adopted a more prime. aggressive marketing strategy and thighs, but it is not uncommon to see overtaken the industry's third big player, Reebok, which was the marct leader in the 1980s but which now spends a mere $400m a year on sponsorship. Behind the big three is a pack of smaller companies such as Pony, Puma and Mizuno, and Britain's Umbro, which has stitched up the English football kit scene.

Until recently football remained outside the Nike sphere of influence. But the company's strategists have recently decided that this is the great hole in the sportswear market. First they signed an eight-year sponsorship deal with the US Soccer Federation worth £74m - a small investment, its analysis reckon, against the time when football takes off in America. Then, earlier this year, Nike signed the higgest sporsorship deal in the history of marketing - a £200m package with the Brazilian national football squad. To that they have added the national squads of Italy, Holland, Nigeria and series of individual players, including a £10m contract with the Liverpool striker Robbie Fowler. They are ready to challeoge Adidas, which has done deals with Germany, France, Spain, States, Argentina, Yugoslavia, Romania, Sweden, Hungary, Morocco and China, But at a cost. It is not just that clashes occur when a player is sponsored by one firm and his team by another. They try to keep that quiet, although news of it leaked when half of the England rugby team appeared in a variety of footwear against Canada at Twickenham recently. Nike was annoyed to discover that the ace goal-kicker Rob Andrew preferred boots made by Mizuno. They insisted that he blacked out the tell-tale white marks in future. Nobody who knows Nike was surprised. They are brash and arrogant, hut they are in such a strong market positioo that you ignore them at your peril," said one insider. Indeed. But their hrashness can cause them problems. During the 1992 Barcelona Olympics, they had the magisterial pole-vaulter Sergi Buteka at the centre of their ad campalgn. "Spanish air traffic control has been informed said the ad. It was embarrassing, therefore, when Buteka "no-heighted". Then there was the great 1500 metres hope, the Algerian Noureddine Morceli, another Nike athlete, "Ever heard the Algerian national anthem? You will," said the Nike ad. And everyone did - but only when another Algerian. Hassiba Boulmerka, won one of the womeo's races - wearing someone else's shoes. Poor old Morceli was thrashed. Another Nike great white hope, Daniel O'Brien, didn't even get through the US trials.

The schadenfreude was not just Nike's, of course. In a world of rash claims, the 100 metres world recordholder, the American Leroy Burrell, was spon-

Under the chairmanship of Saatchi's shoes that will smash the world record". He lost to Carl Lewis, who fus. it has almost totally revamped its everyone had written off as past his

But it was not just the reckless predictions which made Nike ads controversial. There was something about their aggressive tone. "It got them a lot of coverage in Atlanta," recalls Roger Baird. "They had ads with athletes throwing up as a sign of how gruelling the games were."

than 100 youths had been killed for their trainers in the previous couple of years, a Nike commercial with the catchline "Get Some" was taken off the air after being said to glamorise gang warfare. A black civil rights group led by Jesse Jackson urged a boycott of Nike products for a time. But the row did nothing to depress Nike's general sales. Nor, apparently, did the cootroversy when US Muslims protested about a new Nike logo inteoded to look like flames on a line of baskethall shoes with names like "Air Bakin" and "Air B-Que" - unfortuoately the flames resembled the word "Allah" written in Arabic script. Korea. They have also bought up a After a threat to urge Muslims around the world to boycott Nike products. the firm withdrew the line and donated $50,000 for a playground to an Islamic clementary school in the United

Then there was the "good-12-evil" ad, in which a team captained by Eric Cantona saw off a team of cyberspace and ended the match by booting the ball right through the stomach of one monster. It was banned from Danish cinemas and criticised by the football Nike objected to the fact that almost authorities, Fifa and the International Olympic Committee.

and one which is still growing in the United States, is over the low pay and appalling conditions of sport-shoe rivals. makers in Thailand and the Philippines. A report by Christian Aid showed that a woman worker producing Nike trainers in China would have to work nine hours a day, six days a week for 15 centuries, on current wages, to match the £929,113 salary of Nike's head, Phil Knight. One factory in Vietnam was reported to have made 61 women run two laps around a plant to discipline them for failing to meet production quotas and for wearing improper footwear.

President Clinton, in an attempt In Chicago, at a time when more reverse mooths of disastrous publicity generated by the reports of ill-treatment of factory workers around the world, got Nike and other companies to sign an unprecedented agreement, a code of conduct oo employment practices around the globe. Nike and the others would undertake to honour a 60-hour maximum working week --with overtime not to be forced - and to respect the minimum wage laws of the countries in which plants are located. They also undertook not won gold medals for both 200m and to employ workers under the age of 14. In return, companies abiding by the code will be able to sew "No Sweat" labels into their products to reassure shoppers that in spending their money they are nol indirectly supporting slave labour. It may not be enough. "They've agreed a code of conduct but they haven't agreed on how to monitor it, Bethan Brookes, a researcher for Christian Aid. They want to monitor it themselves or get their auditors to do it. We think that's not independent enough." Nor do many US consumers. Recent ports are that American football stars are ing terminating their sponsorship cootracts, disquieted are they. The market for training shoes has in any case taken a downturn in the United States. Shares in Nike have fallen heavily in the US this summer. American kids are turning their backs on trainers in favour of more rugged footwear. Whether the cause is concern over ethics or mere changes in teenage fashion, one thing is clear: the European and world-wide soccer market becomes increasingly important to Nike and its

> Nike was annoyed that England's Rob Andrew preferred a rival. They insisted that he black out the tell-tale white marks

Nike has begun to take soccer very seriously. Europe's footballers are now finding that the money to be made from sponsorship can far outstrip their earnings from sport. Paolo Maldini, the Italian footballer, made more last summer from a Nike poster campaign than from playing in Euro 96. (Other soccer stars featured in the campaign, including Eric Cantona, picked up large amounts of money without even kicking a ball in the tournament.)

Already an direct impact on the sport is discernible. In the summer Nike acted as a broker in football's higgest-ever transfer - the £18m deal of Brazilian star Ronaldo, whom Nike sponsors, from Spain's Barcelona to Inter Milan of Italy. At first, insiders say, the company advised him against the transfer. At one stage, to protect its investment in the Brazilian star, Nike considered buying out his contract and lending him out to its sponsored football clubs around the world. Eventually a deal was done, but it was the first one in which a sponsor has interfered with football's decision-making process.

To Nike and Adidas there is nothng new in the idea. Earlier this year they organised two artificial events which have no bearing upoo the formats of the athletics the events were rooted in. They created artificial distances. Donovan Bailey is Michael Johnson was hilled as the Olympic 100m champ vs the Olympic 200m champ and as Canada vs USA. But in reality the $150m showdown at Toronto's SkyDome was Adidas vs Nike. Johnson, the American sprinter who 400m at last summer's Olympic Games, had signed a six-year $12m endorsement deal with Nike, Bailey was already in the Adidas stable. The hype before the event was formidable but the race itself was a flop, with Johnson pulling up short with an injured leg halfway through. He was ignominiously takeo off the course in a golf-cart.

The day before, in Holland, Adidas had put up a $1m prize for a world two-mile record. The protagonists were Noureddine Morceli of Algeria and Ethiopia's Haile Gebreselassie two of Adidas's leading clients. The winner would get the $1m if he went under the eight-minute mark. They failed. But non-Adidas athletes were re- not invited, so the impressive Kenyan runner, Daniel Komen, who may well have beaten them both, was ex-Nike's top cluded, By coincidence, Komen hapens to run tor Nike.

Will we see such manipulation in football now? Nike have recently signed the Scottish champions, Rangers. "Nine out of ten: must do better," says the ad slogan it has ostentatiously posted outside Celtic's ground - Celtic set the record of nine league titles in a row, which Rangers has now equalled and hopes to heat. It is typical Nike. But what practical consequences, insiders are beginning to wooder, may follow when the Nike-men start pulling the strings?

Nike hopes to acquire an investment in the England team now. England is in the process of negotiating a new kit deal. All the big global companies, including Adidas, have tendered to supply the national team's kit, which is currently provided by Umbro. Nike are the favourites to replace them. Not everyone will feel easy at

EDITOR: ANDREW MARK DEPUTY EDITOR: COLIN HUGHES. ADDRESS: 1 CANADA SQUARE. CANARY WHARF. LONDON E14 5DL TELEPHONE: 0171 293 2000 OR 0171 345 2000 FAX: 0171 293 2435 OR 0171-345 2435

Once the British knew of faraway places and distant cultures by trading with them, invading them, chrisoanising them and colonising them. Now we play football with them. On the whole, football is the better way. The popular stereotypes of imperialism and war - of noble savages, hackward races, cannibals, pygmies, nabobs, of heartless huns and inscrutable Japanese - are giving way to an equality of respect and a better understanding of the world. Football is the most powerful agent of modero internationalism.

This week's World Cup draw was one vast, popular geography lesson. Who knew or cared that Colombia had been turned into a land of refugees, its government powerless to stop right-wing paramilitaries wreaking revenge on Marxist guerrilla sympathisers, until England drew it in Group G on Thursday night? After all, the only reason most people could tell it apart from a space shuttle before Thursday, or know which continent it is in, was because Faustino Asprilla plays for Newcastle United.

The Scots, meanwhile, might feel that they know too much already about Brazil and Norway, a tribute to the educative power of global sporting prowess.

Who, though, could have expected the staid International Herald Tribune to print the entire draw on its front page under the headline, "Cup draw pairs US and tran"? The idea of a nation peopled entirely by fundamentalist mullahs and women in deep purdah taking to the turf in studded boots, shorts and shirts covered in advertising logos is enough to give the popular imagination pause. As the Trib rather drily commented, "it is hard to imagine two countries with less love for each other than the United States and Iran" Jexcept possibly Iran's neighbour traq). Perhaps the shared experience of the offside rule will bring greater mutual un-

Football has already started to dissolve the myth of Iran as a drear theocracy, as Robert Fisk reported in our pages earlier this week. Sure, Allah was given the credit for the two goals in seven minutes in Melbourne which secured fran's place in the finals, but the nation - even some of its women - rejoiced in distinctly secular fashion when the victorious team was helicoptered in to Tehran's football stadium from the airport.

Football is the only true secular religion, providing a common culture for the world in the way Christendom and Latin once did for Europe. And Britain's integrauon into the global church - which it founded but has always seemed in danger of being left behind by - has been cemented in the past two years.

Since the Bosman ruling in 1995 which freed up the transfer market, and the injection into football of Rupert Murdoch's BSkyB millions, the number of foreign players in Premiership clubs has now hit 150. The running commentary of any top game is today a specialist task for qualified linguists. Led by Norwegians, threatening to repeat their Viking depredations on Scotland's World Cup hopes, and Australians, British football has become a global market.

Last weekend saw a vivid demonstration of this when Celtic and Dundee fielded 28 players, including substitutes, for the Scottish Coca Cola Cup, 14 of whom were Travel broadens the mind, even if most of the travelling is done by interoational football stars while the minds of lumpen supporters stay glued to the television. But the mind of the average football supporter, once a haven for basest racial prejudice and anti-foreigner senoment is now programmed to display adulation not just for the many black players in the game but to pronounce Karlheinz Riedle, the Liverpool striker.

As was reported this week, the proportion of black players far exceeds that in the population as a whole, as in American football, a great cultural engine of racial equality in the States. The black superstars here, such as Wright. Ince and

Cole, are heroes for black and white alike. Meanwhile foreigners are not merely respected but, as Cantona was, elevated to prophet status in the new religion. He has been followed by Zola (Chelsea, Italian). Bergkamp (Arsenal. Dutch) and Schmeichel (Manchester United, Danish). Nor is this simply a market in players:

several leading British teams are now managed by foreigners: the Dutch Rund Gullit at Chelsea, the Swiss Christian Gross at Tottenham and the French Arsène Wenger at Arsenal, for example. The World Cup has always been an m-teresting exercise in national identity for the United Kingdom, with team loyaldes failing to match nadon-state boundaries. The interest generated by Thursday's draw stands in stark contrast to yesterday's piece of internacionalist symbolism at Waterloo station, where Robin Cook unveiled the logo for Britain's presidency of the European Union (although it is worth noting in passing the lack of English nanonalist outrage at the way in which the EU is acting as a single country in the Kyoto climate talks in Japan).

As the World Cup progresses, the cause of interoationalism is advanced. We will become interested in the history, geography and society of Cameroon (Group B), Paraguay (D), South Korea (E), Jamaica and Croatia (H). With the end of the Cold War, and the receding of the threat of a hot war of mass destruction, football is now the strongest incentive to find out about the rest of the world and seek to understand it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Welfare for women

Sir. It is nonsense to suggest that the Government wants to revert to a regime where women are treated as virtual chattels of their husbands, or to embark on a massive transfer of resources from women to men ("Women lose up to £10hn under Labour", 1 December).

The Government is committed to moderoising the lax and benefit system so that it boosts family income through work. We believe this is the best way to relieve poverty and strengthen family and community life, from which women as well as men will gain. Diane Coyle writes that "In three-fifths of eligible families that [the main carner] is the man . In fact, the mother is the three-fifths of families in receipt of Family Credit. So it is likely that the majority of those receiving the tax credit, paid through the pay packet, would he women. There are a number of options uoder consideration for the form of the Working Family Tax Credit, including the use of a family income test. This is not the same as ending independent taxation. Such a test aiready applies to Family Credit, where, for a couple, both partners' income is written on the same claim form.

As Gordon Brown made clear last week, the Working Family Tax Credit provides the opportunity for helping working mothers by improving further the support given to low income families for child care. On the same day, he announced enough funds to set up an out-of-school childcare club in every community. This is good news for working mothers and their families. HELEN LIDDELL MP (Airdrie and Shotts, Lab) London SWI

The writer is Economic Secretary to the Treasury

Sir: Whilst reading Patricia Hollis's informative new biography of Jennie Lec 1 was struck by some remarkable similarities with the current furore over Harriet Harman's attack on the benefits of lone parents, the vast majority of them women.

In 1931 the Labour government faced a mounting bill for henefits, caused by rising unemployment. Chancellor Philip Snowden insisted on financial orthodoxy and so the government decided to cut benefits to married women. The measure was defended in the Commons. by Margaret Bondfield, a Cabinct minster who had built her career in the Lahour Party through the women's trade union movement. The proposal was bitterly attacked in the House by Jennie Lee and other women Labour MPs such as Eleanor Rathbone. Ellen Wilkinson and Cynthia Mosley. Not a single woman joined Margaret Bondfield in the lobby but the measure was voted through by the massed ranks of Labour backbenchers whom Jennie Lee later described as reacting on every occasion "like a load of wet cement. They would see nothing, do nothing, listeo to nothing that had not first been given the seal of [Ramsay] Macdonald's approval".

ful of women Labour MPs, whereas now there are a hundred. I wonder how they will fare wheo pul to a test of principle compared with their predecessors of sixty years ago. MICHAEL HERBERT Mossley, Lançashire

Sir: The Government should do with babies work, 40 to 45 pe sole or main wage earner in cent of mothers of 15 and 16of the child first?

> our very poorest children? YVONNE ROBERTS London SW12

Museum charges

sue for museums is access, but it is nonsense to claim that new museum buildings are some sort of extravagance (report, 1 December). The reality is that museums and galleries have been starved of both capital and revenue funding for decades. New and refurbished buildings are desperately needed precisely to preserve and provide full and proper access by the public to their existing collections.

standing work and the opportunities for new forms of access. such as this museum's plans for a branch in the north of England, are enormous. For most the absence of adequate fiscal support and, realistically, any future prospect of it, means that the Lottery is the only major source of capital and, for many, admission charges are necessarily a crucial source of operating income.

American Air Museum at the fine collection and encouraged a 50 per cent increase in attenrevenue provided by these adwithout the income from charges. The same applies to the museum's other branches, the Cabinet War Rooms and HMS Letters may be edited for length and clarity.

Then there was just a hand-its homework. Research commissioned by the previous Conservative government, and conducted by the Policy Studies Institute, has tracked 900 lone parents since 1991 and interviewed 3,600 others. What emerges from this work is that while only one in eight women year-olds, and three out of four lone mothers with children who are 16-plus, have jobs. Workshy, or putting the emotional needs

Social exclusion can be tackled - but not by name-calling and a reliance on simplistic solutions And certainly not by docking £11.50 from new lone parentswhy punish the many who are trying so very hard and why further restrict the lives of some of

Sir: You are right that the key is-

Both the backlog of out-

Thus, Norman Foster's Imperial War Museum's Dux- rector of the Victoria and ford Airfield branch in Cambridgeshire has both assured the permanent preservation of a dance since its opening. Its running costs will be covered by the dinonal visitors and nourish improved access for other collections. Duxford Airfield first opened in 1976. It now has some JILL BENNETT 400,000 visitors a year but it simply would not exist and could not have been developed as it has Belfast, and to much of the re-to highly complex problems. Despite twenty-five years of badger culling, bovine tuberculosis is still rife

Badgers and TB

Sir: Again, outbreaks of hovine TB are, understandably, causing concero to farmers. ("Badgers get hlame for epidemic", 1 December)

Human TB has been largely conquered in Britain by better housing and nutrition. The Richards report (1972) by the Ministry of Agriculture on the outhreak of bovine TB in West Cornwall suggested that bad hushandry and management of cattle herds was a major cause.

Then the bacillus was found in a hadger carcass and the efforts of the ministry and the Na-cent improvement of our Lambeth Road headquarters. The troth therefore is that, in our case at teast, charges and the Lottery have together substan-

ROBERT CRAWFORD

Imperial War Museum

Director General

tially extended access to public

Sir: Dr Alan Borg is scarcely in a position to complain about British Museum (report, 3 December). In the past, the di-Albert Museum has taken an unapologetically elitist position, even indicating at one point that he had no objection to a £10 entry fee since what mattered was the quality, not the quantity, of visitors - which rather implies that he sees quality of mind as something which rises in direct proportion

Post letters to Letters to the Editor and include a daytime telephone number.

Fax 0171 293 2056; e-mail: letters@independent.co.uk

E-mail correspondents are asked to give n postal address.

to a hank balance.

London E5

extra state funding for the tional Farmers Union were concentrated on the culling of badgers and other possible causes were largely ignored.

on herb-rich grassland but on grass monocultures, and their diet is supplemented by manufactured protein-rich foods to boost milk yield. They are confined for long periods, in close proximity, in milking sheds and in winter housing. This must lead to the spread of the disease between individuals.

> takes account, almost exclusively, of milk yield. Natural im-

> > Space invaders

December).

10km across.

Sir: The threat to Earth from a devastating asteroid impact has somehow been both overestimated and underestimated in Charles Arthur's article about the Chicxulub crater ("Asteroid that killed dinosaurs will strike again – in 35 million years", 4 object which excavated Chicxulub was 100km across. In fact, it is the new estimation of the crater's diameter which has been downsized to 100km, from 180km. Most authorities agree that the object which struck the Yucatan and probably wiped out the dinosaurs was less than

Fortunately for us, 100km-diameter asteroids are very rare.

large numbers during the Earth's formation, but there are probably only a few dozen in our Solar System at the present time.

cause an event may be expect-

On the other hand, just be-

They may have been present in

He states that the size of the programmes has cost many millions of pounds and destroyed more than 25,000 hadgers, and Dairy cattle are no longer fed

Cambome Selection of breeding stock Cornwall the disease is still rife.

It is to be hoped that the Krebs report, now with the minister, will soon be released and that, for the sake of farmers and the dairy industry, it will deal with the scientific evidence rather than political considerations. J K WILLIAMS

Str. One hardly needs to ask if Brighton munity to disease is disregarded. members of the National Fed- East Sussex

ed to happen on average once skies in the past two years is evidence that celestiat objects have their own timetables, rather like London buses. No-one knows when the next alien exterminator will arrive. All we know is that, sooner or later, ar-

Heroes and villains

Sir: I must take issue with Robert

Fisk's assertion (3 December) that the Crusades were "the greatest act of ethnic deansing and barbarism in the Middle East in a thousand years". In point of fact they were episodes in the "long war" between Islam with the Arah / Islamic conquest of much of the Mediterranean

World in the seventh century.

and ended with the defeat of the the walls of Vienna at the end of the 17th century. For much of that period, Christendom was on the defensive against tririve it certainly will.

PETER BOND

Cranleigh, Surrey

Twenty-five years of culling eration of Badger Groups would welcome into their families a person spreading TB. hut astonishingly they demand that dairy and beef farmers should accept the equivalent of that in their livestock herds, where TB-infected badgers are proved to be present on their land. The need for food to be free of the infection and the welfare of those who work very hard producing it appears to be shaded out of the picture by impractical sentimentality.

Photograph: BBC

BOWANE

every 100 million years, it does barbarity in equal measure. not mean that this is the most RSFOSTER likely time interval. The arrival of two spectacular comets in our

Sir: Your leading article on Sinn Fem and the parliamentary oath (5 December) misses the point: their refusal is based upon a rejection of the sovereignty of the British government

However, your suggestion of an oath to pursue "liberty and justice for all" might be practical; Sinn Fein probably believe that this is what they have always been doing. GERARD M BLAIR and Christendom which started Sir: How can the Government deny the freedom of the individual to choose between the infinitesimal risk of infection and the primal pleasure to be de-Ottoman / Islamic army before rived from eating beef on the bone, whilst refusing to countenance a ban on cigarettes? Is this a question of excise duty or civil liberty?

Taking liberties

Parliamentary oath were capable of heroism and

- whether or not this is symbolised in the monarch.

West Linton, Peebleshire

umphaiist and proselytising Is- MARK EVANS lamic powers - and both sides London W7

THE EDITOR

LETTER FROM

Alert! BSE in bones shock ... and what do the good people of Britain do? They pour out to the butchers and stock up on ribs. T-bone steaks, and so on. Why is this so pleasing? Partly, perhaps, because of the two-lingers-to-officialdom that it represents. Week by week, we get more and more informatioo on possible health threats - oo vesterday's front page, for example, we reported on gelatine. It is the job of government to tell us, and help us find our way through the maze of conflicting scientific evidence. Free and objective information, uncluttered oment theo to force us to change our hehaviour. That kind of thinking is statist impertinence. In the case of beef. anyone who cares to buy a newspaper knows almost as much about the likely risks as any expert. Most of us are able to come to a personal decision about whether the enjoyment of certain steaks is outweighed by the anxiety about the horrible death coming if you gel CJD. So why the hans? Presumably because ministers think that otherwise they, and not the consumer, might be held responsible for any deaths. But again, why? We don't ban cigarettes, motor-scooters or Japanese whisky.

Mind you, where I think the Government could help is with risk-assessment education. Most of us find it exceptionally hard to separate our vivid apprehension of a particular fate - being attacked by sharks, or dying of lung cancer - from the mathematical likelihood of it happening. Were we properly conscious of risks and odds, it would have more effect on our behaviour than any health education programme. On the other hand, it would also mean that far fewer of us would play the National Lottery.

Do newspapers matter? We have had two small victories to chalk on the fuselage this week, I think.

First, the decision of Lord Chadlington to resign as chairman of the Royal Opera House, an honourable and personal one, was only taken after the Department of Culture had absorbed the views of this, and several other oewspapers, and decided that his position was difficult lo sustain.

Second, the small change of heart on the subject of museum charges would certainly not have happened had we, and othby commercial interests, is a new ers (notably the London Evening Standard) not banged But it isn't the role of gov- on angrily about it, publishing letters from artists and so oo. But that issue, in particular, is not fully resolved. A national campaign to preserve and extend free gallery and museum access is urgently required.

> Apologies corner. It was a ghastly mistake, made worse by the fact that it has happened &. once before. In an early edicon of vesterday's paper, Thursday's letters were repealed. The mistake was spotted quickly and corrected, but that doesn't make it better for those of you who got the early edidon. Last time round, someone rather charmingly wrote in pointing it out, and concluding: If you are short of material. please feel free to use this letter more than once."

It's no joking matter, though. I owe you an explanation. The explanation is that the person editing the letters gave them the wrong computer catchline. They were then pulled on to the page, at which point our entire computer system crashed. Panic. By the time we looked at paper copies of the pages hurriedly sent to the print sites. it was too late. We have a system to stop it happening but two people messed up. They are very sorry. So am f.

QUOTE UNQUOTE

"Labour promised more openness in government. They have proved as open as a locked safe when it comes to finding out what interests ministers enjoy and how they have handled them to avoid conflicts" - John Redwood, shadow Secretary of State for Trade and Industry

"Although the Teletubbies are unquestionably the greatest proof of Britain's creative genius since Shakespeare, they do not provide role models, as William Hague is heginning to discover" - Auberon Waugh

"When the official papers are released in 30 years, we will know the truth about Humphrey the Downing Street cat. We may see a vet's hill for the humane dispatch of a cat to his moggy heaven" - Terry Major-Ball

"Why not roast cat for Christmas? It was once fashionable" - Steve Jones. Professor of Genetics at University College London, referring to un 1875 article entitled "Eating Cats at West

"Showhiz is full of decadence, which I enjoy" - Catherine

"We used to refer to natural disasters as acts of God. Now it rlear that we humans are at least partly responsible. We a c taking a reckless gamble with the future of our planet" - i .: chael Meacher, environment minister

حكمًا من الدعل

DAVID AARONOVITCH REUNION BLUES

On Thursday, as the whole of Britain knows, the Prince of Wales was reunited with an old school chum. Over the years since they had constituted, in 1957, onesixth of the class at Hill House Preparatory School, life had treated them surprisingly similarly. Both had suffered the emotional trauma of broken marriages and divorce, both had not handled this upset particularly well. The major difference between Clive Harold and Prince Charles, was that the latter has not really gone anywhere not moved on. Forty years ago he was heir to the throne, and heir to the throne he

Mr Harold, on the other hand, had led a far more eventful life. Originally a financier's soo, he had become a journalist, an author, had brokered film deals with Sylvester Stallone, caten lotus leaves in Elysium, and - following his divorce - hit the hottle, "One morning," he said, "I woke up in a shop doorway in the Strand. I had lost everything." It was in his capacity as a seller of the Big Issue that Mr Haruld encountered the Prince once more, in the magazine's London offices.

Remarkably, he recognised the Prince at once, but realised that he himself might not be so memorable, "Don't suppose you remember me," he said, "hut we were at school together." To Charles's great credit he did not do what I would have done, and look at the man beneath the grubby Santa's hat closely, before saying. "The face is certainly familiar, is it Colin? No. er, Alan? Help me out here. Perhaps if you removed the hat?" Instead he confessed immediately that he had no idea who Mr Harold was.

It was a tricky moment for both of them, and one the possibility of which haunts most of us in some way. This was, statistically, practically a class reunion, happening after 40 years. Left to themselves they both might have preferred to avoid it.

But, in fact, possibly fuelled by American yuppy nostalgia movies, reunion is catching on in this country. Local and regional papers carry ads and letters seeking to contact all those from Dotheboys High School, circa 1971, with the objective of bringing together those who once showered, shouted and shat in the same place at the same time.

When I mention this trend to friends, and ask them whether they would attend such a function, I get two reactions. The more positive one goes something like this: "Yeah, I'd go. I've got a good job, nice kids, me boobs haven't sagged. I'll stand comparison. And it'd be intriguing to see who they've married, how many are divorced, and how are the mighty fallen." This is the reunion as Schadenfreude.

The more negative reaction is also my own. It consists of a mixture of fear and an almost journalistic curiosity. When meeting someone for the first time in many years, I am always fascinated to see the youngster still peeping out from behind the mask of age, like a famous actor made up to look old. The eyes somehow stay young, so that - mentally - you add hair to the boy and smooth the wrinkles away from the girl. Remove the wattles and warts, and there they still are. Nor does it bother me that I am not as svelte as I was. Frankly I wasn't that good looking a teenager either.

I am scared by the possibility of inescapable boredom. After all, who wouldn't be there? The larky ones, who smoked dope, played guitars and went into films; the adventurous ones who ended up as headmasters of schools in Fiji and Tristan da Cunha; the mobile, restless ones, whose tales one would love to hear. They wouldn't be there.

And who would." The pushy merchant banker who, as a boy, wished the Americans would bomb North Vietnam a little more; the repressed nerd to whom you showed your knoh at 12, who still gave you funny looks at 18, and who would give you funny looks again at 40; the corporate lawyer, who hoarded the Economics A-level texts from the library in his own desk, so that no-one else could use them, and really couldn't understand why you hated him; the prop forward from the second XV with the BO and inexhaustible supply of had jokes, who has never moved away from the old school.

But the biggest deterrent of all - the one that has caused me to refuse all invitations to reune, is when I imagine standing alone before that school door, stripped of everything that I have done and decided in adulthood to he, all my clever reinventions suddenly deinvented by people for whom I will always remain the same, and in whose interests it is that I never change.

And there is one last thing. The painful and shameful truth is that I don't even see the people I most want to see; those who I am too embarrassed to call because I have left it too long, those to whom - year after year - I forget to send a Christmas card: those whose company I ache for. Given that, why would I spend time with a whole bunch of ancient schrumizes I never liked in the first place? I might buy the Big Issue from them - or even, if things go badly sell it to them. But I really don't need to

Don't worry, Rachel – you can get it

TREVOR PHILLIPS POLITICIANS AND SCIENCE

If you don't know who Rachel from Friends is, skip to the next hit, or hetter still return to the cave in which you've been living for three years. Your contact with the modern world is elearly tenuous. However, most of us have seen the TV commercial in which Rachel gives you that just-washed-anddried-my-hair-and-oh-how-gloriously-shiny-it-is look. After a hit of flirting with us, she turns direct to camera and says sternly "Now pay attention. Here comes the science hit." Rachel clearly basn't a clue what the science hit is about, but it doesn't matter; having gazed deep into her eyes, who could care less about the effect of some unpronounceable chemical on those glorious follicles? We just take it for granted that the science guys are telling us the truth, and the little cartoon molecules really are making each individual hair smoother, silkier, stronger; after all that's what science is about - precision, certainty, uncontestable fact. And no doubt the companys men in white coats have been testing individual hairs to destruction for years, so they must know it to be true.

The essence of scientific method is indeed the experiment. But the point of the experiment is not to discover anything. It is purely to show that we can predict what will happen in any given situation from a theoretical framework; in short to confirm what our creative imagination tells us to be true. So if we use Rachel's product we'll end up looking like Rachel. Or so the story goes. But science can never be certain; it can tell you what will happen 999 times out of a hundred, or 999,999 out of a million, hut there are few anyone can say are 100 per cent

The problem is that politi-

Look mom. Rachel from 'Friends' (Jenifer Aniston) flashes her shampoo commercial want sure things. But when it comes to risks that involve the possible death of - let's say - a child, few scientists want to be too categorical, for very good reasons. There are reputations to protect, critics to outflank, hig research grants to justify acutely important in these lean times. Yet the public craves certainty; we may have no idea what needs to be done; indeed we may not have a due what the problem really is, but we demand decisive action, whether appropriate or not. Dr John Cunningham succumbed this week to the temptation to say, "Here comes the science bit" when he imposed yet another ban on beef products on the basis of "new scientific evidence". He defended his decision in exactly the same terms as Rachel uses: the scientists told me what to say, so it must be true. What Cunningham's case comes down to is that the only thing we can be sure about is that - now, pay attention, please - we can't be sure about anything; therefore, to he absolutely sure, we shouldn't have anything to do with bone products.

Let us leave for the moment tons of bonemeal in gardens all over England, no doubt picked up by assorted pets, and focus cians aren't bookies. They only on the decision itself. Why should we he more restrictive because we don't know everything about this particular risk? We do know that the risk of any individual catching CID is almost certainly tiny, compared to the risk involved in the use of the contraceptive pill for example; a random failure of the pill can lead to extreme distress for an entire family, even to a

Politicians caught in the mesmerising headlights of expert testimony go gooey and stupid. Over the past decade or two, the scientific evidence on the rise in the planets temperature and levels of pollution has not been fulfilled; in fact the problem is less than half as had as the last world conference on pollution suggested it might be. That's not to say that we should ignore it it is simply to point out that the demand for scientists to simplify everything has allowed some of the worst polluters - the old Soviet Union, for example - to get off the hook in Kyoto this week. Yet huge and expensive plans have been made on the basis of contested "scientific" evidence. You may say that its better to events in the real world which the question of the millions of be safe than sorry; I tend to agree - hut has the public genuinely known enough to weigh up the choice? Our collective failure to sums in wasted public money. No-one should be against fundamental scientific research. Even Lady Thatcher, the scourge of public spending. was forced to point out that had Michael Faraday's pioneering physics been patented by for the benefit of the nation, the portfolio would be worth rather more than the value of the London Stock Exchange. But do we apply the standards of accountability we apply elsewhere in the spending of public money? In the US, scientists were £3bn into the construction of a $10bn super-collider facility -you use it to find evidence of exotie subatomic particles before they worked out it was useless. The money went which we are not allowed to At the heart of this problem is the simple fact that must of us are scientifically illiterate. With few exceptions - the BBC and the Royal Society for the for example - there is very lit- and murmur, "Now let me tell tie effort applied to force the vou about this really sexy ke-with the fact that the dominant straight down the drain. Heaven alone knows how much disappears in failed attempts at new military or intelligence-eathering technology about forces in our world at the end of the twentieth century are science and technology. Just as during the 1960s, government had to make a concerted effort to get the people to grasp the true meaning of the Cold War, and in the 1980s, Thatcher and Reagan transformed the world hy giving economics a popular language, we now need our leaders to offer us a way of understanding advances in sci-

This does not mean we must all agree about everything: bringing science into public life does not mean the end of politics, to be replaced by some technocratic consensus. On the contrary, it is only a sound knowledge of the language of science itself that will give us the tools with which to conduct the most passionate arguments of our time properly, rather than in a sort of broad-brush, sloppy. Moral Maze kind of way. Without the right sort of debate we will continue to talk about the problems of the twenty-first century in the phrases of the nineteenth. If only, one day, instead of turning her back during the science bit. Rachel British people to come to terms tone molecule I picked up last

Liberté versus fraternité: a dispatch from the French dog-poo wars

JOHN LICHFIELD THE STREETS OF PARIS

Jean Tiberi, successor to Jacques Chirac as Mayor of Paris, is generally held, by friends and foes, to have been a failure. He has, however, won my sympathy and potendal affection. He has promised. not before time, to address one of the greatest social scourges of the world's most beautiful city: dog-poo.

I have written about this before and make no apology for doing so again. Paris has a serious dog problem. It has, proportionally, more dogs -300,000, or one for every seven humans - than any other city. Other places take aggressive steps to curb dogs. Paris has long adopted a policy of, so-to-speak, luissez-faire. On one occasion I counted 18 dog deposits - the French phrase is "crottes de chien" - in the first 30 yards of my walk to work. This may be merely ancedotal (the canine population of our street seems particularly high), but the official statistics are equally damning. Dogs leave 20 tons of shir on the streets of Paris daily (who has weighed it, you ask?]. An average of 650 people a year are hurt so badly after slipping on dog-poo in Paris that they have to be taken to hospital. This works out at nearly two victims each day; hosken collar bones are the most frequent injury. Complaints about dog-dirt are the third most frequent reason for letter-writing to the Paris town hall (ahead of fear of erime). And yet convictions of dog owners for "uncivic hehaviour" (fine £100) are running at less than two a week.

Over the years, committees have been formed by the town hall to examine the problem, scientific studies have been ordered, and information campaigns have been aimed at dog-owners, urging them at least to make their dogs defeeate in the gutter. Any suggestion that the law should be rigorously applied was blocked by the former mayor, who said such "repression" would not work and would penalise the old and the poor. The old mayor, now of course the President of the Republic, used to lecture petfood manufacturers on the need to invent products that would lead to drier and less offensive dog-poo. In other words, he did everything but address the real cause of the problem: the callous indiscipline of dog-owners. "As far as the politicians who run this city is concerned, there is a potential voter behind each pile of dog-shit," says André Midol. one of the most tireless Parisian campaigners for clean pave-

On his 'Chieraclette': picking up after the dogs of Paris

Until now, under Chirae's chivr (to shit) and raclette influence, the City of Paris has (scraper). Thus the machines are referred to hy some developed the most elaborate Parisians as "Chieraclettes". and costly systems of cure rather than prevention. The city Operated by young people pays from a year to a private with unconvincingly impassive company, Trottoirs Nets, to expressions, their task is to cleanse the streets of dog-pooscour the most commonly af-(it is this company which has esflicted pavements once or twice timated the daily harvest frum a day. They make their rounds Parisian dogs). The company just after the morning rush-hour operates a fleet of more than and just after the late film on 100 bright-green machines, like the television. Experience has motor-bikes with carnet-cleanshown that this is when owners ers bolted to the back, called "caninettes" or "motocrottes". to the streets. The last time I wrote on this subject, a reader wrote in to noint out that they also had another nickname, an inspired triple our on the name of the former mayor and the words and dogs most frequently resort The new mayor, Mr Tiberi, has finally promised to (so to speak) step in. He has appointed 15 "canine counsellors" to educate dog-owners. But he also says it is time for "extreme" even heard passers-by con-measures". In other words, he has asked the Paris police chief to enforce the law against fouling the pavements. More summonses will be issued to dog-owners but they will have the option, on a first offence, to attend eleantiness training classes organised by the Town

Photograph: Pex/Cipa

Mr Midol, the foremost Parisian anti dog-dirt campaigner, is also a sociological expert who advises companies and local authorities on group behaviour. He says Tiberi's initiative may be fine, if he means it. But the real problem is that the city "legitimises" the offenders by spending so much money on cleaning up, "I've

'at least it gives work to young people'." Mr Midol says that he is preoccupied with the issue, partly as a concerned citizen, hut partly because he sees it as a gratulating dog-owners, while their dog was in the act. saying an unresolved battle between two sides of the great triangle of French values, a struggle between liberte and fraternite. Outsiders tend to think of the French as an over-governed people who often place the rights of the state - of the collectivity - above those of the individual. The truth is more muddled, says Mr Midol. The French tend to have a teenaged is someone else's duty to clean up after them. "In terms of anti-social bebaviour, of recognising that certain kinds of individual freedom amount to irresponsibility - whether it's going through red traffic lights or striking for the least reason - we have a se rious problem in France. There is not the sense that you find in some other countries that individuals owe some kind of duty to society to make daily life tolerable. There is a sense, instead, that it's up to the state to look after these things ..." Mr Midol has two small children. He says he that, like all Parisian parents, has taught them to walk like Parisians, not like tourists. "When we go into town, I don't say to them, 'look how beautiful the streets are'. or 'look at the wonderful shop window'. I say, 'look down and look ahead or you will stand in face a cold, lonely Christmas of hunger and misery. Instead, she is welcomed with good, hot food, a safe, dry bed and the pleasure of friendly people to spend Christmas with. Some medical care, a visit to the dentist and a clean change of clothes make her Christmas complete. So please, send £25 now and help us give a safe, happy Christmas to more people like Linda this year. Because no-one should be left out at Christmas.

"If I couldn't come here at Christmas, I don't know where I'd go"

Without a Crisis shelter to go to, Linda would Take the crisis out of Christmas

Give a homeless person hope: ☐ £15 ☐ £25 ☐ £50 ☐ £250° other £ _

I enclose a cheque made payable to Crisis. OR dehit my: ☐ Visa ☐ MasterCard ☐ Switch[†] other ____

Last three digits of Switch card no. 1 1 Switch issue no. 1

Expiry date ______ Signature ____

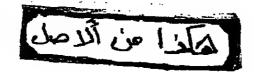

* Gifts of £250 or more are worth almost a third extra to us under Gift Aid

iii. 0800 44 88 98

Details have been changed to protect identity

Crisis, FREEPOST, Room 919, London SE21 888

Guido Brunner was one of the unsung architects of the Europe we have today. Had it not been for the goodwill towards Britain of Commissioner Brunner, the EEC thermo-nuclear fusion ropean ideal; I'm not. He was project (Jet) would not have been sited at Culham in Oxfordshire, or come to the United Kingdom at all.

Over two years of endless wrangling in the mid-1970s. Brunner clung to the belief that Jet should go to wheresoever it had the greatest chance of scientific success, and that meant Britain or Germany. As a German, he bravely told his fellow compatriots, and in particular his fellow German Commissioner, the powerful and raucous Vice-President Willi Haferkampf, and the French chairman of the Commission, ropean Parliament? It's a joy to François-Xavier Ortoli, that it was Britain's turn to host a major European scientific initiative. I had intimate first-hand knowledge of the debate, as one of the two British Labour members of the indirectly elected European Parliament Science and som of the European family. Energy Committee in 1976-79.

Even if the hopes of the 1970s that fusion would open up a new and virtually inex- crucial decade, 1982-92, and behaustible supply of energy for came the intimate confidant of the 21st century have not been fulfilled, it in no way diminishes the importance of Brunner's ish politicians determined to persuasive powers or the sig- return to democracy.

nificance of his contribution to the European ideal, by championing the choice of a country other than his own, when his own country was the realistic rival choice.

In many other areas Brunner, a free-marketeer by conviction, was helpful to Britain and its Labour ministers. One iness, the then Energy Minister, Tony Benn, recalls: "I last saw him by chance in the street in Madrid. He was passionately committed to the Eupassionately committed to nuclear power; I'm not. And yet, as opposites, we worked constructively and well together and parted, as we always had been when we were both in office, the best of friends."

Like Benn, Brunner had some of the most impeccably good manners in public life, vet without a trace of smarminess. Another minister, the late John Smith MP, later to be leader of the Labour Party, then Benn's Parliamentary Secretary, asked me at the time: "How do you find Guido Brunner in the Euwork with him when I go to ministerial meetings in Brussels."

Yet the greatest cause of Brunner's life was not the development of a European technological community but the easing of Spain back into the bo-Ambassadors come and go but Brunner was the German ambassador in Madrid for a whole Felipe González and held the proverbial hand of many Span-

Indeed, Madrid was the city his death. Nothing in life gave him greater pleasure than to be made an honorary citizen of Madrid. His father, from a Bavarian family, and his mother, from a Swabian family, repented the Weimar Republic in Spain; Brunner senior's caof those, with whom he had per- reer was to founder through behaps the greatest volume of coming persona non grata to Joachim von Ribbentrop, al-> fore Hitler. Brunner was educated partly at the Bergzabern School in Munich and at the German School in Madrid during the Second World War. Joining the Diplomatic Service in 1955, his first job was as Consular Attaché in Liverpool - a city for which he retained a lifelong affection on account of the warmth of the people of Liverpool to a young German in his late twenties.

though he was protected for a time by his patron Franz von

Papen, the German Chancellor

In 1976, I asked Brunner to come and stay over a weekend in Scotland. At a meeting of the West Lothian Labour Party over a subsequent supper, one of my more assertive and voluble constituents started a barangue on what he believed to be the unparalleled excellence of the Scottish fnotball game. Brunner could take no more of this and quietly opined that be thought that a Mr Beckinbauer and a Mr Overath also knew, as he put it, how to kick a ball. It done so gently, encapsulating Brunner's style, that even my loud-mouthed friend had to dissolve in laughter.

It then transpired that Brunner had an encyclopaedic knowledge of British football in the late 1950s. A Liverpool supporter? Oh no, eternally loyal to of his hirth and to be the city of Everton - and Bayern Munich and Real Madrid. Like a very different character, his friend and austere fellow commissioner, the Dane Finn-Olaf Gundelach who came to a meeting a few weeks later, be was a huge success, winning the hearts of tough local trade-unionists. After Liverpool, Brunner returned to the foreign minister's office where he was lucky to work for the Foreign Minister, Dr Heinrich von Brentano. who was to further his career. From 1960 to 1968 he was given the very important post of German observer to the United Nations in New York, An observer might on the surface have seemed to be a somewhat humble post, but actually it was of crucial importance.

Promoted to become Head of Scientific and Technological Relations Division of the Foreign Office for two years, subsequently Foreign Office spokesman between 1970 and 1972 and Head of the Planning Staff from 1972 to 1974, Brunner was qualified with the rank of ambassador and Head of Delegation to lead the German team to the security and co-operation conferences in Europe. at Helsinki and Geneva.

This made him an obvious choice to become the second German Commissioner in the European Community. He was given, on account of his experience, the important portfolio of energy, research, science and education. He was so highly thought of by the British Commissioner, George Thomson, now Lord Thomson of Monifieth, that as Chancellor of the Heriot-Watt University he initiated an honorary degree for civilisation.

Present at the ceremony. I heard the economic historian and politician Professor Alan Thompson, then the University Public Orator, say to Brunner as be presented it:

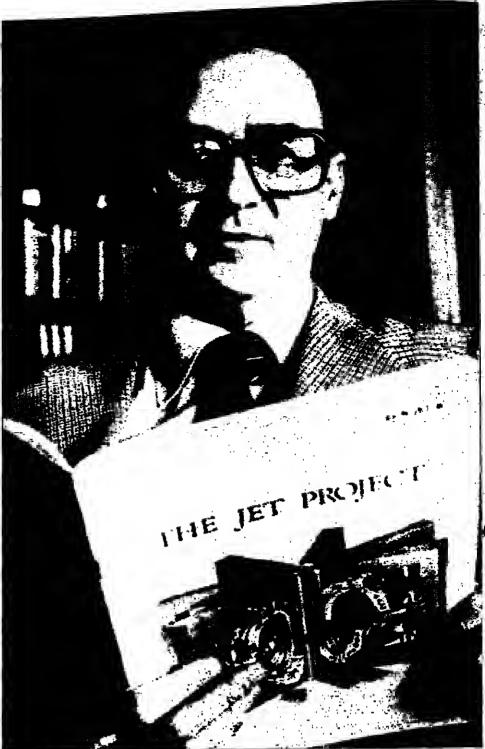

Dr Brumper has given authoritative and imaginative leadership over a wide range of research activities. He has shown special interest in industrial research into small and medium sized industries, which, in spite of the growth of multi-national comies, still make a vital contribution to European prosperity.

Like the famous economist Dr Ernst Schumacher, he believes that small can be beautiful, and there is nothing inimical between the growth of large-scale markers such as Europe offers, and the preservation of that initiative and enterprise which small business can provide. In Britain par-ticularly, the small firm sector can make a decisive contribution to employment and exports once the shackles of over-taxarion and overregulation are removed and Dr Brunner's own interest in this field are widely known.

One of Brunner's interests was medical research and be gave the greatest help to the late Professor John Kendrew in the establishment of the European Molecular Biology Centre in Karlsruhe. Three particular interests where the study of congenital abnormalities - a field in which compassion for the distress of malformed children can be given practical effect through new research techniques; new studies in the physiological processes of ageing, and the development of new types of beart-lung machines, capable of prolonged oxygenation. With his wife, Dr Christa Brunner, the daughter of General Hans Speidel, a celebrated post-war German military leader, Brunner was a distinguished figure in re-establishing Germany at the forefront of

- Tom Dalyell Brunner: a free-marketeer by conviction

Photograph: Popperfoto

Vodafone at

David Toguri

David Megumi Toguri, director, choreographer dancer: born Toronto 25 October 1933; died Toronto 15 November 1997.

There was perhaps no "Toguri of the great trio of the post-war American director/choreographers Gower Champion, Bob Fosse (Toguri especially admired the "Fosse touch") and Michael Bennett - hnt David Toguri did not have in Britain Toguri: ebullient the quality of new material that they could develop in the United States, while the 1980s' emergence of the British megamusical laid more emphasis on tunities for Kelly, directing his spectacular scenery than on first Broadway musical, to exchoreography. For Toguri in ploit in the choreography suany event the material and the pervised by Carol Haney (who performer dictated the actual steps; nothing was ever put in to Pyjama Game). show off or to flourish his particular signature.

of this self-effacement at the Palace Theatre, executing some feet of an acknowledged hero, muscular routines with an exu-Gene Kelly. Growing up in Toronto, where he trained with trast to the more genteel Boris Vorkoff, he had his first English choreography (mostly break in Rodgers and Hammer- still trapped in what George stein's Flower Drum Song, one of their weakest shows musically but with enough exotic opporhad starred for Bob Fosse in The Toguri made his West End début when he came to London I suspect he learnt something with the show in 1960 at the berant aplomb in marked con-as "skirt dancing") of the period. Deciding to settle in the UK he was quickly in demand and his witty, elegantly economical style found an ideal showcase in the offbeat revue Chaganog, incorporating dance and mime, at subsequently at the Vaudeville in 1964.

In 1965 he opened in Charlie Girl, one of those incptly formulaic British musicals which would close in six weeks today but which then could survive dreadful reviews to run for years at the Adelphi on the strength of its star, Anna Neagle, and hustling promotion by its impresario, Harold Fielding. As John Sasaki, a Japanese houseboy, Toguri's main contribution was to partner Anna Neagle in the show's equivalent of a Broadway "eleven o'clock number", a Charleston routine which built to a frenetic climax, providing the only moments of real class in the evening and in which Toguri made Neagle (whose best dancing days were behind her) look as good as any Broadway star.

Charlie Girl - in which, out

Bernard Shaw used to describe of affection for Anna Neagle, he remained for three years - crystallised his choreographic ambitions and for 30 years as choreographer and increasinge to matching.

> of leading directors with whom theatre or the opera bouse is eloquent testimony to his talent choreographed on The Baker's Wife and Measure for Measure as well as on recreating the smoky Weimar world of The Blue Angel; Peter Wood, on many National Theatre productions (his work on The Threepenny Opera and The Beggar's Opera was particularly memorable); Jim Sharman - the sexy and often bilarious routines in The Rocky Horror Show were Toguri creations on stage and on film; David Pountney - a haunting Kurt Weill Street Scene for ENO; Keith Warner - Soudheim's Pacific Overtures, with a sturning Toguri-staged finale as Japan moved into the technological age,

He choreographed the triumphant Eyre production of Guys and Dolls at the National in 1982 (winning the SOLT Best Choreography Award). ly also as director his career providing exhilarating and dyspanned an extraordinary range namic musical staging throughof work which pobody else in his out (his Crapshooters' Ballet was perhaps the best staging of his career). He directed and As a choreographer, the list choreographed the show in he worked regularly in the Australia in 1986 and returned to the National production for its 1996 revival, which was play-Trevor Nunn, for whom he ingits final performances at the time of his death. For television his most outstanding work was the Rock Follier series, while his movies took in Memphis Belle, Absolute Beginners (in which his electric jive numbers jolted the film into occasional life) and Who Framed Roser Rabbà? He was also in constant demand for video work. about which he was extremely selective - he staged David Bowie's Blue Jeans, Freddie Mercury's A Crazy Little Thing Called Love and, most memorably, Tina Turner's sizzling Break Every Rule. He never stopped enjoying working with and six Brazilian sailors. the young and inexperienced; he also for ENO; and Richard Eyre. became a valuable mainstay of on the 1974 Mermaid Theatre mantic duet with the late Ken-both the National Youth Theatre and the Guildhall School of Music and Drama.

had a particularly rare talent for coaxing actors inexperienced in hut I can move a bit," as they sating tap-routines ("Anything usually tend to put it) into often astonishing feats. On the revival of the Bernstein/Comden and Green Wonderful Town! at Watford and then at the Queen's Theatre, he preserved all the genuine charm of an essentially small-scale show but also devised some superb set pieces, integrating them seamlessly into the fahric of the characters and the story. He worked brilliantly with Maureen Lipman Iplaying Ruth Sherwood, the self-deprecating loser in love in 1930s Greenwich Village) so that her physical idiosyncrasies became those of the character and the funny, unusual steps seemed invented on the wing - especially in a genuinely spirit-lifting Conga routine involving a radiant Lipman

1 first collaborated with him show Cole, which demanded of him a whole gallery of choreographic styles from different pe-He always worked to the riods - the steamy Bowery waitz of "Brush Up Your Shakestrengths of his performers and speare", a burlesque sequence with Julia McKenzie as a louche Goes") and, in "Leader of a Big-> for late in rehearsal and which, open-mouthed, I watched him stage in just a few minutes at the end of a long day. In Cole he created especially inventive work for Una Stubbs, then at the peak of her dancing career. With the help of the Porter estate, the score of Porter's 1920s jazz ballet Within the Quota was reconstructed and for Stubbs, dressed in the briefest of black and gold shifts and carrying a huge ostrich feather fan, he devised an impudent, teasingly sensual five minutes that had the quality of

Time Band, a whirlwind jitterbug for the youngest couple in the company which I asked

Also for Una Stubbs, this time in white chiffon, he could turn to creating a dreamily roan Erté drawing come to life.

neth Nelson against a moving cloudscape to the yearning pulse of "Night and Day". His contribution indeed was such that I felt he must have a codirecting rather than a solely choreographic credit: typically choreography ("I can't dance Madam in "Come On In", pul- of him in a business in which billing often becomes ludicrously self-important, be never requested this for himself.

For the past three years, although able to work intermittently, he had to battle with the cancer which killed him. Characteristically for a man whose life away from the heightened temperature of show-business was 1. calm, quiet and centred round his dose family (he was one of eight children and had a whole tribe of adoring nieces and nephews) and friends, it was fought with dignity, humour and grace.

It was impossible to believe that David Toguri was approaching 65; although his hair in recent years had whitened he had, like most former dancers, kept himself in formidable trim and in rehearsal when at his most ebullient (which was most of the time) be often seemed no more than sixteen and a half.

- Alan Strachon

Announcements for Gazette BIRTHS, Birthdays MARRIAGES & DEATHS (Births, MARRIAGES & DEATHS (Births, Adoptions, Marriages, Deaths, Memorial services, Wedding anniversaries, in Memoriam) should be sant in writing to the Gazette Editor, The Independent, I Canada Square, Carary Wharf, London E14 5DL, telephoned to 0171-293 2012 (24-hour answering machine 0171-293 2011) or faced to 0171-293 2010, and are charged at £6.50 a line (VAT extra). OTHER Gazette announcements (notices, functions, Forthcomments (notices, functions, Forthcomments) ments (notices, functions, Forther ments (notices, runctions, retrictions-ing marriages, Plarniages) must be submitted in writing (or famil) and are charged at £10 a line, VAT extra. They should be accompanied by a daytime telephone number.

Lectures TODAY

National Gallery: Norman Coady, "Glad Tidings (1): Veronese, The Consecration of Saint Nicholas",

Snakes and Ladders: artists' fluc uating reputations", 1pm. British Museum: George Hart, "Ancient interconnections: Egypt and the Aegean world", 1.15pm. TOMORROW

Tate Gallery: Sarah O'Brien
Twohig, "Commen late on the 1997
Turner Prize", 4pm.
National Portrait Gallery: Paul Webb, "Ivor Novello", 3pm.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENTS

TODAY: The Household Cavairy Mounted Reg-iment recunsts the Queen's Life Guard at Horse Guards, Hum. TOHORROW: The Household Covairy Mounted Regiment mounts the Queen's Life Guard at Horse Guards, Hum; Let Buttal-

Vice-Chamberlain of HM House-hold, 48; Lord Ashley of Stoke, for-mer MP, 75; The Right Rev Patrick Barry, Abbot of Ampleforth, 80; Mr Dave Brubeck, jazz musician, 77; Lord Clinton-Davis, Minister of State for Trade, 69; Lord Emslie, former Lord Justice-General of Scotand, 78; Miss Jill Hammersley-Park-er, table-tennis player, 46; Mr Stephen Hepburn MP, 38; Mr Geoffrey Hoon MP, Parliamentary Geoffrey Hoon MP, Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Deparment, 44; Sir Maurice Kay, High Court judge, $5; Mr Jonarhan King, pop producer, 51; Mrs Helen Liddell MP, Economic Secretary to the Treasury, 47; Sir Richard Lloyd, chairman, Argos plc, 69; Sir Nicholas Lyell QC MP, 59; The Right Rev Professor Eric Mercer, former Bishop of Eneter, 80;
Sir Martin Moore-Bick, Hish Court Mercer, former Bishop of Eneter, 80; Sir Martin Moore-Bick, High Court judge, 51; Mr Eric Newby, writer, 78; Sir George Pinker, gynaecological surgeon, 73; Professor Lord Porter of Luddenham, Chairman of the Centre for Photomolecular Sciences, 77; Mr Keice Rosberg, motor-racing champion, 49; Mr Richard Shepherd MP, 55; Professor Sir Bryan Threabes, former Principal, Westfield College, 74; Mr Charles Vance, actor, director and producer, 68; The Right Rev Peter Walker, former Bishop of Ely, tor and producer, 68; The Right Rev Peter Walker, former Bishop of Ely, 78; Mr Cyril Washbrook, cricketer, 83; Mr Peter Willey, cricketer, 48. TOMORROW: Sir Fred Atkinson, economist, 78; Miss Ellen Burstyn, actress, 65; Professor Noam Chom-sky, linguist, 69; Lord Elystan-Morgan, circuit judge, 65; Mr Kaffe Fassett, textile designer, 60; Profes-sor Sir Abraham Goldberg, physician, 74; Professor Norman Gowar, Prin-cipal Royal Holloway and Berlingt

remeasur vorman cowar, Prin-cipal, Royal Holloway and Beriford New College, 57; Sir Bayan Hopkin, economist, 83; The Counters of Lim-erick, Chairman Emerius, British

Red Cross Society, 62; Sir Sydney

Samuelson, first British Film Com-TODAY: Mrs Janet Anderson MP,

Anniversaries TODAY: Births: Warren Hasting TODAY: Birther Warren Hastings, first Governor-General of India, 1732. Deaths: Anthony Trollope, novelist and Post Office official, 1882. On this day: the Irish Free State was established, 1922. Today is the Feast Day of St. Abraham of Kratia, St. Asella, Saints Diouysia, Majoricus and their Commentations. Majoricus and their Companious, St Gestrude the Elder and St Nicholas of Bari. TOMORROW: Births: of Bari. TOMORROW: Births: Gian Lorenzo Bernini, sculptor, 1998. Deaths: Robert Ranke Graves, poet, 1985. On this day: the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden (now the Royal Opera House), was opened, 1732. Tomorrow is the Feast Day of St Ambrose of Milan, St Buithe or Boethius, St Entychianus, St Martin of Sanion and St Servers. of Saujon and St Serves.

Luncheons

Mogg also spoke.

sioner, 72; Dr Mario Soares, former President of Portugal, 73; The Rev Rouald Trounson, former Prin-cipal, St Chad's College, Durham, 71; Miss Helen Watts, singer, 70.

Quietly, behind the scenes,

States of United States States Mr Newt Gingrich, Speaker of the American House of Representa-tives, was the guest of honour at a han-cheon of the Institute of United States Studies in Lincoln's Inn yesterday, Baroness Thatcher, Chain of the Institute, was in the Chair. Mr Robert Worcester and Lord Rees nts and Signers Club Mr John Major MP was the guest of honour at the Saints and Sinners Christmas Luncheon held yester-day at the Savoy Hotel, London WC2. The Chairman of the Clab, Mr Jimmy Parbuck, and the Hon Sec-

FAITH & REASON

Blair's hidden agenda for the Church

New Labour is setting about creating a New Church of England. Andrew Brown predicts major changes.

One of the things about being badly beaten up is that after the first few shocks you don't notice much of what's happening: fresh blows can land and the damage only appears afterwards. So it has taken a while for the Church of England to notice what was done to it last week by the Blair government, and to realise, as it struggles up from a disastrous Syood meeting, that this time something vital may have been broken.

The man who put his boot into the kidneys was Stuart Bell MP, whose title is one of those grand vacuities that bubble out of the Establishment like cuckoo spit: be is the Second Church importance. Proconsuls, after all, were Labour. New Church of England."

sent to govern the grandest and richest parts of the Empire. Mr Bell, in his conversations with the press, has given the impression that he is only a District Commissioner, sent into the busb to dispense justice to a particularly benighted, if colourful, tribe of savages. They are to be brought within the reach of civilisation, and they are to be grateful for it.

Of course, this message is not delivered too crudely to the natives. The Maxim guns stay under wraps, and the casual listener, unversed in burcaucratic language, might think he was merely paying ceremonial obeisance to their customs, not announcing that everything continued on the Government's sufferance.

Last week, be told the General Synod: "The link between Church and State is not, as some might think, obsolete or stagnant, but an evolving and dynamic partnership." So much windy Estates Commissioner. The first nonsense has been talked about change, Church Estates Commissioner is, of modernity, and relevance in the Syncourse, the Archbishop of Canterbury, od that its members can be forgiven for but he doesn't matter. For Mr Bell's not noticing that this particular rhetoric role, by contrast with his title, is not vac- has a simple, unambiguous English nous at all. He is the Government's proconsul, sent to govern the Church of everything we feel like changing, and England Perhaps this overestimates his you must like it or lump it. New

The members of the Crown Appointments Commission (among them the around Mrs Thatcher and her appoint-Archbishop of Canterbury) know perfectly well that the Blair government bus turned down both their choices for the See of Liverpool, something Mrs exerted more subtly. Thatcher never quite dared do, for all the arrogance of her toadies towards the Church. When Dr Carey was pressed about this in questions, he forgot his script and after preliminary stonewalling finally admitted: "I don't know how the news got out." Thus another illusion of the Church's importance is ended; and it did so with a whimper. If Dr Carey really does not know how the news got out, the answer is that it came from Downing Street. In case anyone bad missed the significance of this Mr Bell told the press afterwards the Government would continue to intervene in specific appointments of bishops. This is not the affectation of miles from the central administration: it is the belief of most of the devout and able Christians in this government that most of the Bench of Bishops, from the Archbishops down, have been promoted beyond their abilities, and would never have reached the top in a healthy organisation.

A few were primed to notice this. itself so much as the previous government and especially the evangelical mafia ments secretary. Robin Cathord, or Catfood as he was then known in Lambeth Palace, whose pressure was, of course,

So now the Government has stepped in the whole process of comfortable, creeping disestablishment, which for the last 30 years has looked as if it would lead inevitably to a church which Parliament would not dure to interfere with, firmly established in the possession of its privileges and endowments, has come to a juddering halt. Mr Blair's office will determine who the bishops are. The Church Commissioners will continue to exist, and matter. In exchange, the Church of England is told by Mr Bell that establishment is safe, and that it did a good job in coping with the great outpouring of inarticuone District Commissioner, operating over the death of Diana, Princess of Wales - even though privately senior New Labour ligures think it reacted rather pourly. It is clearly an offer they can't refuse, but I don't see how they can possibly accept it, either.

Curiously, they don't blame the Church • 'Faith & Reason' is edited by Paul Vallely

23/SHARES

Vodafone at an all-time high as telecoms re-rating continues

MARKET REPORT

CATHY NEWMAN

Dealers' phones were ringing year are looking good, experts dex ended well above the SUMI vesterday after a series of meet- rose 20p to 740p, and NatWest 11p to 107.5p. after Societé for telecoms stocks as the wholesale re-rating of the sechas been the biggest beneficiary over the past lew weeks, and The shares, which thousand below the 150p mark, reached another all-time high last night. closing at 405.5p, with more than (3 million shares traded. Analysts say talk of hid speculation was wide of the mark. Instead, they pointed to around Europe, with Scandinavian companies like Netcom and Europolitan currently in favour.

Shares of UK cellular phone groups have been lagging behind their European peers so negative territory, but ending the recent renaissance seems most definitely positive after a long overdue. Added to that, strong start on Wall Street, Vodafone's subscriber num- Having drifted as much as 34 say. Buy notes from Societé Générale and "accumulate" for continued apace. Vodafinne advice from Merrill Lynch also helped the shares along the way.

The numbers came up for yesterday was no exception. Orange too, although the vagaries of the new Sets system played their part here. At one point the group shot up 17p. but volume was a fairly light

Most other stocks in the sector were on the rise, with BT adding L5p to 475p. There was an upgrade of cellular stocks one notable - although not, recently, unusual - exception. lonica prepared to exit die secand division as it dropped another 5p to 102.5p.

Fixitsic had a down and an up day, starting the session in mark again, up 60,6 points at lings with institutional investors. - the perpetual bid target -5142.9.

Talk of a bid early next week for Delta, the electric casbles and industrial services company, sent the shares up 4.5p to 260.5p. Nearly 770,000 shares were traded, after dealers speculated that a bidder - an SBC Warburg buy recomcould offer £3 a share for the cumpany. Menvier-Swain, another company in the sector, was taken over by Cooper Industries last month for ther corporate action. Billiton was the most wanted blue chip, up 7,25p to 155p. The base metals company, which demerged from the South African mining group Geneor in July, sent the shares into freefall recently when it issued a gloomy outlook on trad-

£164.5m, so the market obviously feels it's high time for fur-

The house brokers have also surged 14.5p to 940p. put out buy notes.

ports of a merger hetween ration. Lluyds, encouraged by 760p: Royal Bank of Scotland

BTR was spurned, though, Financial stocks were once after it issued warnings on again being asked for after re-three fronts. The company said sterling continued to cause UBS and Swiss Bank Corpo- problems and advised that the troubles in Asia could also have an impact. Moreover, it mendation, jumped 28p to alluded to difficulties in South America. The shares closed 25.5p poorer at 182.5p. An array of analysis' downgrades are expected to follow. In the zoomed up 10p to 107.5p. meantime, SBC Warburg reck-> up value of 200p. operations, Sciti Ghasemi, quit, and sent the shares tumbling 32p to 943p at one point. However, they staged a recovery, > ons the company has a break-and ended 5p better at 980p.

British Biotech topped the Générale said it was overvalucd. Ashquay Group did better, closing 3p up at 31.5p on the back of a 178 per cent increase in interim profits. Landround, the travel promotions company, was another to benefit from good results. The company, which floated on AIM in August, announced a 49 per cent increase in profit before tax and flotation expenses of £506,000. As a result, the shares

Several exporters breathed a sigh of relief, after the pound weakened. Siebe closed 21p BOC had a mixed time. richer at £1242; and British The president of its US gases Steel edged up 0.5p to 139p at close of play. Smiths Industries also put on a spurt, notching up another 30p to close at 880p. Harrisons & Crostield meanwhile soared 6.5p to 123.5p

TAKING STOCK

Corporate Executive Search International, the headhunter, hit the right spot yesterday when it poached a new chief executive from rival firm Russell Reynolds. The company, which is listed on AIM, added 0.5p to close at 4p after appointing Roger Evans. At the same time, it said Mark Shields, managing director and one of the founders, would relinquish his role. He will remain on the board, but will work on a project-by-project basis,

Prestbury Group, the AIMquoted property company, is rumoured to be gearing up for some kind of corporate activity. The company, which closed up 0.25p to 5.25p, is headed by Nick Leslan. Prestbury bought Mr Leslan's own private property

Corporate Executive said.

(C 31) ()		bers for the final quarter of the	Having drifted as much as 34 points down after lunch, the in-	sued a gloomy outlook on trad- ing. But it finally bounced	DJFMAMIJASQID	British Biotech to second-line fallers.	pped the after selling its E shedding Petfoods business	for £106.3m. company, Ed
Acohof ### Acohof ### ### ### ### ### ### ### ### ###	Stock	Law Stock	Sept Comp. Stock Price	The Company Sept 18 19 19 19 19 19 19 19	2	Company TV Comp	18 76 78 76 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78 78	eps where stated. The yield is the latest two the stare price. The price/earnings (PIE) in the stare price. The price/earnings (PIE) in the stare price. The price/earnings (PIE) in the price price price price price price as a En-dividenct a En-alt s Suspended: p Par the Generics. Ent. Teleshare - Tel. 0891 - To access Real-Time Stare Prices, 24 hos the current FTSE 800 Index followed by a Sc dene to hear a Real-Time Share Price by ke timber to set-up your Portfolio facility, pleas is hours). a, including the Portfolio facility, call the He the trades 63,571 Top 20 volumes Stack Vol Stack Vol Goness PIC Volumes Stack Stack Vol Gen Elac Box Tel GFS Sauchidine Beach Box Tel 192 Acts Grote Beach 192 Acts Grote Beach 192 Acts Grote Beach 193 Acts Grote Beach 194 Acts Grote Beach 195 Acts Grote Bea	ato is the shareprice use including exceptionals by Paid, np Nil Paid: An Source: Bloom 201 200 ars a day, call 6891 - 20 ock Marker Summary R ying a plus a 4-dight cone call the 14th Desk on 077-729-828 by Desk on 077-729-828 by Desk on 077-729-828 inches
925 507 Bas - 105 5 Bur 156 521 525 Bur 156 52	10 12 15 17 17 18 18 18 18 18 18	$\frac{3}{28} \text{ branches} \text{ 50 to } 50 t	$ 77 Pedom Wo	THE INDI THE INDI THE INDI THE TOTAL STATE ST	Self Accessing 5950 24 224 75 75 75 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76 76	25 26 26 26 26 26 26 26	23 - 49 3 44 FTSE 100 Index 100 1	Hour by hour	00 5079.1 Down 00 5107.7 U) 00 5159.3 U, 00 559.3 U, 00 540.9 U, 00 540.0 - 0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 0.0 00 759.0 0.0 00 0.0 0.0 00 0.0 0.0 00 0.0 0.0 00 0.0 0.
73 6 8 840 77 8 2 78 2 8 2 78 2 8 78	which 69.50 - 7.8 577	250 General Elect 42,00 8,50 40, 28,0 24, 2	57 Bisch Arrows 9150 - 0,50 54 6-9 0 0 1 3	9 December 1997 Usual Newspaper Publication Book Price Chy Vid PrECode SS Gons And Sain 190 00 1500	Vinners picked at random after lines close listing tules apply Editor's decision is final 12 week high Low Stock Price City Tid PECod 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	8 17 Notice 100	- 6.5	100 4.20 5.7 100 0.44 100 6.5 5 5 6 6 6 6 6 6 6	75.00
Building # Agring # A	Section Sect	10 Solycone 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 1	Signate September 1	00 Gorst Chmil	3. 8 Programmer 90 10 10 9 8 80 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	Pharmaceuticals	55 1 22 222 45 390 Books 76 22 22 45 375 Brown PtN 90 47 72 3 220 45 375 Brown PtN 90 47 72 3 220 45 375 Brown PtN 90 47 72 3 220 45 375 Brown PtN 90 47 72 3 220 45 375 Brown PtN 90 47 72 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 22 3 24 3 22 3 24 3 2	100 1.00 2.6 22.1 100 10	1000 -4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4 4
To B Usic Co. 50 40 Victoria Chesquiculs 77 10 Abruh 10 9 Add Co. 9 10 Abruh 11 Abruh 12 September 11 Abruh 13 September 12 September 13 Sep	40 12 AJ 954 AB 96	Mariana	20 BZW Endow 20 BZW Endow 27 Corp. 27 Corp. 27 Corp. 27 Corp. 28 Corp. 29 Corp. 20 Corp.	89 MC Warth-Sta Co 02 23 -0.25 31 291 1 85 Harry Espai 17 10 00t -0.30 1,0 10 10 85 Harry Espai 17 10 00t -0.30 1,1 17 10 85 Harry Espai 17 10 00t -0.30 1,1 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17 17	197 197	287 PS Captilleged 20 50 27 PS Captilleged 21 PS Captilleged 22 PS	14 24 372 157 Style 14 15 Stores 180. 14 - 0 705 57 Style 18 Stores 180. 15 19 30 00 20 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	00	285.00 *100 49 % 19 59 % 649 00 - 5.6 % 19 59 % 649 00 - 5.6 % 19 % 19 % 19 % 19 % 19 % 19 % 19 % 1
60 to Alleger	## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ## ##	Advers 53.00 - 54 23 397 193.01 Aven Rubber 1275 40 23 34 erg 175 13 56 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 57 80 20 13 80	### Try III. 2.5 cd 100.75	### 150 PM	### 1500 1 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1/2 1	### ### #### #########################	9.56 5.52 5.97 5.	0 - 2.50 = 20-2 Aggrate 0 - 4.50 D 5.0 D 6 677 Carmed Lard 0 - 4.50 D 5.5 D 8 677 Carmed Lard 0 - 4.50 D 5.5 298 Greate Cp 1 - 70 6.7 356 298 Greate Cp 2 - 78 01 2367 H5075 (jersey) 0 - 5.00 2.2 C.9 275 0 - 2.30 241 1000 1 - 2.50 D 11 341 1835 1 - 24.00 1835 1 - 24. 443 5329 0 - 2.50 D 1 351 2529 0 - 2.50 D 1 251 2529 0 - 2.50 D 1 2	Hos and

Watchdog set to crack down on Railtrack charges

The rail regulator will next week launch a review of track access charges levied by Railtrack, which is likely to mean a cut in the company's revenues. Randeep Ramesh, Transport Correspondent, reports on the latest toughening in the operating regime for the group which owns the track and signal network.

John Swift QC, the regulator, is to tighten the price formula covering hillions of pounds of track access charges, paid by operators to Railtrack. The existing price control, which cuts charges by two per cent below inflation each year, expires in 2001.

What has perturbed the regulator is not only that Railtrack is entitled to rake in large access fees, but that it also has no ohligation to spend them on the network at the level the Regulator assumed when he allowed the company to nearly double its charges in 1995.

In fact, until Mr Swift had wrung from Railtrack a licence amendment which committed the company to £16hn of spending over a decade, executives were not bound by any contractual arrangements. Officials have also noted that Railtrack made a pre-tax profit of £346m - when 94 per cent of its income came from fixed track access charges.

The high level of the track access were meant to ensure that a replacement railway would huilt in the "fuliness of time". It was not, say officials, there to bolster Railtrack's bottom line.

The purpose of the regulator's announcement next week not simply to make it cheaper for train companies to run trains. One option being considered would see the . track charges reduced and then any savings being used to cut subsidy to the operators.

Despite the legal complexities this would entail, officials at the Office of the Rail Regulator (ORR) point out that it would mean there would be more money available for the Department of Environment. Transport and the Regions.

A tough price review would certainly affect the company's profitability but, analysts point out, some of it could be made up by the largely property rental and sales. Not all track charges would be altered. They vary in length from seven to 15 years having started in 1994.

Another option is for the regulator to force Railtrack to become "more efficient". This would see a change in the performance regime which many train companies suspect is being too easily met by Railtrack. Last year, the one of the "principal reasons" that revenue from the passenger train franchises grew by £116m was that "there was a substantial improvement in the contribution from the performance regime".

One company Connex is appealing to get its £9m hill reduced because, it argues, the performance of Railtrack in the yardstick year of 1994 was "dismal". More worrying for Railtrack is that Mr Swift is investigating a £46m "weather provision" made in 1997. This was £26m more than the previous year and it is understood Mr Swift has "concerns" about the amount put aside.

City pundits were hlunter, "Railtrack has been taking the regulator for a ride. It is no surprise that he will play hardball," said one analyst.

Mr Swift is also playing a political game. Rather than co-ordinating his actions with John Prescott, the Deputy Prime Minister with responsibility for transport, the regulator has "gone it alone". This is unlikely to endear him to Mr Prescott, now in Kyoto for the conference on climate change - who has made it clear he wishes to be kept abreast of any new developments.

The news of the review will dampen Railtrack's high spirits. Earlier this month, the company announced a 10 per cent increase in interim pre-tax profits.

Pre-tax profits increased £173m to £190m before Railtrack's windfall tax of £155m. The improved profits were made despite a £18m restructuring charge and a £ 28m bad weather provision.

The results were cautiously welcomed by Mr Swift. Noting a 38 per cent increase in Railtrack's investment programme, he said: "It is long overdue hut the interim results show that it is oow under way."

High stakes: The super-rich who visit London's top casinos can gamble away up to £10m in a single night, in a lifestyle exemplified by Sharon Stone in the film 'Casino'

London Clubs hit by high rollers on a lucky streak

Casino operators don't always enjoy a lucky roll of the dice. London Clubs International has this year had its bid for troubled rival Capital Corporation blocked by the Government and is being eased out of the Ritz Hotel. Now its profits have been dented by a bunch of high rollers who struck lucky. Nigel Cope, City Correspondent, reports on tougher times in the casino industry.

London Clubs, which operates the Ritz and Les Ambassadeurs casinos in central London yesterday blamed a winning streak by some of its heaviest camblers for a sharp fall in half year profits.

Chief executive Alan Goodenough said: "Good fortunes were enjoyed by a number of our major customers both at the Ritz and more unusually at the Rendezvous."

Top casinos define high rollers as the handful of super-rich who can gamble away up to £10m in a single night. In addition there is a group of several hundred international players who are willing to stake anything from £500,000 to £3m a session. This group's success at the roulette and blackjack tables forced London Clubs' half year profits down from £14.9m to £14.4m.

London Clubs said trading since the half year had seen many punters hit a losing streak. helping figures for the first eight months higher than last year. However, there are concerns in the industry that the effect of the strong pound and the financial crisis in Asia could affect even the wealthiest punters.

Mr Goodenough said thevolatility at the upper end of the market, together with frustration over the lack of progress in the de-regulation of the industry had persuaded the company to accelerate its plans to expand outside Britain. "The potential for growth in the UK without de-regulation benefits is restricted. So we are looking at international markets," he said.

The casino industry has long complained that it is disadvantaged against other forms of gamhling in Britain and against other easino markets around the world by the UK's gaming regulations. These restrict the number of slot machines that can be installed in casinos and state that customers must become a member of a casino 24 hours before being allowed entry.

London Clubs will lose its licence to operate the Ritz Hotel casino next June after failing to agree a new licence with the hotel's owners, the Barclay Brothers. It plans to open a new casino in St James Street next July.

A company led by Aidan Barclay, the son of David Barelay is currently seeking the licence to operate the Ritz Hotel casino. The application is currently being heard by Westminster magistrates and a ruling is expected later this month.

The application is being supported by Lord King, the former British Airways chairman, and the industrialist Lord Hansoo. The Barclay brothers, who bought the Ritz in 1995, have said they have no financial interest in the company applying for the licence.

With odds on expansion looking poor at home. LCI is trying its luck abroad. It yesterday confirmed plans to invest $50m in a 25 per cent stake in Aladdin Gaming, the US group which is re-developing the Aladdin hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

Far East turmoil prompts fresh BTR profits warning

BTR yesterday issued its third profit warning in two years, plunging shares in the troubled conglomerate to a six-year low. Despite their frustration, Peter Thal Larsen finds shareholders have little choice but to support the chief executive ian Strachan's attempts to turn the group around.

In a trading statement, BTR said it expected second-half profits to be "more or less in line with the restated first half results". That's in contrast with the upbeat outlook the group gave in September, when Mr Strachan said he expected BTR "to show improvement in the second half of this year over the first half".

The stock market reacted viciously, pushing BTR shares down 25.5p to 182.5p as analysts slashed their profit forecasts for the year to December by as much as 10 per cent. Profits are now expected to come in at about £1.06bn.

BTR shares have lost almost half of their value since Mr Strachan took over as chief executive in January 1996, underperforming the FTSE 100 index by 60 per cent.

Industry experts reacted to the news with an air of resignation. "People are just punch-drunk with BTR," said one observer. "They are totally fed up with it."

BTR hlamed the profits disappointment on the economic turmoil in Asia and South America and the renewed strength of sterling. The group, which has £900 million of annual sales in emerging markets and is highly exposed to the automotive industry, has been particularly hit by rising interest rates in Brazil. "Auto sales were down 60 per cent in November," Mr Strachan said

Meanwhile, BTR said the rise of sterling would also affect full-year figures. The group now estimates that currency movements will wipe £75m off its profits, compared to an earlier estimate of £63m. Mr Strachan said the strong pound was also hurting subsidiaries with . substantial exports like Brook-Hansen, its electric motors unit. "Currency hits you both ways in the export market and in import substitution," said Mr Strachan.

Despite the gloom, few observers felt there was any option but to back the management's attempts to concentrate on its main engineering businesses. "It's difficult to see how you could engineer another major rethink," said an analyst. "The BTR team had better stick to their task."

Since Mr Strachan took over, he has implemented a strategy of slimming BTR. down to a core of engineering husinesses. The group has largely completed the first phase of the disposal program, selling husinesses with annual turnover of £2.3hn, and last month sold its polymeric products division to a management huyout team for £515m. It is currently negotiating the sale of its packaging division, which is expected to raise £3bn, and a clutch of smaller subsidiaries. The group hopes to complete the sales next year. "We've had tremendous interest in all of those businesses," Mr Strachan said.

Mr Strachan said the proceeds would be re-invested in the four core engineering divisions: automotive; control systems; power drives; and specialist engineering. He also said the group would return a "significant proportion" of the cash to shareholders.

Bristol & West launches first ISA scheme

Bristol & West today launched what it believes terest on the money removed before the mawill be the first account linked to ISA, the Government's new savings scheme. The building society is planning to launch its savings scheme next week, 16 months ahead of the planned Individual Savings Account, which is officially due out in April 1999.

Details of the ISA, the tax-exempt vehicle that will replace PEPs and Tessas, and which the Government says is designed to encourage millions of people to get into the savings habit, were announced earlier this week.

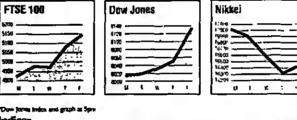

To help people on modest incomes save for opened with as little as £10, with the maximum investment set at £1,000.

although the account holder will lose all in- £50,000 would be taxed from April 1999.

turity date of May 6 1999. Assuming no money is taken out, all interest will be paid on maturity and the aim is to pay that tax-free, within the ISA rules. Bristol & West's product manager Martin Broomfield said: "Our primary concern is to ensure that the public do not abandon the concept of saving between now and the introduction of the ISA.

"We also want to try and maximise the savers' tax-free earnings within the new guidelines. We will do our best to get our pre-ISA accepted as an ISA, as we did with our pre-Tessa." The an ISA, the Bristol & West account can be Government ran into criticism when it launched the ISA on Tuesday. It was accused of squeezing the middle classes after announcing that Tes-It will pay 7.2 per cent gross per annum. sa and PEP savings accounts worth more than

STOCK MARKETS

ndices wa	Class	Change	Change (%)	52 wit high	52 wh low	Yinki (%)
TSE 100 ·	5142.90	60.60	1 19	5367 30	3882.70	3.42
TSE 250	4751.30	25.80	057	4963 80	4321 80	3 35
TSE 350	2469.00	26.20	1.07	2570 50	1935.70	3.41
TSE All Share	2409.33	24.28	1.02	2507 68	1942.22	3.40
TSE SmallCag	2296.5	5.10	0.32	2407.40	2127 50	3.32
TSE Fladgling	1248.5	0.90	0.07	1345 50	1198.70	338
TSE AIM	975.9	5.30	0 55	1138.00	965.90	1 06
low Jones	8114.32	82.56	1 03	8299 03	6236.05	1.68
likksi	15424.48	117 69	0.72	21001.90	14956.13	0 94
lang Seng	11527.60	52.66	0.46	16820.31	8775.88	3.56
lev	4170 OF	30.48	0.73	5450 PD	2760.76	176

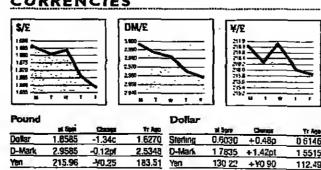

INTEREST RATES

Prior to Carlot & Cape Falls

MAIN PRICE CHANGES

CURRENCIES

91.80 $ index OTHER INDICATORS

- #1 pa	Close	Chig	Tr Age		Latin	Deg	Trago	Next Sgs
Brent Oil (5)	17.99	0.17	24.55	GDP	113.90	3.80	109.7	Jan
Gold (2)	287 95	-0.10	371.85	RPt	159 50	37	153,81	Nov
Silver (S)	5.31	0.01	4.75	Base F	lates	7.25	6.00

107.90 +0.40

Embattled UBS poised for merger with SBC

Swiss banking glant UBS is poised for a multi-billion merger of part or all of its operations with its rival SBC, banking sources said last night. As Lea Paterson reports, a merger may be the only lifeline for emhattled UBS.

Employees of Union Bank of Switzerland (UBS) have been summoned to weekend meetings to hear details of their fate, according to banking sources. UBS is expected to announce a merger with rival Swiss Bank Corporation ISBC), a move which would lead to a jobs "bloodbath" in both the City and clsewhere. A full-scale merger of the two banks would create one of the largest hanks in the world. with assets of more than £350bn.

"UBS has been in paralysis for six months because there's been a feeling that a major announcement is on its way. The hank's lost several key staff in the process," said one insider yesterday.

Discussions between the two banks are thought to have begun some months ago, following UBS's snuh to Switzerland's third hanking giant, Credit Suisse First Boston (CSFB), last year. In April 1996, UBS rejected avertures from CSFB, which recently took control of parts of BZW. Barclays' investment banking arm.

Sources close to UBS say the beleaguered bank could hive off some of its banking activities and merge the remainder with SBC. JP Morgan, the US investment bank, has been named as a likely hidder for the Swiss bank's sizcable equities business. And speculation has also focused on Deutsche Bank, the German bunking giant, as a possible purchaser of UBS's Swiss client portfolio.

Shares in both UBS, whose board met yesterday, and SBC, were sharply higher in Zurich trading yesterday.

The Swiss market is heavily over-banked. and all three Swiss banking giants posted heavy losses last year. Merger speculation has been heightened in recent weeks following comments from a major UBS shareholder, Swiss investor Martin Ehner. Mr Ebner recently suggested that it would make sense for two of the Swiss banks to merge and then hive off some husiness or join forces with a foreign partner.

"UBS is no longer master of its own destiny. If it tries to stay on its own, it's already too late for it to succeed," commented one

Matra chief appointed head of Airbus

Forgeard, is set to be appointed as the new managing director of the four-nation aircraft consortium Airbus Industrie.

Confirmation that Mr Forgeard is to take over the post when Jean Pierson retires next year is expected hefore Christmas, Mr. Forgeard is currently a hourd member of the French defence electronics group Lagardere and chairman of its Matra space and defence

The appointment is key since Mr Forgeard will be one of the executives charged with taking Airbus torward as a single corporate entity from 1999,

Airbus held a meeting of its supervisory board in Toulouse yesterday to discuss Mr Pierson's successor but a spokesman refused to comment on whether a candidate had been selected or when an announcement might be

However, sources in the office of the French Prime Minister, Lionel Jospin, confirmed that Mr Forgeard was France's preferred candidate for the past.

Mr Forgeard is part of that charmed inner circle of Frenchmen who alternate between senior posts in government and industry. A though this has not yet been confirmed. graduate of the prestigious Ecole Politique.

A senior French aerospace executive, Noel he has acted as adviser to French transport and armed forces ministers and sat in Jacques Chirac's cabinet in 1986 in between spells in the French steel industry with Usinor-Sacilor.

It was always certain that a Frenchman would take over the post from Mr Pierson, who was a senior executive with the French Airbus partner Aerospatiale before taking up his present joh.

Other candidates linked with the job include Christian Blane, the former chairman of Air France, Louis Gallois, chairman of the state French railway SNCF, and Gerard Blanc. director of Airbus operations at Aerospatiale.

British Aerospace, which has a 20 per cent stake in Airhus, is familiar with Mr Forgeard. Its missiles division is part of the Anglo-French joint venture Matra BAe which Mr Forgeard is responsible for, BAe also partnered the parent group Lagardere in its unsuccessful hid for the defence electronics group Thomson-CSF.

The chairman of the Airbus supervisory board. Edzard Reuter, formerly head of Daimler Benz Aerospace, is also due to retire next March. He is expected to be replaced by his successor at Dasa, Manfred Bischoff, nica crisis breach in venants le

ا مكنا من الاجل

Marian Strain San Stra

of the state of th

A property of the state of the

A Secretary of the second of t

West - Francisco

The same

A S CALL THE STATE OF THE STATE

Burgaran Salah

and a second of the second

Mary of Same

Car out here was a

The same of the same

pised

 $\partial A(Q) = \{ 1, \dots, n \}$

April 1985

2.25 th 10.25

 $q = \nabla V^{}$

5.000

100

 $a(\gamma) = \gamma_{\gamma}$

All property of

2000 C

130

A . March

32 3805

الأشاء وومرا

125 - 15 M.

 $g_{K^{2}}(t) \in \mathbb{R}^{n \times n}$

 $\rho (1-(n^{2n-1}))^{2n}$

 $_{\rm SOCA}(S^1)$

763 - K

$40 to 650 m

of Airbus

A second

 $20.5 \pm 0.00 \pm 0.00 \pm 0.00$

Strategic Control

Journal of the State of the Sta

4 (1)

JEREMY WARNER ON WHY IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN BETTER TO ALLOW KOREA TO GO UNDER AND THE MERGER OF UBS AND SBC

Why not allow Korea to go to the wall?

25/BUSINESS

What on earth persuades the international but praise for the Far Eastern economic community to come to the aid of countries that get themselves into economic difficulties, as it did this week with a record-breaking $55bn package of support for Korea?

Very few of us these days would think it right to bail out an ailing industrial company, or even a bank, and it is only charity which leads us either privately or through the mechanism of the welfare state to help those who should be helping themselves. So why rescue the sick man of Asia?

Explanations range from the altruistic to the self-interested, but certainly the specific case of Korea is a rather harder one to justify that usual, if only because Korea is a comparatively rich and successful country. Even we in Britain are being forced to contribute to this massive handout, both indirectly through our contributions to the International Monetary Fund, and directly with our own $1,25bn line of standby credit.

On any perspective, this is a bizarre turn of events. Britain still seems prepared to pay Korea's leading corporations huge amounts of money in state aid to set up in business here. Now we are proposing to subsidise them at the other end of the spectrum too.

The West really only has itself to blame for the crisis in the Far East. It is partly our Western money that funded the breakneck pace of growth in the Pacific Rim economies. For every couple of jobs created with our money at Daewoo in Scoul, we lost a couple at Rover in Coventry, but still we cheered from the sidelines, wowed by the success of the Asian Tigers.

Until the present crisis, few had anything model, of which Korea seemed to be a shining example. Before the election, Tony Blair even went so far as to make one of his policysetting speeches from the Pacific Rim, as if to say the way they do it out here is what we in Britain should be aiming for 100.

As their manufacturing base grew and prospered, we began in an act of reckless insanity to start competing with our European partners for their favours. Worse, our own regions would outlid each other for their "expertise" and "knowhow" with ever larger amounts of taxpayers' money. As we now know, these economies are more epitomised by corruption, cronvism and easy money than anything resembling the miraculous. Isn't it about time all this ended? Isn't it about time we turned off the life support machine?

Er, well, maybe not. Satisfying though it might be to see the Korean economy go down the swanner, it probably wouldn't be in our interests. A Korean collapse would greatly exaggerate the already serious connomic crisis in the Far East, with damaging knock-on effects into the world economy.

At its most extreme the effect might be to plunge the global economy into a deflationary spiral. In the short term at least. it therefore cannot be in our interests to let these economies go to the wall, Moreover, though the Far East seems to have done rather better out of the bargain than us, these are still important markets for Westem goods. As a consequence, the slowdown in these economies is already threatening growth in the West as well.

smaller, less significant and poorer economies, nobody would have lifted a finger to help them. It is because their collapse threatens our own prosperity that we are willing to lend suppon.

The other main argument for this bailout is that it comes at a high price. The international package of aid is only a temporary bridging toan; everyone expects to get their money back. More importantly, the IMF is able to extract a weighty level of economic and structural reform as a condition of its support. This is judged important not just because it ought to hury the lax, corrupt and dirigiste ways of the past, but also because it allows the IMF to impose the American economic model on a region which has habitually cherry-picked the most advantageous aspeets of our Anglo Saxon ways while aitempting to disregard the rest.

In a sense, what the IMF is doing is its own particular form of economic imperialism. Because the Asian economies have so ruthlessly exploited our own domestic economies and capital markets while stubbornly failing to open up their own, it seems somehow justifiable. Britain knows all about the humiliation of going through the IMF mangle, because we were there ourselves in the mid-1970s. We also know that it is possible to see in the reforms that were forced on us by the IMF in 1976 the roots of our own economic revival today.

The more enlightened elements of the Korean government already see their own national humiliation much in this light. For

The unpleasant irony is, that if these were them there is a silver liming to the crisis, because it allows for the introduction of necessary economic and structural reform while being able firmly to blame it all on the forces of American imperialism. Neat.

There is an important argument against what the IMF is doing, however, which is the argument used against all forms of development aid. Far from helping the simation, such support only accentuates it, the argument goes, by providing a cushion and slowing the necessary process of catharsis and rebirth. There is something in this, though in the case of a large economy like Korea, it needs to be carefully weighed against the likely economic damage to the West if we were to allow events to take their own course. The possibility that things could turn against the West politically if Korea were allowed to go to the wall also needs to be taken into account.

It is human nature always to avert a crisis where it is possible to do so, a tendency learns from the generally brutal short-term consequences of allowing things to reach the melidown stage. But h may be that we would have done better to leave well alone. By any standards this was a massive bail-out. It is all very well pouring money into ensuring that the merry go round carries on turning, but it is not at all clear that the world can afford these massive infusions of cash. The IMF has yet to get its money back from the last bail-out, Mexico. This latest raft of rescues tests the international purse strings to their limits.

Western equity markets have meanwhile begun to behave as if the crisis in the Far East never happened. Both the FTSE 100 index in London and the Dow in New York are back to within spitting distance of their all-time highs. Many have lost more money on the bounce than the original drop. This can be taken as evidence either of a remarkable degree of resilience in Western economies to events elsewhere in the world, or of a quite breathtaking complacency. Unfortunately, 1 am unable to offer an opinion on which of these views is the more likely to be correct. Things have defied gravity for so long now, that it may he this has become the natural way of the world.

Merging Swiss Bank Corporation with Union Bank of Switzerland makes such obvious commercial sense that it is a wonder it has taken the two so long to start talking. The potential for cost savings in regional, private and investment banking make the benefits of combining Nat West and Barclays look pedestrian by comparison.

However, there's another way of took as it. Putting together SBC Warburg with UBS Phillips and Drew will mean hig joh losses in the City and the disappearance of vet another competitive force in equity trading and corporate finance. We've already had in short order the sale and consolidation of the equity businesses of both NatWest Markets and BZW. Now another hig player. UBS, is about to join them in the dustbin of history. Isn't it about unic the competition authorities took a look at whether the investing public is being disadvantaged by this banking carve up?

lonica crisis mounts as breach in banking covenants looms.

The problems circling lonica, the troubled wireless phones operator, deepened yesterday after it emerged that the group had warned its main lenders that it expected to breach its banking covenants. Michael Hamson report on Ionica's spectacular plunge in fortunes.

lonica has told its bankers that it will be untikely to meer the challenging obligations in a £300m loan agreement signed in June, a month before the group's £640m flotation. To meet the covenants, Ionica must have 195,000 residential phone customers by the end of next year and be able to offer a service to 3.8 million homes. It currently bas just 31,000 subscribers and covers 1.65 million bouseholds.

The agreement also stipulates that the company must achieve minimum revenues of £19.2m between October and December 1998. The group has pioneered technology in England and Wales which uses wireless signals from ariels on homes to by-pass British Telecom's residential network.

Sources close to the discussions said though Ionica would not need the funds until next year, it was "unlikely" to meet the obligations. Talks to renogiate the loans are expected to begin next Spring, when the company is clearer about whether it can solve a series of technological problems. though the banks are likely to impose even more onerous conditions on the loans. A spokesman said the company talked to its banks "all the time" and its business case was unaltered.

These setbacks bave spawned a City nightmare as the shares, floated in July at 390p and which briefly touched 399p. crashed over the past few weeks to little more than £1, wiping almost £500m from the company's market value. Yesterday they fell another 5p to 102.5p, after one investor sold 660,000 shares at just 95p.

Nigel Playford, Ionica's energetic but embattled chief executive and founder, has embarked on a City offensive to the nerves of investors and analysts. But its shareholders, who include the Boots chairman Lord Blyth and a phalanx of big companies led by Yorkshire Electric, must be wondering when the rot will stop.

Analysts also remain sceptical. Mark Lambert, from Merrillrich said: Their covenants are tied to certain operating targets which are likely to be more difficult to achieve." Mark Lambert. He pointed to the brief trading record of a company which only began its service last year. "Investing in young companies always carried additional risks. Unfortunately in this case many of those risks have materialised."

Privately other analysts are much less complimentary. One said that Mr Playford's position at the helm should be seriously questioned, though few expect him to step down, not least of Ionica's reputation as a one-man сотралу.

"This is a woeful tale of management inadequacy and incompetence," said another. "I don't think I have ever seen a share price drop in the way lonica's has and you have to wonder who is going to have the courage to call the bottom of the market and start buying them again."

Mr Playford's grip on day-today operations has already been weakened by the appointment last month of Mike Biden, a former BT executive, to work alongside him as chief operating officer. "This is a classic move for a telecoms company in difficulties," said one analyst. "You peach someone from BT who should know how to run things. Whether it will work out that way is another matter."

But the small print in Ionica's flotation prospectus points to another reason to retain Mr Playford, who is paid a £250,000 salary. Apart from a three-year notice period if his contract is terminated, the documents show he can only be asked to resign as a director if be owns less than 5 million Ionica shares. He currently holds twice that number, giving him about 5 per cent of the company. The crisis is a far cry from Mr Playford's exuberant mood over the summer. One morning in early June, as he sat in the boardroom of Ionica's Cambridge headquarters surrounded by piles of ring-bound documents entitled "Introduction to the London Stock Exchange," he enthused about the company's plans to take on BT in the domestic telephone market with its innovative radiobased technology.

"This business exists to keep shareholders, employees, cusiomers and, to some extent, the Government bappy. So far we are keeping them all happy simultaneously. I can't see any shareholders being interested in selling out until our dream comes true," be said.

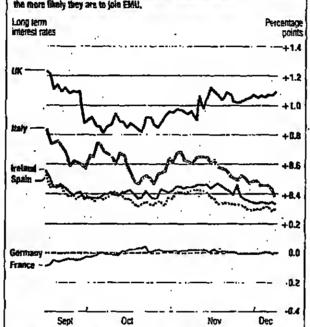

For weeks after the float whispers in the City had suggested the opposite, with suspicions that Ionica's innovative technology had hit serious problems. But the scale of the difficulties sturned investors, as last month the company admitted to a list of technical and operational setbacks.

The base stations in some areas have already been swamped by demand, hitting capacity constriaints. Worse still, new software to boost call capacity from Nortel, one of the world's largest equipment makers and Ionica's technology partner, will not appear until next May.

On top of this analysts were stunned to hear that many of lonica's customers who flocked to join the service had turned into credit risks. Disconnections have soared, while many prospective subscribers have been rejected because of low credit ratings.

Yesterday Ionica quietly extended its service to 191,000 bomes in Sheffield and Rotherham. But it has simultaneously been forced to stop marketing to homes in parts of East Anglia, the first region to gain a service, because capacity al base stations has run out.

Back in June, it did not appear as if anything could dent Ionica's prospects. Surveying the landscape, Mr Playford said he could not spot any obvious disaster waiting to happen. "When we started in 1992 we have no technology, no money. no staff, no customers, no interconnection and no number portability. Now we can tick every one of those and if we do no more than we are doing now

Who will be in EMU? The financial markets' view

The closer other countries not to the dashed baseline (Germany)

TOWARDS EMU: If the line moves towards the German base line it means investors no longer tequire such a high premium for holding that country's bonds compared to German ones, because they are confident the currency won't devalue against the mark. In other words, they think that country will be locked into a single currency with Germany in 10 years' time.

AWAY FROM EMU: However, if they think the country won't be in EMU, that it will have blother inflation, and that there is a risk of a future devaluation against the mark, then they will demand an extra premium for holding that country's bonds, so

When will EMU start? The City Analysts' View.

The Independent asked analysts from: Nikke Europe, Paine Webber, ABN Auro, JP Morgan, Deutsche Morgan Grenfelt Saloman Brothers, Goldman Sacks, HSBC James Capel, UBS what probability they placed on EMU starting on time.

Probability EMU never happens:	4%	(4% last week)
Probability EMU is delayed:	15%	(15% last week)
Probability EMU starts on time:	81%	(81% last week)

EMU boost from German growth figures

German GDP figures released earlier this week could mean that EMU gets off to a smooth start, according to The Independent's panel of experts. The data showed German economic growth was still beavily reliant on a buoyant export sector. But domestic demand remained relatively weak.

According to Robert Lind of ABN Amro, the figures make it less likely the Bundesbank will raise German interest rates again. The last German rate rise was badly received in France. The Bank of France followed the Bundesbank lead and increased rates, despite government concern about unemployment.

The risks to monetary union are political, not economic," commented Julian Jessop of Nikko Europe.

The re-election on Tuesday of pro-European Oskar Lafontaine as leader of the German opposition has also boosted EMU's chances of starting on time, according to Mr Jessop. "We are thinking of revising our probahility [of EMU starting on time] upwards," he said vesterday.

Mr Lafontaine's main rival Eurosceptic Gerhard Schröder, currently Prime Minister of Lower Saxony. Following this week's vote, Mr Schröder is less likely to emerge as the Opposition's challenger to Chancellor Kohl in next September's federal elections.

Courts warns on impact of strong pound

Courts, the international furniture and electrical retailer. warned that the impact of the strong pound would have a greater effect in the second balf of the financial year as it unveiled a 1.6 per cent rise in profits for the first six months.

For the six months to September it made £9.71m, up from £9.56m, on a 16.6 per cent increase in turnover from continuing operations to £210m from £180m. The company proposed a dividend of 1.05p, up 5 per cent. If September 1996 exchange rates from bad been used to translate the half-year's figures, turnover would have been higher by £14.1m and pretax profits by £1.3m.

BOC man quits

The president of BOC Gases Americas and chairman and chief executive of BOC Process Plants and Cryostar, Seifi Ghasemi, has quit, industrial gases group BOC said yesterday. In a statement, Mr Ghasemi said he was leaving because he wanted the chance to run a company in his own right. BOC. said it expected to announce Mr Ghasemi's replacement and

Carpet businesses sold

Household goods group Readicut International is selling its UK and Dutch carpet businesses for £30m. The company also reported a 36 per cent increase in its pre-tax profits to £4.5m in six months to September 30. Readicut said it was selling the businesses to Interface Europe Ltd and Interface Europe BV, subsidiaries of US group Interface Inc. The company said it was also planning to sell its American carpet and UK varn spinning husinesses. The sale of these units were still being negotiated. The combined value of its yarn spinning and carpet husinesses is expected to be more than £50m.

Cable TV dispute settled

Cable & Wireless Communications, the UK's biggest cable operator, has settled its dispute with Channel Onc. The pair were due to go to the High Court next week over CWC's exclusion of Channel One from its cheapest package of channels. CWC said yesterday that, although Channel One would not be included in its Headstart basic package, it would provide the channel with guaranteed revenue and would run promotions to encourage subscribers to take packages that did include Channel One.

A similar disagreement also broke out between NTL, the cable operator, and Live TV, the channel owned by Mirror Group. CWC and Channel One had two preliminary court bearings before deciding to settle ahead of next week's appearance. Headstart offers a telephone line and a small numher of cable channels for £11.99 a month.

Betterware approach

Betterware, the catalogue household products group, has received an approach from two of its senior executives that could lead to a takeover bid at a "small premium" to its current market value of about £100m.

The approach has come from managing director Peter Hartley and finance director Paul Turner, who have a formed a company backed by Nat West Equity Partners. Shares in the Birmingham-based company jumped 4.5p to 102p after the news emerged, adding to the 10 per cent rise on Thursday.

Greene King profits up

Pre-tax profits at Greene King, the brewer and puh operator, rose 54 per cent to £20.7m from £13.4m, boosted by the acquisition of the Magic Pub group, which it bought in July 1996. The operator of Hungry Horse and King's Fayre outs and brewer of Greene King and Ahbot Ale said earnings per share adjusted for one-off items rose 13 per cent to 23.7p and pre-tax profit rose 26 per cent to £19.1m.

Greene King's Magic Pub acquisition drove operating profit growth, at a time when rivid pub operators have reported pressure on profits because of competition and the need to spend heavily to meet consumers' taste for themed and branded pubs.

COMPANY RESULTS

210.36m (178.1m)	0.220m (0.079m) 9.71m (9.56m)	0 7p (0 3p) 7 460 (9.7p)	-(-)
	9.71m (9 56m)	7.460 (9.7n)	1 0En (1 0n)
			1 05p (1 0p
132 1m (107 6m)	20.7m (13.4m)	26 7p (18 8p)	5 3p (4.75p)
50m (0 972m)	0 391m (0.340m)	6.7p (n.a)	2.2p (·)
95.7m (94.34m)	14.31m (19.9m)	6.9p (B 9p)	2.630 (2.63)
0 045m (0 934m)	3 06m (0.565m)	9 92p (2.54p)	·(-I
EPS is pre-aucept	onale "Drvidend to	be paid as a FID	,
	50m (0 972m) 95.7m (94.34m) 1045m (0 934m)	50m (0 972m) 0 391m (0.340m) 95.7m (94.34m) 14.31m (19.9m) 1045m (0 934m) 3 06m (0.565m)	50m (0 972m) 0 391m (0.340m) 6.7p (n.a) 35.7m (94,34m) 14.31m (19.9m) 6.9p (8.9p)

Footsie rebounds after jitters on Wall St at strong job figures

Stronger than expected US jobs data sent the FTSE tumbling yesterday on fears of plunges in the Dow. But the sell-off in Wall Street failed to materialise, and the FTSE rebounded strongly to close at 5142.9, up 60.6. Lea Paterson reports on a

The US economy is going from strength to strength, according to employment data released yesterday. Non-farm payrolls leapt by 404,000 in November, the higgest one-month increase since February 1996, and almost double the number markets had anticipated.

volatile day in the financial markets.

The unexpectedly strong figures put traders on red alert in the early afternoon. The Dow was expected to plunge by 100 points at market opening. 2.30pm GMT. Nervous IJK dealers began selling off shares prior to Wall Street's opening. sending the FTSE tumbling from 5.148.7 just before midding to 5,047.9 at 1.45pm. But US dealers held their remained firm on speculation that the employment data would not persuade the US Federal Reserve to raise inter-

The strong US stock market prompted a rebound in the FTSE in late afternoon trade. The FTSE closed at 51429, 60.6 up on the day. The US payrolls rise brought November's unemployment rate down by 0.1 per cent to 4.6 per cent, the lowest since October 1973, Experts had expected unemployment to rise to 4.8 percent. Market jitters are likely to continue until the Fed decides US interest rates later this month. But many US dealers are expecting rates to remain on hold, at least for the time being. There is still evidence of deflation in US manufacturing. and increases in productivity are helping rein in US labour costs. Investors switching funds out of the bond market also helped push US equities higher vesterday, dealers said.

US interest rate watchers will be watching US retail sales data and producer price data, both scheduled for release next week. "With calm markets else-nerve, and shares in New York where, [US] retail sales will be quite important in bringing hack some focus to domestic markets and possibly some fear there may be a Fed move the following week," said Andrew Snowbatt, economist at Julius Baer Investments in London.

Figures out on Thursday are forecast to show US retail sales up 0.3 per cent in November after a fall of 0.2 percent in October. US producer price index data are scheduled for release on Friday.

UK economists will be keeping their eves on UK retail prices data, due to be published on Tuesday. Nat West Markets are forecasting no change, leaving inflation running 3.7 per cent higher than at this time last year. "Prices in the high street should he held back by the strength of the pound and this should outweigh the negatives to leave inflating unchanged on all measures," said NatWest.

UK producer prices are scheduled for release on Monday. NatWest is forecasting a further wave of input price detlation, It said: "This should feed through to lower output price inflation, especially as UK manutacturers are feeling less bullish about prices and output."

we will do fantastically well." He also made the now hare price, pence bollow-sounding pledge that Ionica would not repeat the mistakes of so many of the cable companies that had gone from shooting stars to basket cases within months of flotation. "The reason shares in the cable operators have done so hadly is that they made promises they have not been able to keep," he said.

26/THE BIG PICTURE

Northern lights: Stirling Castle bathed in the illumination of a new state-of-the-art floodlight system, installed at a cost of almost £500,000 and switched on for the first time last night. The lights feature dramatic effects inside the castle as well as playing on the textures and shadows of the walls that have witnessed many key episodes in Scotland's history

166M-2 Family PC

- P 166M-2 IBM 6x86M0, PR166 Processor (similar performance to our 200M Imal Persoum 200Minz MMX based system)
- 20Met Annu based system)

 32Mb EDO RAM

 4 3Gb Seagate Utra ATA Hard DeA

 24 speed Mou Lis CD-RCM drive
 ESS 3D Wavetable stereo cound

 512K peptims burst cache
- SiS 84-bit edvanced graphics using 4Mb of system RAM, MPEG & Microsoft direct 3D
- USB ports 14" SVGA Ni 0.28dp colour screen (15" £29 +VAT = £81 08 and 17" £219+VAT =£257 33
- extrat
 BM GOLD speech recognision software (microphone with Evec models only) RAC Raily, Interactive Seiling and Min-office typing pack.
 All Standard Features: Preloaded Software
- with Lotus Smartsuite 97. Clucken v5. ISM Anthinus, Pressificitis, Designificatis. Homewise Windows 95 with manual & CD. 105 keyboard, 1.44Mb Roppy drive, Pe/2 mouse, edvanced motherboard with 88 stan-dard ports and year 2000 compliant BIOS, 90 minute video user grude, recovery diek, tuli support, 14 day money back guerantee (excluding camage) and 12 months warranty exaudible to 5 years.

FREE Printer Offer - Irrated to first 2000 oxders only

200M-2 Family PC"

Best Buy model with faster 2004XX processor with LIMX Technology massive 64480 EDO RAM, 56% uncontravidate/internet modern. Premium spoaker voice/tax/deta/internet modern. Premis and full VideoPhone with colour video £249 +VAT extra = £282.58 extra

€36 ₩ Amazing 200M-2 Spec 200M-2 MMX

64Mb RAM # 4.3Gb Hard Disk

- - Full VideoPhone
 - Colour Video
 - Camera 图 24x CD-ROM
 - SIS 4Mb Graphics 图 3D Wavetable
 - Y Speech Recognition
 - Massive Software
 - FREE PRINTER
 (Limited to first 2000 only)

FREE PRINTER

Purchase the superb Exec Family bundle below and pay just £29 per

The Best PC Deal For Christmas

Time out out the middleman to offer you direct, our high specification Family PC "systems from a sensational £929 +VAT! These home systems are easy to use and are ideal for education, work and leisure. We even get you started with our 90 min VHS month on 2 Years Interest Free Credit Order direct now or visit your local Time showroom and get the best PC value in the land. With direct support and 14 day money back guarantee. you simply can not go wrong.

Freephone Time Now!

COMPUTER SYSTEMS

Order by 15th December for Guaranteed Pre-Christmas Delivery *

GENEVA easyJet are giving you the opportunity

The Independent in association with to fly to Geneva before Christmas for just £9 each way. This is to celebrate the launch of easylet's new route to Geneva, flying from London Luton.

that's 250 returns.

You can fly for just £9 each way. The

1. There are 500 single seats available for Geneva. This represents 250 returns. They will be sold on a first come first served basis.

2. Neither easyJet or Newspaper Publishing plc can be held responsible for callers who cannot

3. There is a maximum of 5 passengers per booking end a medmum of one booking per

4. The booking line (0870 601 0072) will be open today between 10am and 6pm only. You can book your flights by telephoning this num-

5. Passengers under 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Infants aged 23 months or less - determined by the age on the date of travel - can travel free of charge on condition that they share the same seat of travel as the adult accompanying them. Only one infant may

6. Passengers are responsible for paying applicable airport and local government taxes includ-

Bookings are made subject to availability.

get through to the booking line.

ber today between these hours.

accompany each adult.

The beautiful city of Geneva lies on the banks of the largest lake in Central Europe at the foot of the Jura mountains. Its charm and privileged location makes Geneva a popular destination all year round.

Geneva is surrounded by magnificent offer price is for flights between 16 countryside, forests, rivers and hills and 22 December 1997 inclusive. and is sure to take your breath away. There are 500 single seats available -For a more energetic break take gers take out insurance. All passengers travelling on International flights must have a valid 10 year passport and necessary visas. non refundable.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

between 16 December and 22 Decembar 1997 inclusive. may are be made by sellen, Mustercaid, Visa. American Express, or Delta cards on the tele-

8.All outward end return travel must be taken phone at the time of booking. Payment by cash or cheque will not be accepted. All flights and schedules are subject to change without prior notice. Previous bookings made period of this promotion cannot be exchanged or refunded for any boket acquired under this promotion. 11 easylet reserve the right not to accept muling Air Passenger Duty which is £10 from the trade or social groups.

responsible for obtaining, and possessing (if flights booked on the Promotion and shall preappropriate) valid passports, visas and insur- vail in the event of any inconsistency with the or Southern Ireland. ance, it is strongly recommended that passen terms of the Promotion. Easylet reserves the yourself off to the nearby Jura and Alpine ski resorts for some winter sports.

THE INDEPENDENT

HOW TO BOOK

The booking number is 0870 601 0072 and you must book your flight between 10am and 6pm today only. Prices exclude airport tax . Tax from the UK is £10, from Geneva it is £7.

nght to vary its conditions of carnage. Copies are available at EasyJet sales points. 13. EasyJet and Newspaper Publishing pic shall not be liable for any failure to fulfil this promotion where such fallure is caused by any supervening circumstances emounting to force majeure. Such circumstances shall include. but shall not be limited to, severe weather conditions, fire, flood, earthquake or severe movemant of land of bules natural phenomena. industrial dispute, war, riots, acts of God, supervening legislation or events which, without the fault of either party, render performance impossible or incapable of satisfactory execution. permitted after a booking has been accepted. 14. This offer is not available to employees of Newspaper Publishing plc or easylet or anyone associated with the promotion.

prior to this promotion and for use during the 15. easylet reserve the right to refuse to honour any application or recover the cost of any booking if it considers there has been an abuse of this promotion or breach of any of the terms tiple applications and bulk applications from 16. The decision of easy/et end/or Newspaper Publishing pic in all matters under their respec-UK and £7 from Geneva. Passengers are 12. easylet's conditions of carriage apply to all tive control is final and binding.

صكنا من الاعل

TIME OFF

TRAVEL, LEISURE & SPORT

fra the nearth email PERCENT IN LANGUAGE

Proces and used totals

BOOK ng namber s 2072 (4.2) Fr - LEI TOP

Thai dive: waving, not drowning

Going on a diving course is like acquiring a passport to a different, magical and painfully fragile world, as Rhiannon Batten found out off an island in Thailand.

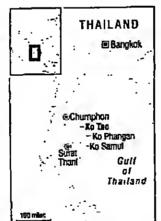

That first step off the side of the boat, heart thumping as I hit the water and the weight of the scuba gear dragging me into the water, was probably the most memorable I've ever taken.

clumsily on the deck of the boat - eyes fixed oo the horizon. hands pressing mask to face, the sound of breathing gurgling io my ears - the oext I had splashed down under the water alone, silent, and weightless. Slowly my fellow divers pluoged in and joined me. We were surrouoded by subducd colour and shape and the mumbled munching of fish. Coral with velvety purple sacks spilled out soft, wafting tendrils to tickle the pretty flecked back of a passing ray. Pairs of

One momeot I was balanciog bannerfish with long graceful tails swept through shoals of shiny pink and yellow fish. This was the first time I had scuba dived and I knew as soon as I jumped that I was hooked.

Back above the water, a few days earlier, the pastelcoloured boat bobbing across to the island of Ko Tao, off the cast coast of Thailand, had beeo packed with noisy touts, all pushing hard to sell their dive schools. We decided oo Planet Scuba dive school partly because it was one of the few that employed no touts. There were other considerations they had a shop in town that was right next door to the local happy hour bar, the Safety Stop. If they do not already have a scuba diving qualification. most visitors to Ko Tao take the four-day PADI (Professional Association of Diving Instructors) Open Water course for beginners. This is a mixture of classroom lessons and practical instruction. You hegin in the shallows of a swimming pool, where people like me can safely panie underwater and splutter their way to the surface, then move on to the offshore dive

Once you've mastered the PADI slogans and grappled with the scuba equipment practice, drills are a doddle. It's all pretty straightforward - putting on and taking off equipment, carrying out safety checks, practising what to do if you run out of air under water (no one ever found themselves in this situation for real) and general underwater health and safety.

The best thing about the course is that the more dives

continued on page 2

INSIDE

CITY BREAKS

48 hours in Havana/5

SKHNG Up, up and over the pistes /6

KNOWING... Alan Partridge's Norwich 8/9

SPORT

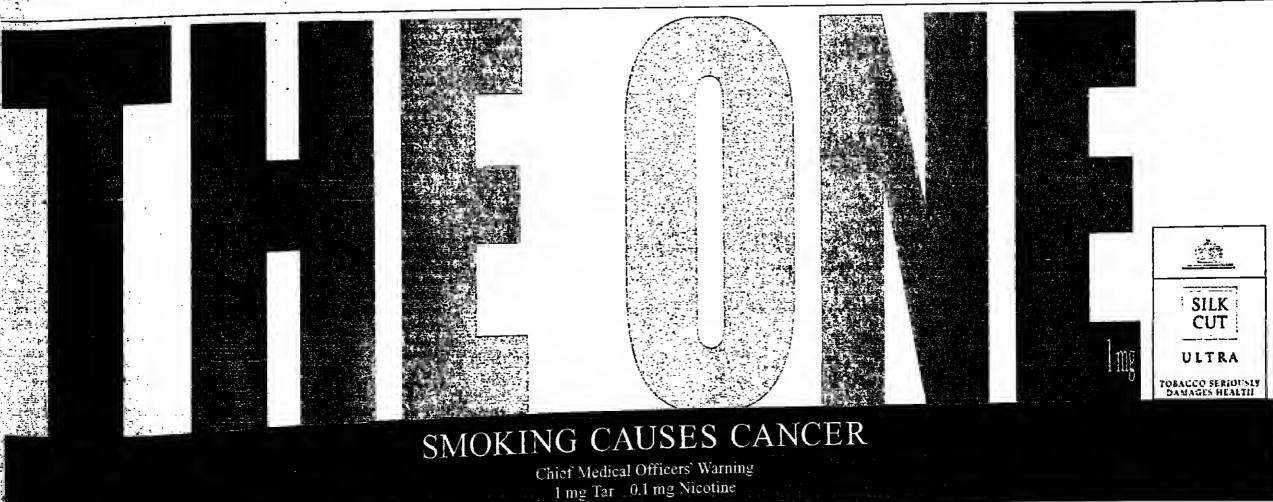

WORLD CUP

Hoddle: luck of the draw/24

Sepp Blatter: FIFA's Mr Fixit/24

RETURN OF THE HERCES

Bjorn Borg v McEnroe/2l

you do, the more confident you become so, instead of spending the time underwater worrying about whether your air is getting too low or whether you're getting on everyone's nerves because you can't control your huoyancy, it suddenly all clicks into place rather like learning to drive. Once that happens, you relax and spend the time looking out for fantasic fish to talk about later at the Drop Zone har.

Ko Tao itself is a tremendously pretty place. A steep and sweaty climb up the centre of the island brings you out at the highest vantage point. Two Views. From here you're faced with a problem; do you bead down 10 quiet Tanote Bay and the best snorkelling for miles, or to Hat Sairce, the island's main beach? This is the nearest Ko Tao gets - for the time being - to a party capital. Pretty bungalows are clustered along the beach, interspersed every now with hars - rounds of B52s downed at the Drop Zone bar, AC Twos and its Black Moon parties, Blue Winds cafe and blueberry lassies gulped down in candlelight, plumped up hodies propped against elegant Thai cushions. Turn right off the beach and you come to the Halfway restaurant which does whole barbecued fish and spice pumpkin curries and, if you're still going on a Friday night, carry on to the Jungle Club to strut your stuffed form on the open-air dance floor,

Of course, though, the best scenery on Ko Tao is off the side of a boat: coral with names like Neptune's Cup, and fish as fancy, and as ridiculous, as pantomime dames. Coming back up to the surface is like popping a giant hubble into earth - even more so after a night dive when you boh back to the boat under a black sky sprinkled generously with brilliant stars. Once back on the boat there is always a huge feeling of satisfaction - and a lot of excited chatter, as though the divers are making up for the silence of the underwater

For the moment, Ko Tao is a diver's paradise. Indeed there is little to do here if you're not diving. You spend your days exploring curious fish and flamboyant corals and get back in time to spend your nights partying on Sairce beach, You don't even have to worry about a hangover - diving is the best cure you can get, or so the instructors kept proving to each other.

In fact Ko Tao should have a health warning. After two weeks there I'd become every hit as seduced as the instructors and would-be instructors who had gone home from holidays full of enthusiasm and returned a year or so later to live the life. As we finalty dragged ourselves on to the boat, leaving the island's little multi-coloured port, I was full of plans to come

Perhaps I should do so soon. Diving, I was told by some people, is destroying the island. The number of dive schools and related hungalows and bars, has exploded on an island that was relatively deserted five years ago. For the moment, though, there are still some deserted beaches, a largely uninhabited inland area and, so far, only limited electricity and low-rise construction. Yet things are changing fast and rumours of airstrips and big botels being huilt are currently doing the rounds...

Getting there

Rhiannon Batten flew to Bangkok on Lufthansa for £250 return, on a special deal for under-26s through Campus Travel. In the absence of such special deals, the lowest prices - around £350 are available on carriers such as Bangladesh Biman, Tarom, and Uzbekistan Airways. From Bangkok you can buy bus/train and boat combination tickets, or travel down to Chumphon or Surat Thani and get the boat across from there. We got a combination boat and bus ticket from Ko Pha Ngan (the next island across) back to the Khao San Road in Bangkok for 300B (about £6). Sleeper trains are fun, but are more expensive.

Where to dive

Planet Scuba is at Hat Sairee and Mae Haad an Open Water course costs 7800B (around £160) and includes four dives. For a list of UK dive centres contact PADI International Ltd, Unit 6, Unicorn Park, Whitby Road, Bristol, BS4 4EX (0117 9711717)

Where to stay

Rhiannon Batten stayed at Sairec Cottages on Sairee Beach for 100B (about £2) a night for a double hed and private bathroom. There are many other such places - and it's fun to stroil down one of the beaches and find somewhere you like.

World Cup travel without scoring a goal

Sick of soccer? You probably will be, by the time the World Cup ends in Paris on 12 July next year. But the draw for the tournament focuses attention on some muchunderrated holiday destinations. In this roundup of the rivals, the linesmen are Simon Calder and Jon Glover, while Harriet O'Brien referees.

In the Horse and Groom on Thursday evening, while waiting for the World Cup draw to be made, we played fantasy travel: exploring the possible 30 rivals for England and Scotland in terms of travel potential. The dream holiday group was Spain, Mexico and Colombia, while the nightmare travel draw comprised Romania, Saudi Arahia and Nigeria.

The fantasy groups for both danger and beaches contained two of the teams the home countries will face: Brazil and Colomhia. Tunisia was deemed one of the boring holiday trio (apologies, too, to Holland and Belgium). Neither England nor Scotland benefits from being in the fantasy gourmet group - France, Mexico and Japan - nor the optimum cultural draw (Italy, Mexico and

On the night, though, the draw produced an intriguing selection of countries, Included in our survey are those essential alternatives: to lager, to soccer and to World Cup frenzy.

English expectations

Colombia: drug-crazed, violent criminals? Some of the England fans may indeed be, hut most Colombians are purely friendly, welcoming hosts to South America's most splendid country.

Whatever you want out of a holiday, Colombia will provide - exquisite pre-Columbian jewellery at the Gold Museum in Bogota, serene Spanish colonialism in Cartagena, robustly excellent food in Medellin, and scenery from the graceful Caribbean coast to spectacular mountain Best local alternative to lager: coffee, though more exotic substances are available. Best alternative activity to soccer.

swimming. Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C: the Darien Gap, the jungle wilderness in which Colombia merges with Romania: this country earned its place in the nightmare fantasy group because it was the only one of the competing countries where one of us bad been arrested (not counting England and Scotland).

But if you can evade the po-

Offside: markets provide a rare sense of adventure for visitors to Tunisia Photo: James Davis

lice, then the Traosylvanian mountains and Moldavian monasteries provide ample reward for the traveller.

Best local alternative to lager: some Romanian wine, particularly the red, is outstanding. Unfortunately, this is the stuff that is exported. But what remains is chean and ebeeky.

Best alternative activity to soccer: skiing in the resort of Poiana

Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C: try to find a monastery run by a silent order.

Tunisia: this is a location designed for the get-away-from-itall holiday, but with little to get away to. Most packages are designed for the unadventurous. with tourists generally expected to do little clse than lie by the hotel pool and occasionally saunter around the local markets. For those needing to escape from the sunlounger, trips to the ruins of Cathage, to the socalled "sugar-box city" of Sidi Bou Said, and to the desert, are welcome diversions.

Best local alternative to lager: the local red wine is cheap and not at all disagreeable.

Best alternative activity to soccer: the camel touts on the beach will try to persuade you to take a ride along the sands. Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C: the eave where Kristin Scott Thomas met her demise in The English Batient. which was filmed in Tunisia - as was Star Wars.

Atlantic chart, noon today

Scottish suggestions

Brazil: South America's largest country recently set out to scare off tourists. Not content with an urban crime level of alarming proportions, it imposed a tax of £55 just to leave the country.

Yet it's worth stumping up for the most exuberant nation on earth, which also has the finest city heaches of anywhere in the world: Copacabana and Ipanema may have inspired some dismal songs, but they are superb strands fringing this huge, ungainly city.

But watch your belongings: the reason the bikinis are so brief is probably because everything else has been stolen.

Best local alternative to lager: aguadente, a rougher version of Norway: in any "Lakes and Best alternative activity to soccer. if pressed, most Brazilians would suggest only death.

Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C: camping in the forgotten wilderness of the Pantanal. The South American Handbook warns, though, of piranhas and killer bees: "The inexperienced are cautioned not to strike out on their own".

Morocco: camels, peppermint tea, labyrinthine souks: images of Morocco tend to crowd in on each other, a reverberation of one of northern Africa's most colourful has to be said, is easiest in the south - tourists tend to get hassled in the north) and you'll find an appealing sense of warmth and generosity from the local people Best local alternative to lager: peppermint tea, though some tourists prefer to smoke the produce of one of Morocco's leading cash (or should that he hash?)

crops. Best alternative activity to soccer: show a Moroccan some water. and he or she will likely start fishing. The Atlantic coast of the Western Sahara is reckoned to be the optimum location.

Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C"": Football is a national obsession, as befits a country where half the population is under 2tl. But the Sahara should escape the uproar.

Mountains" fantasy group, Norway would be right up there with Chile. You wouldn't go there for its cities, though Bergen has one of the finest harbour settings in the world. You would go there for its scenery, a constantly astonishing series of encounters hetween steely waters and shattered Glogg, a non-alcoholic (and therefore non-ruinous) cordial. Best alternative activity to soccer: some of the greatest outdoors in Europe, for hiking, eveling or sailing.

Best local alternative to lager:

Best place to avoid all mention of the W* C: Spitzbergen. Relax into the place (which, it the northernmost inhabited island on earth. It is split between Norway and Russia: the latter half is unlikely to show much interest. since they failed to qualify.

The 1929 Warsaw Convention, which regulates international air travel, is such an important piece of legislation that even a ticketless airline such as EasyJet gives its passengers a slip of paper outlining the provisions. Look closely, though: the chief purpose of the treaty is to restrict the amount that can be claimed from an airline in the event of an accident.

I read the small print while waiting at Heathrow for a delayed Polish Airlines flight to, ironically, Warsaw. "Liability of the carrier for death or personal injury to passengers is limited in most cases to approximately $10,000 or $20,000 (£6,000 or £12,000)." The 68year-old Convention, drafted in an age when air travel was far more primitive, offers a pitiably small figure for casualties: fortunately air accidents are so rare that the chances of ever heing a vietim of (a) a crash, and (b) the Warsaw Convention, are minuscule. It is much more likely that you will suffer from the other provisions of the agreement.

The flight to Warsaw eventually left about half an hour late - just tardy enough for me to miss my train connection to Poznan. As luck would have it, the departure board at the airport showed a Polish Airlines flight to Poznan, It cost £50, but would, in theory, allow me to make up the lost time. Except that it left 90 minutes late.

So I wrote to Polish Airlines explaining that as a result of the plane's delay at Heathrow. I was out of pocket by another £50 for an a even tardier flight. The airline's reply quoted Article 20 of the Convention: "A carrier is not responsible for changes of circumstances the carrier could not have foreseen eg weather condition [sie], traffic ete". But. I protested, the reason the flight arrived 90 minutes late at Poznan was because Polish Airlines failed to provide a serviceable plane. That treaty came to the airline's rescue again: "A carrier may without notice er I was checked in and in a cancel, terminate, divert. postpone or delay any flight with no future liability to the blanche springs to mind. In other words, the Warsaw Convention provides no real protection for consumers heyond the right to choose another airline next time.

Polish Airlines provides a free magazine, called What, Where, When Warszawa. The tone of this publication is set by the cover, which promises Information for Tourists and Businessmen (my italics). The section "Warsaw at Night" covers just one club: 'Arena opens at 8pm and delivers the goods until 4am. Any night of the week you witness at least three wrestling contests performed in front of you by profes- and I didn't need US dollars. sional as well as amateur as I paid on my card."

SIMON CALDER

WOMEN WRESTLERS

(their capitals). "What's more, the contestants fight in POOLS FILLED WITH MUD OR OIL. On top of that, you will enjoy NON-STOP STRIP-TEASE, which may also he performed at your table at your individual request." This Warsaw convention sounds even tackier than the one governing air transport.

"You ask in your column what to do with a stopover of a few hours at LAX," e-mails Alexander Kleanthous. "I had that problem last year. I was flying Auckland-Los Angeles-Heathrow with Qantas/BA. I don't sleep on planes, so I arrived after the long Auckland/LAX leg tired, with the prospect of a five-hour stopover and then the long LAX/LHR lcg.

"I found that I had to clear US Immigration and customs (queues, of course, for hotb) then put my suitcase (already tagged through to LHR) back on a conveyor belt (another queue, of course). I exited to the arrivals area and made straight for the board on the wall showing airport hotels. "I saw a card for the Wyndham Hotel, which looked comfortable and said it was closest to the airport (it was formerly a Marriou. I think, to give an idea of its standard). I called on the eourtesy phone and they confirmed they could do a day room (it was around noon) for $60, less than £41l. I walked out of the door, and the shuttle bus was there immediately. Ten minutes latvery comfortable room. I showered and went straight to sleep in an enormous bed assenger." The phrase cance—for three hours. I woke up watched some American football on the TV, ordered a burger and fries from room service (when in Rome ...) and had another shower before dressing in fresb clothes (packed in my carry-on lnggage which I had with me).

hours

"As Qantas and BA codeshare, I already had my boarding pass for the LAX-LHR flight, so I didn't need to check in again, just go straight to the gate in time for boarding.

This was a wonderfully stress-free (after getting through Customs!) way of spending my stopover and set me up for the second flight. The cost was reasonable,

WEATHER

The British Isles, noon today

16.00 to

15.53 to

...15.51 to 8.03

7.52

...15.54 to

16.03

General summary and outlook: Northern and western Scotland will have a duil and damp day, with occasional rain and extensive hill log. Eastern Scotland will also be cloudy but there will be some drier interludes. Northern Ireland will be mostly dull, with light rain and drizzle, chiefly in the west. England and Wates will be generally overcast and grey with a little rain, mainly in west Wales and eastern England this morning. It will be mild but rather breezy, with strong south-westerly winds in many northern and western areas.

Tomorrow will be mild but breezy, with rain in the north west clearing to brighter spells and showers. Elsewhere it will be cloudy, with rain in western areas slowly edging east, although the south-east should stay dry. On Monday, many places will be dry, although there will be some drizzle on western coasts. Tuesday witl bring more rain to the north and west, with wat and windy weather reaching all areas on Wednesday. The unsettled but mild spell is

Aberdeen c Anglocsy 1 Ayr c Boltast tg Alrahagham c Blockpeol Bsurpomocths	6 5 2 -1 5 2	49 41 36 36	Cerditi Csrliclo Cork Dovsr Bublia Edlobsrgb Exctor	c m t sh c c t	5145245	41 34 89 41 66 39 43	ensow; s.sumy; h, band ls versess c lpewich ; leles ef Selliye Joresy sh Liverpuet se Loodso t Meschester i	646626		Oxford Plymooth Scarborcagh Sbrowsbory Soothamptor Sawthsad St Androws	C	4853668
Srighteo c Sristel t Lighting-up	5 4	41 as	guernsch greusch	sh 		37 49	Sowerstlo e Nottisghsm 1	4	39 39	Stormoncy York Air quality	e	4

.15.44 15.52 8.02 8.34 7.53

High tides

Stoz Good Good Good Good Good Good Good 5:32 6.6 18:10 6.6 Liverpool 2.59 8.4 15:26 8.6 11:11 11.8 23:38 11.4 d) 10.21 7.8 22.33 8.0 Huf (Albert Do 4:24 3.3 16:39 3.5 3:46 3.7 15:58 3.9

AA Roadwatch

London, A1 between Wattord Way, Mill Hill Circus and Fiveways Corner Car-Hill Circus and Fiveways Corner Cat-rageway reduced to two lanes for long ferm readworks until $1st May 1998. Greater London. M1, between 36-35. Wat-lord area. Readworks and a contration, with oif peak, and overnight lane and car-rageway closures. A 50mph speed limit is also in place. Until 22nd December West Yorkshire. M1, J43-342 Stourion to Juthburse. M45/31. Lotthouse (M62). A contraflow and a 50mph speed limit are in place until 13th

July 1998
Somerset. M5 JCC-23 Highbindge to Bridgewater Major readworks due to bridge repairs. A 3 mile contration is in place (Urtal March 31 1998)
West Mickards, M5 J8 (M5 Imil.) 3 Janes north and ? lanes south closed, 50 molt speed letil in torce with additional lane closures. Until Dec 19th; Bucks, M40 J11-3, Roadworks and contraflow (Until 1999) ASO3 East Outber-tonshire. Glasgow Road. Kitsyth Road-

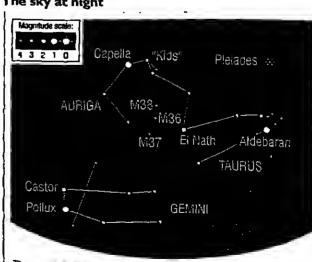

Roadworks until 19th January 1998. South Lacarkshire M74 between J10-11. Lesmatogow and Happendon. Contration sed restrictions in place (Unit Dec 5(h) London A3211 Blackfriars Underpass. Contrallow Until April 15th 1938

Out and object with AA Roog-watch rati 0336 401 for the brest local and restonal ratio news Source. The Automo-bile Accordation. Calls charged at 199 per unin introop rates 49p per unin tail other turness into VAI.

Sun and moon

The sky at night

The constellation Auriga can currently be seen at any time during the night. It is next to Taurus and Gemini, and highlighted by the brilliant yellow star Capella.

If not quite so well known as its zodiacal neighbours, Taurus and Gemini. Auriga the Charioteer is nonetheless one of the great constellations of the winter sky and is currently well up all night long. Sunny vellow Capella, its prime star, ranks seventh hrightest in the sky. Since Capella roughly translates to the little nanny goat', an adjacent trio a dimmer stars are familiarly dubbed the kids'. Auriga is obliged to share its second brightest star with Taurus, El Nath, which marks one of the Bull's horns, is designated Beta Tauri as well as Gamma Aurigae. Auriga's patch is one of those sky areas definitely worth a sweep with binoculars. Three well known star clusters lurk just below the limit of naked-eye visibility. The 18th-century comel hunter. Charles Messier, listed them 36, 37 and 38 in his celebrated catalogue of fuzzy objects. M38 is somewhat dimmer and more diffuse than the other two.

3/EUROPF

OMEN WRESTLERS eir capitals). er capitally.
What's more, the captains fight in POOLS LED WITH MUDOS L. Oz tem of that moved on NON-STOP STRIP ASE, which may also be formed at your table a H individual request 15. Warraw contention inds of on tacking than the E REM OLD IN SOUR (LARShoul an use in your column M poure at LAX count conder Klambon d that problem has less eas flying Aucklanding igules-Heathron with intus B.A. I don't sleep on mes, so I ormed after the in Anakland Living a-hour stopes of and the Hang LAN LHR leg. of found that I had to ar US Immigration and Ments (despect of the both then put my saito tailroads tagged through LHR. bad on Jones belt consider gave of cersus for weathering arms.

a beaution than all state pairs. - the There is suited that the yndnar: Hirel abd Her was a market and said A transfer and or the abyon was formed a Marion triche : 1 product romandes 💸 trade -) toled in the cattered with the and they marma tray and dis is the latter of the control served on the Dynamic and a day becomes the . ಹಿ.ಆರ್. ನಿಂತರಾದದಿಂ≇ and a distribution or against determinent and American where we we TV with a jagger and register them to contact that its Rettle of and the second of warms ng dipakan nganing bahasan de Aria (e.g. e.g. Million Same a contract of 11 U. F. G. 122 7. The Law Control LAN

The second secon أحزر ا and the second second and the same

RED CHANNEL

A compendium of hazards facing today's traveller. This week: safety rips for visitors to Budapest - as supplied by the Gellert Hotel to its guests.

 Never leave your handbag unattended in the hreakfast room or hotel restaurant, even when you go over to the ● Do not take all your money with you when you go for a walk. Carry your purse or wallet as close to your body as possible - preferably in an inside pocket that closes with a ● Always keep your handbag or shoulder bag closed and hold it towards the front of your body so that it cannot easily be snatched away from you. Remember: even a locked boot and a secured parking place are not a guarantee that no one will break into

If you drink alcohol you are not allowed to drive.

For foreign office advice on Hungary and many other countries, contact the Travel Advice Unit on 0171-238 4503 or 4504, or fax 0171-238 4545; on the Internet, at http://www.fco.gov.uk/ or on BBC-2 Ceefux from page 470

Spain: get the picture?

An Andalucian holiday with a focus sounded a perfect combination. Rupert Sagar-Musgrave set out to capture it all on camera.

The idea of a working holiday appealed, Nothing su strenuous as a kibbutz, or helping replant trees in the rainforest. That would be too much like hard work. No, wire next extend my own area of work with a holiday? As a semi-professional photographer, a workshop at Los Pinos, the only English-run photography centre in Spain. scemed to combine the perfect ingredients. If you are one of those people who annoys everybody else by spending hours trying to get the perfect shot, then this is the holiday for you - and nobody will complain. I dusted off my lenses, invested in a mountain of tilm, and arrived in Andalucia for a holiday that I could finally justify,

By the time I surfaced on the first morning, the group was already getting acquainted over coffee in the library. This was not to be a holiday for the leisurely. Having disturbed my roommate by stumbling in a) 3am, due to a "delay of inbound aircraft" at Gatwick. I now headed for the only familiar face among the group and apologised. Norman had flown in from Brussels and this was his second holiday here, which seemed to be just the sort of active recommendation that a newcomer needed,

Los Pinos, as the name suggests, is peacefully situated among pine trees on the edge of the Sierra Almijara, close to Competa. As I wandered through the garden towards the library, the view stretched away down the Torrox valley to the Mediterranean, the Costas, and beyond to the Rif Mountains of North Africa. The warm breeze was seented with pine and wild rosemary.

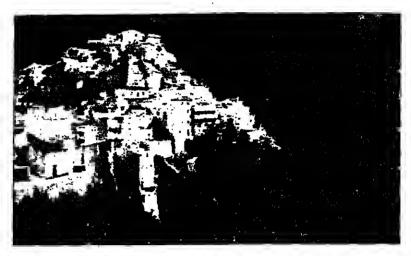

Each course caters for groups of up to 15 people, though ours was a very manageable seven. We spanned all ages and professions, from a therapist in her late twenties, to a middle-aged accountant, and a retired expatriate. The only common factor was a keen personal amhition to improve our photographic capabilities.

The guest host for our workshop, the landscape photographer Michael Busselle, gave an introductory talk, accompanied by his own slides to illustrate the theme for the week: "Colour landscape with a travel hias". The essence of the hotiday was to spend the next six days exploring the enormous diversity of locations in the surrounding region, known enigmatically as Axarquia. Our subject matter was someupon. It was an experience of discovery, for nowhere looks the same twice, under changing skies and mercurial light.

Preconceptions can lead to disappointment but Andalucia matched up to the idyllic images conjured in my mind. Pueblos blancos, barren mountains, pots of geraniums, a goat herder tending his flock, a single olive tree surrounded by a carpet of purple flowers. "You want to put a warm-up filter on this one," Michael enthused, weaving through the obstacle course of tripods as the group congregated around yet another olive tree. Why is it that olive trees are so fascinating? Perhaps times planned, sometimes just chanced again for their cameras, plastic plates and cups being tossed aside, before returning for a slice of watermelon.

The days were long. Sometimes we would stop to drop off films for processing at a shopping development down by the sea on our return to Los Pinos. The heavy traffic on the coastal road made a stark contrast to the now familiar deserted mountain tracks. But with cameras stowed and bodies weary, the only thing on our minds by late evening was supper. A small decanter of the local Competa wine was always kept topped up in my log-cabin room, which served as a welcome aperitif before we reconvened for a feast of tra-

In the frame: the landscape of Andalucia is as varied as it is photogenic Photographs: Rupert, Sagar-Musgrave

it is the expression of age in their trunks, or their distorted forms. Even split in two with gaping hollows, they continue to grow and bear fruit.

Each day we would clamber into a fourwheel drive and set off for a chosen spot invariably accompanied by the two dogs at Los Pinos. On arrival we would all spread out, and settle down to our own personal objectives, with Michael being on hand for practical advice on technique, equipment

Sometimes we would be so immersed in obtaining that perfect shot that lunch was forgotten until about three o'clock. Then suddenly a chorizo pasta salad with juicy tomatoes, roasted peppers, fresh olives and chunks of bread, miraculously appeared spread out on a tablecloth in the shade of a uniquitous olive tree. Although refuelling was a high priority for everyone, the sight of a shepherd bringing his flock of goats down to the stream for a drink sent everyone scrambling or tellfax 0034 52 11 5355 (Spain).

ditional dishes superbly prepared each night by Sophia. This proved quite literally to be the driving force for us all.

The centre provides a relaxed environment for a photographic holiday. When it came to an open critique of the group's work on the final day, the results were impressive to say the least. Feedback is an integral part of the learning experience and sharing ideas with the other participants was equally beneficial.

Of course the degree of attendance and thus personal progress during the week is up to you. Just don't expect to improve your shots with a siesta by the pool.

Los Pinos runs workshops from February to November, hosted by some of the best known names in British photography. Prices start at £450 for one week. The nearest airport is Malaga, transfer time approximately one hour For further details tel/fax 01386 841715 (UK).

PICTURE THIS

A combination of clear air, ahundance of wilderness and the sun low on the horizon make midsummer in Newfoundland ideal for nature photography. Photo Travellers (01483 425448) includes the island in its programme of escorted photography courses. The two-week course takes place in July and costs £1,995. Other subjects for 1998 include Costa Rica, South India, US National Parks and walking in

The surreal scenery and wild coastline of County Clare is the setting for a series of art holidays run by the Burren College of Art (00 353 65 77200). The college is spectacularly located on the edge of the Burren just south of Ballyvaughan, on the west coast of Ireland, and offers courses on painting, drawing and photography. A botanical painting week in May costs £150, while a Beginning Photography weckend course is £75. Accommodation is extra, costing around £30 per day for full Dillington House (01460 52427), near Chard in Somerset, is a council-run residential college offering weekend courses from October to June on all sorts of arts and crafts, including calligraphy and Japanese silk painting.

The ultimate contemporary guide for an artistic holiday in Spain must be the writer Michael Jacobs. He will be escorting a tour of Toledo and Madrid in April and October next year, on behalf of Martin Randall Travel (Itt81-742 3355). The five-night holiday costs £845, with a single supplement of £70. The group size is limited to a maximum of 22. The same company arranges private visits to the Sistinc Chapel (a privilege enjoyed yesterday by the Cuban President's hrother, Raul Castro), as part of some of its tours

The new Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao is included on a Spanish Itinerary from ACE Study Tours (D1223 835055) in May; a week costs £875. The company is also running a summer tour of Finnish art and architecture. Besides Helsinki, the trip includes visits to the timber town of Porvoo and the city of Turku.

In south-western France, a British-run visual studies centre called Atelier de la Rose (00 33 5 65 24 66 36) offers summer schooling in drawing, painting and photography. Non-participating partners can stay free of charge.

The throughly updated 1998 Painting Holiday Directory is published on Monday, price £4.75 including postage. It is available from some bookshops or direct from PHD Publications, PO Box 1, Ponteland, Newcastle NE19 2EB (01830 540215).

GREEN CHANNEL

If you cat organic food in the air (as you do on Swissair flights) are you being environmentally-friendly? Well ... even accounting for the environmental benefits of organic farming, air travel is increasing at such a dramatic rate that unfortunately no amount of organic sandwiches will stop the damage aeroplanes are causing in terms of elimate change.

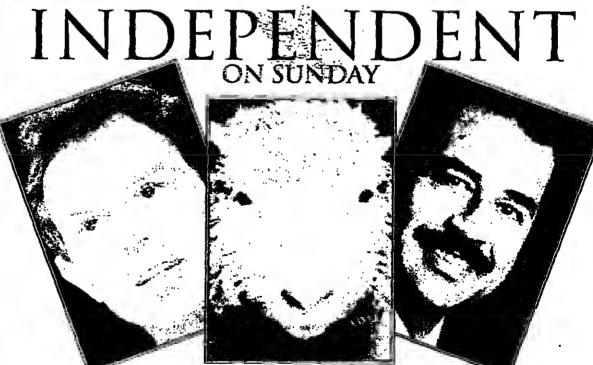

As more and more of us get a taste for the delights of travel (there are likely to be 1.6 hillion of us exploring the globe by 2020), carbon dioxide and nitrogen oxide emissions from aircraft are escalating. Friends of the Earth point out that despite technological improvements making aircraft "greener", by 2015 planes are expected to double their current contribution of 3-5 per cent of the global greenhouse effect and could cause half of the annual destruction of the ozone layer.

But, as anyone who has compared rail and air travel prices to Ireland, Paris or Brussels will know, air is often cheaper. All but the richest environmentalists are consequently deterred from choosing rail over plane on short-haul journeys. And when it is cheaper to fly to the Caribbean than it is to fly to Europe it is no surprise that long-haul travel is booming.

The answer? It may not be a popular one, but Friends of the Earth suggests putting tax on air tickets, aircraft fuel and transport of goods by air - if car drivers pay tax on petrol, why should air travel be exempt?

As world leaders dehate climate change this week and next at the UN Convention on Climate Change in Kyoto, the role of air travel should undoubtedly he considered. Friends of the Earth will be demonstrating at airports world-wide this weekend, campaigning for "The Right Price for Air Travel". For the traveller, it's a hitter pill to swallow, as it will increase the price of our holidays, but it's likely to do more to save the world than eating organic food on aircraft will ever do.

What do Tony, Dolly, and Saddam have in common? Find out tomorrow

PLUS:

The Tatton Terrors - Neil and Christine Hamilton invite you into their lovely home

Sun Hill Superstars – the unusal suspects who have done their time in The Bill

Dressing up for Christmas — the essential guide to office party chic

Decriminalise cannabis - the latest news in the campaign that everyone is talking about

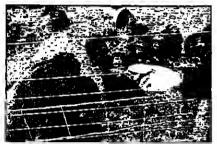

Among the chattering classes

Hey, hey with the monkeys - or at inns looked more robust as they waved their least the lemurs, capuchins and orang-utans. David Wilson visits Monkey World, in Dorset

The first thing you see in the 40-acre woodland park of Monkey World is a colony of lemurs. On the day we were there they were sprawling on their backs in the sunshine and displaying their long, bushy tails. They looked as if they'd just had a wild party.

When feeding-time comes they start to get frisky. During nur visit, a male called Chewy dived out of his cage, dangled by one arm from an nak tree, then dropped to the ground and snuggled up in a member of

A keeper squirted water to shoo him away. Chewy then started dancing with a female lemur, mirroring her movements, They grappled delicately, exchanging little kicks and cufts. Meanwhile his tribe launched into a chorus like nothing we'd ever heard: a croaking roar that ennjured up visinns of the jungles of Madagascar. Thrilling.

The sanctuary's other species are less anarchic, more under control; but they by no means resemble prisoners. They seem at ease in their enclosures. Very few show any signs of stress; no pacing, twitching or despondent brooding. The reason is that, as the keepers emphasise, every primate gets us all. treated as an individual.

Many have been rescued from frightening predicaments. The macaques came from a lahoratury where they were used in contraceptives testing. One of them, Shaky. tends to tremble as a result. Her compan-hig, pink behinds to attract the male - who yawned, displaying his fangs.

The keeper interpreted: "He's telling me 'Stay away from my harem ...' and quite honestly he's welcome to them."

The slender capuchins are more approachable. One was rescued in Rolf Harris's Animal Hospital. Amazingly, in America they themselves arc sometimes employed as nurses for paralysed people, performing such tasks as feeding and lifting the telephone.

Above all, what we sensed in the strawsweetened air nf Mnnkey World was the tenderness of primates. The two orangutans, Ami and Banji, sat locked in a seemingly interminable embrace that made us a touch misty-eyed.

By contrast the male chimps displayed vignur and machismn. They somersaulted and beat their chests. One of their enclosures, a pyramid structure, was built by the Challenge Anneka team in just three days.

As well as the living attractions the centre also features a climbing-net where children keenly mimic the monkeys. Anynne needing still more stimulatinn may try the mini-mntorbikes, slides, swings and assault course.

The visitors

Suzy Bell from Kensington, south west London, took her children, Lucy, seven, and William, five.

Suzy: In be hinnest, in begin with I wasn't Lucy: I watch into of nature programmes. particularly interested in the trip. I had the impression that mankeys are grim and ugly creatures. But I really gnt intn it. We'd planned to spend two hours. In the end we were there for four. It's just the right size.

(didn't realise mankeys had such human faces, and yet all that fur. It's ecrie. I found the nrang-utans incredibly graceful, as if they were moving in slow motion. They're also very gentle - an example to

I thought all the staff were charming, and nf course Chewy was adorable. I wanted tn take him home. I wonder why there's so much stress on the chimps, in the advertising and on the T-shirts and so on. There's more to the place than that.

Planet of the apes: as the keepers emphasise, every primate gets treated as an individual

Photographs: John Lawrence

Normally they have mnnkeys in them. I liked the mankey [a capuchin] that can look after you when you're older. Granny should have one.

I also liked Chewy, He looked like he was wearing a cardigan. His tungue was very soft. Gibbons are pretty - all fluffy and cuddly - or was it orang-utans?

We bought a toy monkey to go with my penguin, Pip. I'd like a real monkey. Mummy says we can't.

William: The best hit was Chewy. I wanted to cuddle Chewy. I have seen lions. Monkeys are nicer than linns. Monkey World is more fun than a museum. Chimpanzees are scary, though.

Getting there: Monkey World is in Longthorns, near Wareham, Dorset (freephone (ISO(1450000)). By car it is a few miles north of the A352 between Wool and Wareham: by train it is a £3 taxi each way (0800 000 666) from Wool station.

Opening times: daily. Illam-5pm. Admission: £4.75 adults. £2.75 children. £3.25 senior citizens and disabled, £13 family ticket (two adults and two children). Support: you can adopt a primate and receive its photograph, an adoption certilicate, The Ape Resent Chronich, and a free one-year season ticket to Monkey World. For information on the campaign to save chimps from BSE experiments, contact Monkey World.

PITSTOP

A few miles away from Munkey World you can stop fur refreshments and a view of the brooding ruins of Corfe Castle. The National Trust Tea Room (01929 481332) at The Square. Corfe Castle, serves coffee and various cakes from 11am, then at lunch time come home-made soup (always vegetarian), sandwiches, quiche and salad, and filled jacket potatoes, as well as a few hot specials. Choices for afternoon tea include the Dorset cream tea with local home-made jam, and the Purheck tea comprising two slices of locally baked bread, jam and a choice of cakes. There's a roast on Sundays, and they're happy to cater for young children, with two high-chairs, children's cups, bottles, small portions and a short children's menu.

From the Egon Roney guide And Children Come Too ..., Bookman, £9.99

TEL: 0171 293 2222

TRAVEL: OVERSEAS

FAX: 0171 293 2505

A wonderful way to plan your braval in...

CUBA

COSTA INCA, CURA, DOMENIC GENTEMALA, GUYANA.

PHONE: 0117 987 2626

CUBA!

ERISTMAS AND NEW TEAR AVAILABLE

THE CHEA EXPERIENCE

WHY PAY FOR TRAVEL INSURANCE WHEN YOU CAN GET IT FREE AT LUNN POLY?

Overseas Travel

Free travel insurance with any brochured oversea holiday costing £299° or more per person. Just ask at any Lunn Poly Holiday Shop.

> Lunn Poly A better way to getaway

Applies to brochured oversees holidays with a duration of up to 17 days only "2399 or more per person on long heul holidays. Ofter cannot be combined whan y other promotional offer or discount, applies to new booldnos only and is

DARLY USA FLIGHT DEPT 25 DEC - 31 MAR N. YORK/BOSTON 227 227 ATLANTA HOUSTON/DALLAS 277 L VEGAS/PHOENIX 289 ANGELES SAN FRANCISCO

Holiday Parks Holland Germany Quality holiday parks in follend and the Black Fores Phone 01502 502 605 HOSEASONS

JORDON, EGYPT, ISRAEL Tallor-made litheraries. Call Destination Red Sea on 0181 440 9900 ABTA V0122 ATOL 3851.

Spain

SPAIN

illas and apartment with pools in rura Spato & Portuga

ANDALUCIA. Three romanitic cot-tages in olive 8 lemon grove south from Granada. Paecatul. Pool Tel: 01564 782 321 C/BLANCA MORAIRA. Villes up to 8, s/pool, beach, 0700 781112. VINTAGE SPAIN: Country houses

Freephone 0500 49 77 88 INTA Astrolized Acting as agents for ATOL hold

Take Off

FLIGHTSEATS 0990 239904

WORLDWIDE AIRFARES GLOBAL HOLDAYS DIRECT EXPLEMENT 01244 882400

CHEAPEST FLIGHTS

Portugal

LOW COST FLIGHTS USA CANADA AUSTRALIA NEW ZEALAND SOUTH AMERICA CARIBBEAN FAR EAST

MIDDLE EAST AFRICA THRIFTWAY TRAVEL TRAVEL
0301X 0171 - 490 1490

The travel section of The Independent has the most discriminating, sophisticated and knowledgeable readers of any newspaper.

ETLINE SOUTH AFRICAN CAPE TOWN WINELANDS GARDEN ROUTE NATAL TRANSVAAL ZIMBABWE A unique selection of Classic 0171 360 1111

Hotels, Game Reserves and Charming Homes & Garden Paydrive with direct flights to Durban Cape Town, Johannesburg, Harare South African Affair ATOL 233 5/7 Humboit Road, London Wei 80H 0171-381 5222 0171 436 0448

Balearies 0171-713-7770 MATINTAGE SPAIN: Millioncari Matintaga taminouses with pool in unspolit dreas, near coast 01954 261 431. AITO ATOL 2787 Portugal

Canaries PORTUGUESE Affair ALL TCANABIES Quality villas along the agnificent crastine, and a

0181 539 3747 mbolt Road, London Wi SCH WALK FROM YOUR DOOR In spectacular scenery, simple Casita in unspoilt La Gomera, sip 2/4 £1,35pw, 01788 822783 after 7pm 0171-385 4775

> LATIN

AMERICA

0181 747 83 TS

0181 747 3108

0161 832 1441

ARAYSE ANTARCTICA — CRUISS ANTARCTICA —

Greece

South America NEW ENGLAND VACATIONS - Dis-trictive irms & ferrilly horness, non-stop flights to Boston, brochure Line: 01727 852211. Fully bonded, ABTA VS164 AITO ATOL 2978. CHILL & BELIZE & BOLIVIA & PERU $ JOURNEY

Portugal VINTAGE PORTUGAL: Cottages with pools in unspolit North, Minho and Douro, near coast. 01954 261431 AITO ATOL 2787 ABTA

Far East South Africa CAPE TOWN, tuxury ville_sleeps 2/10, fully equipped,five mins from beach,£750 pm.Tel: 01225

If you wish to advertise in this section please call the Travel Team on0171 293 2222

WHY PAY MORE FOR YOUR WINTER '97/8 OVERSEAS HOLIDAY?

AT LEAST 8% OFF AT LUNN POLY

Winter Sun

Offer applies to a huge range of brochured holidays and croises. Just take out our Holidaycare insurance when you book'. CHECK LUNN POLY PRICES BEFORE YOU BOOK

Lunn Poly A better way to getaway

Over the last 12 months, 439,000 Independent and Independent on Sunday readers have taken a holiday in the British Isles.

Source: TGI 1997

For a unique range of real holidays that are fully-bonded, flexible and definitely original book AITO!

For a FREE copy of the AITO Directory listing all member companies, please telephone 0181 607 9080

Open 7 days Tel 0181 891 2222

Stunning Cuba!

Tailor made packages, city breaks, tours and flight only to Cuba 2429

INTERCHANGE Telephone: 0181 681 3612

CUBA: Hevanstour, The New LIK Experts, Tailor-made itmeranes, Beach Holidsys, Flights, Christ-mas, and New Year Availability from London and Marcheeter, For unbissed & expert advice, call Havanstour, A worldwide group of Cuba specialists. 01707 648-655. Huvanstour UK Lid. ATOL 4636

SPECIAL PLACES or tailor-made packages to Cuba, Costa Rica, and North Cyprus. New destinations for 1998 Sri Lahka, Tallinn, and Lebanon. Cuben Cigar Tours, Spring 1998 Tel: 01892 661157 ABTA V5412 ATOL 884

City Breaks

tours with Bruges 4 Star from £139

Brussels 5 Start from £149 0181 289 8889 euro tours TTA T7630

European 1997 Brochure out NOW! Please call LUPUS TRAVEL LTD. 0171 306 3000 01892 553500

AWAY BREAKS
PARIS FR 2119 PP
EUROSTAR 3 DAYS BAS CITY CENTRE
AMSTERDAM FR 2129 PP
10MS BRE 2 STAR FOTEL CITY CENTRE
2 NTS PER PER PRESENCE NTS B&B BRUSSESON 0114 266 8806

hours in

5/CITY BREAK

Lants tight in POOLS to the observation and property of

ED WITH MIDOUS On top of that tours SE, which may akeb inch idual requed Water and contempor surrey (and do the arise

ef between Triang . Married Andred to the or at NO CONTRACTOR (CRE) media en Tin mba, e very contract and the first التهديد المقومة والرائي شائدة والعلامة new grown arms and a first agent for early to be Kirrle Burn Barrier Committee Committee and the second of the plant ्या स्टब्स्ट अल्डिस स्टब्स्स इस्ट्रेस्ट्र अल्डिस इंटर्स स्टिस्ट्र Bayerin - Library to the law 大野職 ディル、ルミルス 75年

> the best hotels for around the same price. Be prepared for your flight to stop at Brussels, taking the journey time up to 12 hours. Taxis at the airport cost around £10 into town.

Beam down

Check in After a trip like that, you don't want to be scouring the darksomewhere to stay. So try to book in advance. The budget option is the perennially cheerful and grotty Caribbean (00.53 7 62 2071) on the Prado. The smarter and more atmospher-

For a short cut to the capital, Michael Williams

Because the finest Spanish colohrightly this December than Fidel Castro's last Christmas ...

Cubana (0171-734 1165) flies

three times a week from Gatwick, using a DC-10. A fortmight from today it begins flying weekly from Manchester.

Fares are high: around £500, including taxes. But you could also find a package tour, staying in soul of the Cuban offers a guide.

Why go now?

Top of the range is the new Hotel Santa Isabel, just opened in a converted palace on the lavishly restored Plaza de Armas nial city on earth is shining more for a decade. Because you no Get your bearings longer have to fly via Gander or East Berlin to get there. And, who knows, after four decades of revolution, it really could be

ana. But to see how it fits into the Revolutionary scheme of the whole, take a trip out to the western district of Miramar (where, pre-1959, the Mafia community hung out) and see the Model of the City, housed in a hangar on Calle 28 between Avenidas 1 and 3. An amazingly detailed wooden model gives an excellent overview of the entire capital, with each century colour coded to give an idea of the development of Havana.

Take a ride

Almost anything that moves in Havana can be construed as a taxi. But from an aesthetic point of view, a pre-1959 American saloon (of which there are hundreds prowling the streets) ened streets of Old Havana for is the only way to travel. You can pick up a dowager of Detroit around Parque Central or near the railway station. Fix your price with the driver first. Literary interlude ie Plaza (00-53-7-62-2066) or used to Cuban queues) for im-tral Havana. You can get a slab Inglaterra (00 53 7 62 7072) un migration, or changing money, of pizza in brown paper and an Parque Central, the main or simply waiting to be served ice-cream for eight pescs (30p).

(00 537 33 8201). It costs around £90 for two. You could easily spend a week, let alone a weekend, in the conspiratorial confines of Old Hav-

just be happening in 1997. Take a hike

Lunch on the run

While you are queueing (get

Greene's Our Man In Havana. This comic tale of the vacuum cleaner salesman turned spy is the perfect evocation of the Havana mood - the steamy heat, the sleaze and that indefinable sense of political danger. It was written in 1958, hut half-close your eyes and it could

48 hours in the heart of Havana

From the main square, go east along Calle O'Reilly through deliciously complex layers of colonialism, Communism and community. Promenade around the Plaza de Armas, nod in the direction of Ernest Hemingway at the Ambos Mundos hotel (and toll the bell that stands onposite), then return along Calle Ohispo. When you reach the main square at the end, loop hack along Calle Obrapia. You can keep this up all morning, turning up all manner of curiositics - and heing hissed at once per block by someone offering cheap cigars - or a girl.

Havana is not a great city for people who lunch. Best bet is to stoke up on the lavish hotel hreakfasts, though this year for the first time a fast(ish) food hidustry has emerged from the doorways of Old Havana and its seedier western neighbour, Cen-

Cultural afternoon

Fidel will be pleased if you call in at the Presidential Palace. Nut his heavily guarded HQ. of course, but the residence of the dictator he deposed - Fulgencio Batista. This has become the Museum of the Revolution, repository of the heritage of Che Guevara and his compañeres. You can see not only such revolutionary essentials as Che's socks and his mistress's handhag, but also, in the gardens outside, the mangled wreckage of an American U2 spy plane shot down during the Cuban missile

Window shopping

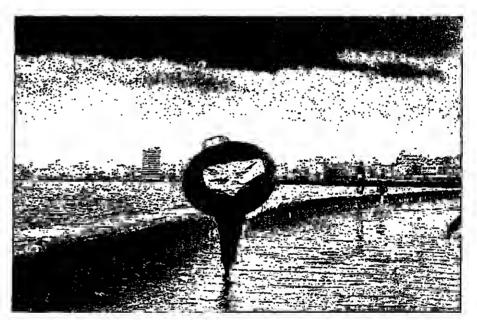

Cuba is the perfect destination for shopaholics to go cold turkey. You are free to browse. presupposing you can find a shop with (a) windows that aren't concealed by grubby net curtains, or (b) anything you might want in it. You will be offered countless eigars, hut to avoid duds wait until you get to the airport on the way home. A good bet for a souvenir is to head for the quirky second-hand hook market on Plaza de Armas, or some old postcards of historic Havana from the Office of the City Historian at the bottom of Calle Obispo.

An aperitif

"My daiquiri in El Floridita." Hemingway was fond of saving. But in the Fifties, it wasn't the priciest bar in Havana: now it charges more for a cocktail than the average Cuban carns in a week. Instead, head for the raucous La Lluvia del Oro, halfway down Obispo. You won't miss it. because of the blast of salsa thrumming through the door.

Demure dinner

Most restaurants serve dreary. standardised fare. Not surprising, since they are generally run by the state. But since 1994, entrepreneurs have been able to open private restaurants, palodures, provided they don't seat more than 12 people. A good place to go is La Moneda, serving delicious fish with salad. beans and rice with fried hunana for less than £5 a head. It is at San Ignacio 77, near the cathedraf, but get there early - there are only three tables.

A night at the opera Sunday: gn to church Chris Smith may think he's on The Pope arrives next month, to a good thing by reinventing. and religion is the big thing in Covent Garden as "the people's brave the bustle and crowds of opera". But Fidel got there first: £7.50 will huy you the best Cathedral Square. Head for seat in the house at the Gran the white Iglesia del Santo Teotro de la Hahana, which Angel Custodio, on Monserrate, claims to be the oldest working near the waterfront. It nestles theatre in the world. The splenamong some of the loveliest did 2000-seat barroque building streets of the old town - just the was opened in 1837. You won't place to lift the spirits. even have to queue for a seat. Respectful of culture-loving Bracing brunch

The sun will be hot now, and it's time to cool off by the fountain in the Moorish courtyard of the newly restored Hotel Sevilla. Take tapas here, with perhaps town. But you don't need to a mojito (ice, lime, mint and rum) to revive the spirits. (Mind the gents, though; it was here that Greene's hero, Wormald,

> The old man and the sea Get a 1954 Chevvy to drive you to Hemingway's old villa at the Finca Vigfa, 10 miles south of the city - Marie Celeste-like, the Cuha in 1958, shortly before his suicide. With hunting trophies on the wall, whisky bottles at the ready and the table set for dinner, you expect the hig man to walk in at any minute. was recruited into MI6).

The icing on the cake
Take the lift to the top of the newly opened (but not newly built) José Marti memorial on Revolution Square. Che Guevara smiles up at you while you survey the whole heroic mess gleaming-white house is just as that is the Caribhean's largest and greatest city. he left it when he departed from

Steamy heat, sleaze and that indefinable sense of today could have come straight off the pages of Photographs: Tom Pilston

Graham Greene's

famous novel

HIGH ROAD

tourists. Cuhans will push you to the front of the line.

For the past 32 years, the way to travel from Birmingham New Street to London Euston has been by InterCity train. The journey time has increased considerably in that period, from 83 minutes in the Seventies to 100 or more now that Virgin Trains runs the service, rather than British Rail. The fare for a day return, departing at around 9am, is £59,50 return; this falls to £24 after 9.30am. Details of this, and most other trains - hul not the one below - from 0345 484950.

LOW ROAD

Silverlink County sounds like a brand of tennis racket, but is, in fact, the new name for the privatised North London Railways, It, too, runs trains between Birmingham and Euston, though they travel a slower, longer route via Northampion. - taking just over two hours.

A day-trip starting any time after 8.30am costs £17.90. and if four people travel together they pay a total of £28 just $7 each. Before 8.30am, though, the fare is a whacking £59,50. Find our more on 01923 207258.

Ireland Live a different life HOLIDAYS '98

Ireland's tourist boards, north and south, have got together to create some unforgettable breaks and holidays this year. From B&B's to castles, from long weekends to weeks on end, you'll find Ireland's world famous welcome is now warmer than ever. For our full colour brochures, call us free on 0800 55 55 98.

JEN WRESTLERS capitals). Abut's more the on ormed at your laber ids even tackler than the Grat GAU (C. att Halabolt at ask in your whom Rander Kleanthow, 9 i that problem had you ous fixing Aucklandle geles-Heathraw w mar li 4. [] m [despu ince, en l'arrived after de ig Auckland Lay b ed. with the prosper of e-hour stop, wer and the shough AN LHRing "I found that I had a eer US Immyrehon an referre (queues, of course a porty than bat all deese (place a lagged through LHR week in a course a feutr gur ohn- gutte, d

Karen alamie englig no hours of the well-bear aparter to the "I yav a late for the Syndians beim mit axweed come more and ag provides an only a confidence of Samuel Contracts Children Jan de 250 feb. CONTROL OF STANDING Bity Tourist it was in the STATE OF STATE OF STATE

AND THE STATE OF THE LOCAL or produced in the first term.

The second of the second eti presidenti di si selle was a second with the two sides of Higher than the snow

It sounds scary but simple: you just float off a mountain with a canopy billowing over your head. Anna Rockall goes parapenting at Courchevel.

Skiing off a mountain seemed an unwise idea. Not, you understand, skiing down it, though that can be scary enough; skiing off it into space, hovering over the valley below. You're attached to some kind of flotation aid, obviously, but none the less suspended almost a kilometre above the vailey floor.

I had watched in envy from the slopes as multicoloured canopies had swooped gently in the hiue heavens above the snowy peaks, twirling and rising on the thermals and putting us meagre skiers to earthhound shame. Such a calmly terrifying sport had to

The scene of the action was the Col de la Loze (already 2,300 metres high), above Courchevel in the French Alps, but the sport, known as parapente, is widely available throughout the French ski resorts. Unless you have some experience, you'll want to do this in tandem - once you are up in the air, there isn't a lot anyone can do to help you if you don't know what you are doing. My guide, Serge, was a typical French ski instructor, with skin the colour of a lightly done steak, and a flirtatious streak. He harnessed me to a contraption that seemed to have far too few buckles, and then hooked himself up behind me. With his skis either side of mine, the silk canopy neatly laid out behind us and the safety checks duly done, we were ready to launch into the thin air.

50 yards, and then plummeted away into a deathdefying couloir. Despite the fact that I felt comextreme corridor of doom. No fear of that - when on down until suddenly we seemed to be airborne. above the valley floor - and rising - peering down fly unmotorised, using the wind and thermals like 4 79 08 39 60.

down the slope for, ooh, about 5ft before we met with resistance from the canopy behind us, that had fortingly secure strapped up to Serge, I prayed we immediately filled with air and stood puffed up in would take off before we ended up sliding down the a billowing wall of silk. Slowly, very slowly, we skied made it, and were floating gently away from the mountainside.

The slope we were on was gently skiable for about Serge gave the word, we let ourselves start moving. Then suddenly we weren't, and then - hurrah - we between our skis at inordinate quantities of nothing, I felt safe,

The surprising thing about parapente is your abilwas expecting to be terrified, but the fear is ity to defy gravity. It's not like parachuting, where

Skiing upwards: using the wind and therma when you parapente you defy gravity and Photograph: Steve Godfrey > a hird. The guide used strings to control the angle of the canopy, and before we knew it we were circling higher than all the surrounding mountains. The views, of course, were a hit special, though once I had begun to relax my death grip on Serge's leg I became rather more aware of the cold. It was considerably chillier than the mountainside, so fear of falling was quickly replaced by fear of losing my extremities to frosthite.

The other unexpected (and uncool) problem was airsickness. It hadn't even occurred to me that I could get airsick while risking life and limb, but the gentle, swaying motion, compounded with the odd humpiness when we hit a thermal, all added up to a worrying bout of nausea. Understandably concerned at the prospect of my throwing up all over his equipment, Serge brought us down after a meagre five minutes (the normal flight time being 10 minutes). As we descended, all worries about high-altitude vomiting faded into insignificance beside the fear of not landing in one piece. The cables of the chairlift looked threateningly in the way, and I had to close my eyes as we swooped just above them, avoiding an undignified death by millimetres (honest).

The ground started coming up rather more quickly than I expected, and before there was time to get concerned about broken ankles or whatever else might happen, we landed with an ungainly thump. I promptly fell over backwards, and struggled to my feet with the grace of a pregnant duck. But despite the fear, the airsickness and the cold, once safely down I longed to be floating dreamily above the peaks again. Skiing away down the mountain I felt drearily earthbound, once more a slave to the laws of gravity.

Anna Rockall paid FF450 (about £45) for a parapenting session at Col de la Loze, Courchevel 1850, all in the anticipation. Although we seemed miles you simply fall very slowly: you actually ascend and France, For more details call Chardon Loisirs 00 33

Skis as baggage: what a carry-on

All the big six ski charge of £12 or £13 for checking skis and snowboards on to their charter flights. Why? asks Stephen Wood.

Skiers, says Paul Carter, are not the sort of people "who judge a holiday just by its £299 brochure price". Mr Carter is head of marketing at Crystal Holidays, Britain's biggest ski operator, so he is familiar with customers who consider the cost of all the extras. And when he's asked why skiers must pay extra to have their skis carried on a charter flight, he's ready with his defence.

If you've been skiing for a few years, you will remember the time when skis were re-odd kilos. And you will have noticed, creeping into the small print of the brochures, a paragraph that normally starts "with a growing number of skiers and snowboarders taking their own equipment on holiday ..." and ends with your having to reach into your pocket. Paul Carter's argument goes like this, "Scheduled airlines will tell you that in-flight meals are free," he says. "But of course that isn't true: the cost of the meals is simply included in the cost of the ticket. There is a cost to us in carrying skis and snowboards, because they involve extra handling costs and add weight to the plane - which increases fuel consumption. And our view is this: that those who benefit from a service should pay for it, and those who don't should not."

who can (like the other passengers) take their skis and snowboards without charge. flight, it hires a plane (with a full tank of fuel) and a crew for a specific flight, and pays a fee to cover all the costs of the charter airline. Crystal doesn't pay separately for fuel or baggage handling; they are, like airline meals, included in the price of the plane. But since the hire price will reflect those increasing costs, says Paul Carter, it's reasonable that those who push them up should pay up: "So rather than spread the extra cost of carriage among all the passengers, we just charge those snowboards with them." Fair enough? Not quite. The boards and skis which passen- flat fee for the plane. no mai-

who have taken their skis and garded as luggage, and travelled On scheduled flights, Crys- gers are attempting to get into ter how much luggage there was may not carry much face value. sary, skis will be provided for the aircraft hold has increased to be loaded. the chances of this luggage having to he off-loaded from charter flights; hence the £12-But when it runs a charter £13 charge which does, in Crystal's words, "improve the reliability of carriage". But when I asked whether ski equipment often has to be off-loaded. Gary Greenwood, operations manager of Gatwick Handling. said that "it's a rare occurrence, although it does happen. particularly with smaller planes". Such as the Boeing 737? No, Mr Greenwood's examples were the BAC 1-11 and the BAe 146, planes that are too small to be used on any normal skiing charter.

And did Gatwick Handling charge a charter airline more for humping a lot of boards and skis on to a plane? No, said Mr operators claim that the bulk of Greenwood; they charged a charter-flight fuel charges, Britannia Airlines was unhelpful. Monarch, however, was quite straightforward: a spokesperson said that airline charter costs were "something that the charter companies and the tour opcrators don't usually like to discuss with other people". But her exposition of fuel charges was simple: every acroplane has a maximum payload, and a charter airline would have to be very stupid, when working out the fuel costs for a trip, not to assume that the plane would be fully loaded. So there was no likelihood that the hire charge would be increased for extraboards and skis. Could I quote the spokesperson on that? "I'd rather you didn't," she said.

ication of the carriage charge pill by promising that, if neces-

When I enquired about ing skis or a board are responsible for a higher proportion of son even guarantees that the the fuel consumption and airport hassle than those who do not, so charging them a higher ticket price is justifiable. And answay. Crystal isn't doing anything that the other big operators don't (except charging £l more for carriage, something that Paul Carter says "will have to be looked at next year").

> The deal offered is this: you pay the carriage fee, and your board or skis will arrive at your destination at the same time as you do. Or not. If they don't - if you pay for a service and it expect is to get your money until your own arrive (and Neilreplacements will be "quality unique. The small print in the Airtours brochure looks familiar, promising as it does that boards or skis for which the carriage fee of £12 per person has been paid will, if they cannot be checked on to their owner's flight, be "immediately placed on the next aircraft and trans-

But one operator's offer is ferred to your resort". So why isn't a refund mentioned? Because it isn't paid: turn up. your fee will he re- amazingly. Airtours keeps the funded. This isn't a great offer carriage fee even when your equipment fails to turn up. If is not delivered, the least you you are not the kind of person who judges a holiday just by its back; but Neilson and First £299 brochure price, you may But if Paul Carter's justif- Choice sweeten the expensive wonder whether that £12 fee is

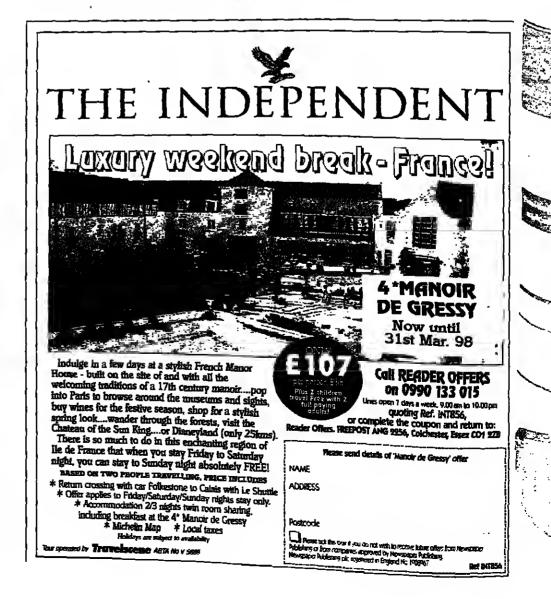

SKI TIPS

To increase the tempo of your short turns imagine that you are bouncing on a trampoline. Feel the pressure build up under your feet and then release. Make this the tempo of your turning as you start skiing.

Chris Exall

TRAVEL: OVERSEAS

Ć,

1

Take Off Take Off Take Off Take Off Because we think the world of you ... Unequivocal protection against airline insolvency - CAA approved current best buys on the world's finest airlines worldwide attention to detail TRAIL ERS 42-50 Earls Court Road £251 £385 £187 £329 £264 £379 £319 £505 £325 £495 £198 £329 Long Haul Travel 0171-938 3356 SYDNEY PERTH CAIRNS E132 E161 MEXICO CITY NEW YORK £126 £165 travel, Traillinders is your one stop 194 Kensington High Street BOSTON THE TRAVEL EXPERTS JO'BURG CHICAGO E157 E191 travel shop. £175 £226 £182 £226 EXCLUSIVE OFFER AUCKLAND £374 £679 CAPE TOWN ders offers more low cost First & Business Class: FLORIDA LOS ANGELES HARARE inations than inhis to more deal 215 Kensington High Street HONG KONG nairobi Dubai Caribbean SAN FRANCISCO £182 £261 MALAYSIA FROM £525 PER PERSON ne. Experts in airfares since SINGAPORE £185 £297 1970, we can tailor-make your very 22-24 The Priory Quaensway includes 7 nights in a luxury beach hotel. TORONTO £175 £191 £256 £256 cleage with up to 65% discount Worldwide Travel: 0121-236 1234 VANCOUVER 2291 return flights and all pre-paid taxes. 48 Com Street Offer based on twin share. Worldwide Travel: 254-284 Sauchiehali Street GLASGOW G2 3FH FOR YOUR FREE COPY OF THE TRAILFINDER MAGAZINE CALL 0171-938 3366 ANYTHIE Worldwide Travel. 0141-353 2224 AUSTRALIA 236 • USA 231 • AFRICA 231 • PACIFIC 248 • ASIA 227 58 Deanscate 0161-839 696 USA CAR HRE FROM $12 PER DAY • CALL NOW FOR OUR TAILGRIMADE WORLDWIDE AND NORTH AMERICA BROCHURES ATOL 1458 UNTA ABTA 89701 First & Business Class: 0161-839 3434 All our travel centres are open Mon-Sat 9 bum . Thurs 9 ypm . Sen 19 bpm Traiffinders does not impose charges on credit cards ... people think the world of us! USA and tudent and youth travel ...

from £159

from £241

Overseas Travel

£199

eclipse

look aroundl EurOBu$ 2 for the price of ! Prices from £59.50 per person Travel as many times as you like from £59.95 a year.

With our annual travel unlimited number of true and 8pm Monday to

£53

E87

New Year

Eastca

reference IN 255 0800 700 737

Paris.

Venice :

Las Vegas £242

Amsterdam £125

FLIGHTBOOKERS

Best Value: - Air Fares - Car Hire - Hotels - Insurance

ATOL 2562 IATA ABTA DOBOG-VERSO

OPEN 7 DAYS

* STATRAVEL *

WORLD LEADERS IN YOUNG INDEPENDENT TRAVEL

London-Bangkok-Singapore- Jakarta-Sydney-Auckland-Las Angeles-London

incl. six month Australia and six month New Zealand bus pass from £899

EUROPE 0171 361 6161, WORLDWIDE: 0171 361 6262 ((in) 854 (%66 (Manchester)

IT butter both 1961 on 11, for eight of the WT 11 for sign 8 M. London. For either conditions (2015) and 0101 on other trip the westellized on the

ICHBON MANGATTA BLABGOR, ART. MINISTER DIFORT CHARTCHE FROM INCHION STA TRAVEL

TUDGES, 48, 0101 (61-44) MODATION • CAR HIRS • INSURANCE AND OVERLAND TOURS: 0171 361 6166

£152

 1152

£230

San Francisco 1242

2359

Vancouver £258

Bangkok £379 Kusla Lunspur £379

Megco

Singapore Esta Rio de Janeiro E449 6499

Takye Sydney Auckland

£125

£239

û 01420-88724 £668 û 0171-497 O515 Canada 🛭 01420-88380 å 0171-287 5559 Far East ਹੈ 01420-80828 û 0171-287 5558 couthern Africa û 01420-80828 2 0171-287 5535 WE FIX IT ALL lity, lowest scheduled fares 12 High Street, Alton, Hants, GU34 1BN

12 High Street, Alton, Hants, GU34 1BN 52 Regent Street, London, W1R 6DX 373-375 The Strand, London WCZR OF FAX: 01420-82133 or 0171-287 4522 or 0171-497 290

FLICHTSAVERS SCHEDULED REEDMONS FROME VANCOUVER redam. 659 Bressels 659 Copenhagen . 498 Public 459

£229 Menich ____ £98 Paris_____ £59 PLEASE CALL FOR OUR Dobai £359 | Kairobi £449 XMAS SPECIALS SKI CHARTERS FROM: Genera £99 Grenoble £89 0171 385 4400 0161 832 4000 Lyon _____ £19 Salaburg __£189 WINTERSON CHARTERS FROM: faro _____£49 Lauzarote __£89 WORLD PLUS Madeira ___ £59 Mabga ____ £19 Cancus £169 Cape Torns. £395 2319 Orlando __ £169 Sydney ___ £199 E325 Moscow £379 Osaka

For all your low cost screenings 6 CHARTER Sights plus & Car Hire & Airport Hotel & Airport Parking & Insurance CALL NOW FOR DETAILS OF HUNDREDS MORE BARGAINS 0990 014101 Co-op Travel

0181 771 0218 TTA 17607 Retail Agents for ATOL Holders Special Interest Holidays

Cultural Tours • Nature Tours Wilderness Safaris Major Treks • Seatreks River Journeys • Taliship Voyages Over 170 adventures in Europe, Greece, Turkey, Egipt, Middle East, Africa, India, China, Japan, Asia, Americas, Aus/NZ, 8 days to 6 weeks. Prices from

£345 to £3450. T 01252 344161 Explore Worldwide (IN)
Aldershot, GU11, 11Q Bonded ATTO/ATOL 2595 http://www.explore.co.uk

Special Interest Holidays Puts other holidays in the shade EXODUS

The widest choice of supported biking trips both on and off road (1-3 weeks) 9 With Sead Comiton (W12 OLT, Ring OTB1 673 0859 for brochure 300 n., www.accidentransia.co.uk

Overand

$265 Sagon $129 Send $259 Fape

£399 Tokyo

dakanta 5399 Kumba Luungun 5399 Manda 5399

Skiing Holidays Africa, Asia, India, South & Central America CANADIAN 2 to 37 weeks with 16 WINTER TOURS All the best cities and resor Calgary · Vancouver Victoria · Toronto · Mos ■ Hotel trips & camping Expenses the Rockes Dragoinan ---Quebec or take 10

01728 861133

4 Jan - 31 Mar 98

0181 547 3322

0181 546 4545 | 0181 546 6000

Overseas Travel

Cruises

COPY OF ANY OF OUR

Overseas Travel

1998 BROCHURE OUT NOW!

Book early and save 20% on the price of your Gite*

Self-catering holidays for lovers of Real France Choose from over 1,200 quality holiday homes From £170 per week for up to 4 people including return ferry crossing with car.†

CALL NOW FOR A BROCHURE 0990 143 537 OR SEE YOUR TRAVEL AGENT See brochare for full details, tinchades early booking dis-

Cruises

FABULOUS CRUISES TO THE FABLED EAST Fred. Olsen cruises and fly/cruises with a world of difference Extraordinary mixes of cultures, lifestyles, ideologies and histories. Exciting days in bustling bazaars or lazy days on deck. And, wherever we venture, good food, fine wines convivial company and sparkling entertainment. BLACK WATCH

~ Classic cruising in real style ~ There are many types of cruise today. Some are like floating shopping malls, others awash with families and noisy children. Some are still and starchy, others brash and gliszy or a sea of foreign languages. Yet on Black Watch things are different, Timebonoured standards of personal courtesy and attentive service reflect our pride in 150 years of maritime tradition. To suit our almost exclusively British clientele the language aboard is English and the currency sterling.

Accommodating up to $11 guests, virtually all in elegant outside cabins, Black Watch is a modest size by today's standards. A size which encourages the warm and intimate ambience which makes for bolidays filled with new-found friends. Yet she's as impressive as she is beautiful, with sweeping lines, broad, teak decks, spacious rooms and a wealth of modern cruising amenities: from swimming pools to sparkling entertainment, from sports, health centre, leasurely pastimes and superbly appointed library to sophisticated night club.

Combine all this with our exciting itinerary, the historic romance of the ports-of-call, the diversity of cultures of the countries we visit and the exceptional value and here you have a perfect holiday to start the New Year.

Exceptional value Far East Explorer - the complete cruise Departs 6 Jan 1998 for 82 nights Dover, Singapore, Hong Kong, Dover Guaranteed Outside Cabin* £4,995 Far East Explorer

82 nights from less than £61 a night DOVER Tues 6 Jan 1998 18 Jan - MALAGA 2 Jan - SARDINIA - Cagliar 16 Jan - SUEZ CANAL jen - YEMÊN - Al Eind

24/25 Jan - INDIA - Mussh 6 Jan - GOA - Morangao 31 Jan - THAILAND - Ph 2/3 Reb - SINGAPORE 5 Feb - JAVA - Jakarea 7 Feb - BALL - Padangbai 9 Feb - SULAWESI - Male 12 Feb - PHILIPPINES - Cebu 15/16 Feb - HONG KONG 17 Feb - CHINA - Haikou

19 Feb - VIETNAM - Da Nang 21/22 Feb - VIETNAM - Ho Chi Minh City 24/25 Feb - BANGKOK 26 Feb - YHAILAND - Koh Sameri la 28 Feb/1 Mar - SINGAPORE 3 Mar - MALAYSIA - Penang Mar - SRI LANKA - Col Mar - INDIA - Cochin 14 Mar - YEMEN - Aden 17 Mar - SAFAGA 18 May - PORT SUKZ 19 Mar - PORT SAID 22 Mar - SICTLY- Messins 25 Mar - MALAGA

NEW GUARANTEED EXTRA VALUE FLY/CRUISE OPTIONS

Cruise to the Far East - Fly back From Dover to Hong Kong 42 nights Guaranteed Outside Cabin* £2,995 for 3rd or 4th person sharing £1,295 Middle East - Far East cruise

Fly/cruise departs 14 Jan 1998 From Port Said to Singapore 21 nights Guaranteed Inside Cabin* £1,695 Guaranteed Outside Cabin* £1,895 for 3rd or 4th sharing £995

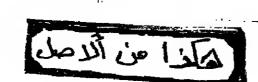

Far East - Middle East cruise Fly/cruise departs 28 Feb 1998 From Singapore to Port Said 21 night Guaranteed Inside Cabin* £1,695 Guaranteed Outside Cabin* £1.895 for 3rd or 4th sharing £995 Proces are per pareon based on two strating o twin cathin

Pty/cruises include BA scheduled flights and port transfer There are few flights and cabins remaining so CALL NOW FOR INFORMATION AND BOOKINGS 01473 292 222 Lines are open 9.00 am to 5.00 pm Monday-Saturday please quote ref. IND/06/13 Or contact your preferred travel agent.

⊠Fred. Olsen Cruise Lines

DOVER, Sen 29 Mar 1998

Knowing Alan Partridge, knowing Norwich

ੋਟst Anglia's most famous Ectional son is a frighteningly real creation, so real that Andy Bull decided to construct a Partridge-themed tour of the city that spawned him. Here's Alan Partridge, and this is his Forwich. Ah-ha

Morwich is where Alan Partridge learnt his proadcasting craft - on Hospital Radio Norwich, where his chat show knowing Me, him ming You was beamed to the nation before being unceremoniously axed by the with the Partridge". His new role is the subine dividing line between fact and fiction. Alan Partridge is a creation of Steve the current show is not filmed in the city. But Partridge is a frighteningly believable creation, and the Norwich of our collective memory may well deserve to have him its most famous son.

admit that Partridge has boosted interest in the city. Officially, they think it is all "great fun", as they do at the city's realile radio station, Radio Norfolk, Privatety, the city fathers must be wondering what on earth Norwich has done to be lumpouned in this way. After all, it is what it says on the signs they have at the boundvity, largely unspoilt, which has an imposing Norman castle, a cathedral with a spire second in height only to Salishury's, oo less than 32 ancient churches (more than any other city centre in western Europe) and a maze of largely pedestrianised streets littled with a varied array of little shops. It's as line an example of a county town as you person. His world, the world of Pringle aventers, Rover 800s, hotels with names like the Linton Travel Tavern which boast a really excellent carvery, and select develop-

I'm Norwich (left), and I'm Alan Partridge (right) Main photograph John Voos

With its neighbouring Fina service station and Little Chef it looks at first as if it could provide all the creature comforts.

But a perceptive potential guest like Partrides would notice almost immediately the giant electricity pylon that stands four square on the front lawn, and which was fizzing loudly in the rain as I arrived, like an amplified equivalent of Norman Bates's huzzing neon Vacancy sign in Psycho, The rooms do have some of the required Pertridge ambience. On the walls are semi-abstact prints of wild untamed benches that bring to mind the picture he owns of two white horses frolicking in the surf, and which makes him wonder. "Who owns these horses." And why aren't they saddled?"

Yet it's not enough. The Post House off the ring and on Hall Road also looks promising. It's right across from the Cattle Market. This is worth a visit if only to gain an understanding of what a minefield Partridge was stepping into when he ventired a comment on agricultural issues. You learn here that eows are more complicated than you might think. For of the row of vellow brick bunker-like buildings in which fivestock is bought and sold, one is fabelled, plainly and simply. Pig Sale. But there is no simple label for cows. Instead you get Calf Sale Ring, Store Cattle Sale Ring, Dairy Sale Ring and Fat Cattle Sale Ring, all in their own separate buildings.

How easy it would be tor a man more at home in Bally slip-ons - made in Norwich and available cut price from the factory outlet just up Hall Road - than green wellies to out his foot in it. You might admire a man's fat cattle, only to be told that they are dairy, and how dare you.

Right at the end are sheep, where a group of men who look like they have been left out in the rain for a year or two cluster round a bloke with a clipboard who stands between the pens and mumhles rapidly, while they either make dismissive gestures or nod. Beside me a woman was saying to two men, "You should get into sheep. Sheep people are awfully nice." Sound advice Alan.

No, the perfect hotel is the Stakis Norwich Hotel, which you get to by driving round the A140 ring road to the north of the city, passing on the way the West Norwich hospital (on your right behind a graveyard), home of Hospital of Norwich, birthplace of Partridge. The Stakis, with its inimitable Greeo-Scottish ambience, is at the airport, up Cromer Road just past the Mann and Egerton Rover dealership.

You know the Stakis is right for Partridge immediately the automatic door admits you to the lobby. The first thing that catches your eye is a portrait of the Queen, looking regal in powder blue. The lobby is double height, panelled in dark wood, with a seat curved around a statue of a nymph in the centre. Sheer class.

The carvery offers an authentic Partridge dining experience. To start your meal, maybe the Southern Fried Jacket Polato Wedges and Mushroom Combo with Spicy Mayonnaise Dips? Or perhaps the Tandoori style Babyback Pork Ribs hasted in Honey? Then on to your choice from the Roast/ Hot Dishes from the huffet. "No extra charge for those who would

Only one slight niggle. Re the piped music. TLC's Crazy Serv Cool is great in the disco, but over Cheesy Baked Stilton Mushrooms? I don't think so.

Yet while the suburbs are perfect Partridge-land, the city centre should not be dismissed. There is the shopping for a start. Partridge would be impressed by the Castle Mall precinct, the perfect leisure-shopping location for sports-casual man. It's a bit like shopping at Gatwick Airport bul without the comfort of knowing you will be flying off on holiday very shortly.

The pedestrianised streets to the west of the castle are worth a browse. I saw a very nice pair of tan leather and string driving gloves in Chadds For Fine Clothes in. Bedford Street for £49.95. Pringle sweaters are surprisingly hard to find. They have a few at Pilch Intersport in Brigg Street, but they are the showier numbers in the Faldo Golf range.

seeking with und he volcas

I did ask at the tourist authority for suggestions for my Alan Partridge itinerary, but they were very nervous. They run a shop in the old Guildhall, one of the many spectacular huildings in Norwich, which is packed with leaflets. I think Alan would go for one called "Where to Park in Norwich".

In the end they came up with one or two ideas. He had bad feet, didn't he? How about a trip to the Coleman's Mustard shop in Bridewell Alley for a mustard foot bath? I asked the tourist people about trips round the Norwich factory of Nestle Rowntree, makers of Partridge's favourite confectionery, the Terry's Chocolate Orange. But it turned out the factory closed last December, axing 700 jobs.

The historic sights can also have their Partridge moments, Before 1 left 1 popped into one of the finest of Norwich's medieval churches. St Peter Mancroft, beside the market place, is remarkably bright and airy, with huge clear-glass windows reaching up to the hammerbeam roof. Partridge would be most impressed, though, by the Flemish tapestry they keep behind a protective curtain that dates from 1573 and which portrays the Resurrection appearances of Christ. It depicts him as a gardener and ("rather too literally" according to the guide book) wearing a gardener's hat. The lady who showed me it said that this is one of only two pictures in Britain in which Christ is shown wearing a hat. The other is in Anglesea. Alan vould like that.

Still searching for a gift for the Alan in your life? Stakis Hotels (0990 909090) is offering 'A Christmas gift you'll always remember" at the Stakis in Norwich, or one of 38 other locations - including Glasgow and Edinburgh airports. For £99 two people get two nights dinner, bed and breakfast, you buy the voucher, which arrives "in a sman presentation wallet". After 27 December, the recipient phones to book the room between 1 January and 31 March.

Norwich tourist information: 01603 666071. I'm Alan Partridge is on BBC-2 at 10pm on

FAX: 0171 293 2505

per person

BRITANNIA HOTEL

Adjoining the Cathedral - Coventry

01203 633733

.....

Andrew Control

DOWN EXPLORE

NORTH THE

Charles of Sudanage of

And the second second second

BBC, and where he now works, on Radio Morwich, filling the "key" 4.30am to 7am low with a show imaginatively entitled "Up get of the fly-on-the-wall documentary I'm Alan Furtridge, on BBC2 on Monday eights. Perhaps we ought, at the outset, to draw Toogan, Radio Norwich does not exist, and At the Norfolk Tourist Authority they pries: "Norwich: a fine city", To amplify, Norwich is a fine medieval on the peripheries of cities. It's a ring-road are likely to find. home by his wife, and his recommendations But Partridge is not really a city centre in choosing one are invaluable to a visitor. world. And Norwich has all of that. So. sit back, relax, and let me guide you, in a large. When you call a hotel home, you choose gently purring British-built motor car. the one you live in with care. You might through Alan Partridge's Norwich. think you have found such a place as you approach up the All and spot the wel-Hotels have loomed large in the life of ments of mock Tudor palace-ettes, exists Partridge since he was thrown out of coming lights of the Norwich Travel Lodge. TEL: 0171 293 2222

BATH .Georgian aperiment for 2.Excellent location.Short breaks.Tel:01225 863153

Wales

PEMBROKESHIRE

A superb selection of quality character cortages in the Pernbyoloschire Coast Nation.

Park. All properties turnished to the highest standards

01239-881397

BRECON BEACONS. Over 100 s/c cottages some sleep upto 30 Many less than 1250 per wed high season. Tel 01874 678448

555 COTTAGES:FARMHOUSES

NOWDONIA Coastline Lie ule. Coustal & Country cot larmhouses. Netyn Holi

BARGAIN BREAKS GOWER, Idyl-MC 11°C familiause ensure 088,5 ONLY C21. Log fires, lic ber.01289 555640

West Sussex

The Selbam Country

House Hotel & Resignant

Flighty Commisseded Stanced on the Internal National
The 2 conditional of Barriages (not) the Cathedral City of Chechester, a-suite rooms with all lacilities Superh Restaurant, Licensed

Christmas

Louiser Bar

The Christmas Cumbrian Mountain Express 20th December, 1997

Retive the magn: of Steam as a guart from the steam age pulls a train of heritage curriages over the backbone of England via the World lamous Settle & Carliste rallway line!

Travel in reserved seats on board a private train from the following stations. London Kings Cross Potters Box. Stevensoge, Peterborough, Grontham, Doncaster orin York. The breath faking beauty of the magniticent Settle & Caritise railway through the high Pennines - and the hard slogging performance of the train's steam to another on the arctions t in 100 gradients is the period start to the Charmas Hotiday's Lating logether great limestone peaks and deep valley's via a senes of no lewer than 19 viaduats and 12 times, the Settle & Carlise line is a mosterpiece of Victorian enumeering from the 1870's - and what better way to expenence this than behind the lamous steam engine No. 60532 filtre

Pass the three ramous peaks of Penyghent, Ingleborough and Whemside. Unique Complementary Internation Pack

Three different classes at travel available Prices start from as little as £44.00 return Spoil yourself in the hurry of Premiet Class, with full aliver vervice at seat during by our attentive stewards for $59.00 tricluding Great British Breakfast, Light Lunch and a Three Course Dunner.

Festive Breaks

Lancoster Terrace, Hyde Park, London, W2 3PF Teh 0171 402 6641:: Fax: 0171 224 8900

A PERFECT CHRISTMAS IN LONDON

OVERLOOKING HYDE PARK

Fully Inclusive Hobdays, from just $275pp.

···· London Elizabeth Hotel ····

Special Fores available for Junices and Formilies.

Telephone Post-Time Rail on 01543 411971 for Credit Card Bookings and or further information on this and other tours

BRITANNIA HOTEL

THE ROYAL COURT HOTEL Keresley, Coventry 01203 334171 BRITANNIA HOTEL 01902 429922 THE INTERNATIONAL HOTEL Marsh Wall, London E14 9SJ 0171 712 0100 THE CLIVE HOTEL 0171 586 2233 EUROPA HOTEL In the country - Market Bosworth 01455 291919 Gurwick Airport, West Sussex 01293 886666 BRITANNIA HOTEL THE ROYAL ALBION HOTEL 0121 631 3331 01273 329202 Subject to availability • Double occupancy only - Minimum stay Advance reservations essential "*LONDON + £10pp".

ALSO AVAILABLE AT

Meet The Stars

INDEPENDENT

Fill your holiday cottage, villa or apartment vacancies ALL YOU HAVE TO DO ...

Independent and Independent on Sunday readers book Self Catering holidays. Triplet of our renders stayed in a rented with, that or estage on their holiday had year?

The readers

For only LLE a line, inclusion of VAT capares, 4 words per lines, you can advertise out thickey from and full three vacuacies throughout the year. Your advertisement will oppose in The Long Western section of The Independent Section of the Saturday and for Transl & Meson, in other of the Saturday paper.

Either call The Travel Team on 0.771 203 2200 Monday to Friday between 10.00am - 5.00jun. e-mail us at travelteam@independent.co.uk

Fill in and return the coupon below stating the a criling you require and your payment method. Payment can be made by cheque or by Access «Visa/American Express/Universe Card.

	THE SHY ENTINEES ON STREET
mertion (latest	ALE ALE ALIVERTINESS ONLY THAT PROPERTY NO BEEN Tar-Menthet.	Fill in and send to: The Travel Team (Service) reactive a cheeque for £	Fill in and send to: The Travel Team, Chamilled Advertising. The Independent, One Causali Square, Canary Wharf, Landon Ell 501, or e-mail at travelteams Independent coast.
	independent on the winds are well Newspaper Publishing the	fullia appropria Marine Marine American
ani Nu.	·
Nart Date Expery Date	1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1
Your Delatts:	{
Saw and the same a	* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
AFILE # ' ' '
Manager and the state of the st
D4 No. Day Evening	1
Siznalite:
For advice or more informa	this are a second secon
The second of th	ation, please call The Travel Team on 0171 293 2222

pool solely for our guests' uso.
Znights, Scourso dinner 886
Inct.VAT anily 299, 3mights only £130. Brochure, 015394 43636
LAKE OISTRICT WELCOME Cottagos. 1998 colour brochure
01756 702206 BEAUTIFUL WATERWAY: Surrey-BRITAIN'S BEST Self Drive Nat-Scotland SCOTLAND'S WELCOME Cot lages. 1998 colour brochure Phone now!! 01756 7022!3 Norfolk HIGHLANO HIOEAWAYS. Wide range of individual sic coltages THE BLAKENEY throughout Scottish Highlan Free'98 broch, 01463 232655 HOTEL N.R. ooo Blakency, Nr. 1 July, Norfolk Blakeney, Nr. Hinh, Norfink, Christoph on Pagena, Trea Harbon, Christoph on State of French and Christoph on State of French and French on Ready and French on Ready and French on Pagena and French on Pagena and French on Pagena and French on Pagena and State of Page Activity Holidays LEARN TO SWIM IN ONLY 2 DAYS AMIN AGHOOF midwel rate for Senior Orly Brochure: U1263 740797 Pembrokeshire

LOG CABIN in 10 acres of wood-land. Sipp. 6. Vocant 23-31 December 0200 01305 852224.

East Anglia

Holidays Afloat UK

(01437) 781061 Walking Breathing Space.

3 nights from £39
ed Breakfast and evening u

"yr seafrest hotel, entertainen motor pool, Jacuzu, gound.

FREE CAR FERRY

Sandringham Hotel

Tel: 01983 406655

* 4 NTS JANUARY 279*

HILLTHWAITE HOUSE, Winde

merc, Thombarrow Road, over-looking lake All rooms onsulo Isomo with Jacuzzi baths! Satol-Ite TV. tearnalung. Sauna. Tylo Sham Room and heated Indoor (Don't take it for granted) We don't. Help us keep Brazen's breating spaces open. Feespaths and constant, high places, heaths and wouldend. For walkers. For our 62 years, THE RAMBLERS' lobbying and visituate have been achieving wide-ranging richts of access to some of our most beautiful Take a walk. Take a treather, consider the terms leves in The RAMNERS.

Working for walkers

We occasionally exchange names for use once anny) with other organisations which may interest you. Tell if you profer to be excluded. 1-5 Wandsworth Road, London SW8 2XX. Rept Chang No 206090

Year subscription brings our essentid eaddoor information Yearbook, the quarterly colour magazine, and membership of one of our 400 local groups. Ms/Mcs/Mess/M

Ordinary $17 🔲 Reduced* $28.50

"Under 18/sudents/retired/disabled/un

C Fundy part C21 C Joint reduced" £10.50 [for two adults at some address]

_____ | enclose $.

Heworth Court 01904 425156.

UK Travel

DITAGE HOLIDAY

MEW 1998

BROCHURE-OUT NOW

ODISCOUNTS FOR

PETS GO FREE

Scotland, Northemberland, Lakes.
 Dales, North York Moors, Peaks, Wales, East Anglin, Kent, Sussea,

Cotsmolds, Denset, late of Wight, West Country + ireland - prices loss than FK even incl. ferry !!

01756 702200

Yorkshire & The Dales

SUPERB cottages. Yorks Dales. Northumbris, Lakes, Pesis, Sykas Cottages 01244 345700 www.jiffa.co.uk/sykos

YORK OVER 30% OFF. 2 star Heworth Court Hotel Brock

& New Year available. Call now for full details. 01798-867373 Tick box for membership type required

Independent and Independent on Sunday readers took a total of 3.8 million flights outside the UK last year.

Don't forget to mention . The Independent when replying · to adverts

r of the leather and single of Chadds For Fine Coulon set for $20.55. Pringle near they hard to find. They have consecutor in Brico (in.) Seeking truth under the volcano

In a bid to turn fiction into fact, Makolm Senior sets off in the footsteps of Maicoim Lowry, creator of 'Under the Volcano'.

futered at in Rudo 2004 of Mark Land Control of the Mark Land Control o

Showing admoors in the ge at the treatist authorn by Alan Parriage interest.

Li Wale was They was all widhall, one of the buildings in Norwich the leaffets. I think Alan and ad-Whore to Park in North d they came up with one of and had feet didn't help to the Column's Missail

Alley for a muserd look remise broken swample

h factor, of Needle Rose

Partridge s favourité ou

Terry Chardate Orang 1 an the factor, closed leg toric sight's can also have woments Before Hehlph

of the finest of None

burches, S. Peter Manadak

mirket place is temple

air, with hegy changes.

hing up to the hammen.

reasoning to most make the Firmish tapesin think potential curtain that takes.

which portrays the Reamer and ("rather two literals"

a the guide pools some s has. The act who should

This is one or only maper

m which Chast is should

The other is in Andrea y

ting for a 200 force Autom

A Hotels " was a saling !

MARKETS AND CONTRACTOR

e States in a new conse.

THOMAS - Television of the Later of the

with the section of not be an imposed in the ومعرض والمراجعين فيكتب

温す。 4: - 17 () - - - - - -

Edition of the second or many

RAIFELD AND THE CONTRACT OF SHIP

Burnier of the Lan-

FAX: 0171 293 15

Mondays at 9.36

01203 n3-23 ROYAL CO. RT HIS 81203 33471

BRITANNA BOTE

NIERVIEWER

014C 12032

161-1 -12 ((18)

THE CENT LOTE.

W171 505 223

EL RUPA HOTEL

RUN TE ALBERT HE

tment vacancies

From Hory deliga-

E 41 act of the same of the sa

American Security of the Contract of the Contr

A large action with the same and the same actions and the same actions are a same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions and the same actions are a same actions and actions are a same actions are a s

Figure 1 and 1 and

The second secon

01293 Septemb

16 English 329 112

ibii.

es of Christ, it depictshing

"Two mountain chains traverse the republic roughly from north to south, forming hetweeo them a number of valleys and plateaux. Overlooking one of these valleys, which is dominated by two volcanoes, lies, 6,000ft above sea level, the town of Quauahnahuac." So begins Malcolm Lowry's Under the Volcano, a novel about the last day in the life of the imaginary ex-Consul, Geoffrey Firmin, ao awesome tale of driok-sodden damnation and symbolic doom. Its very words sent shivers down my spine in the unlikely surroundings of the No 239 North Vancouver bus heading towards the less-than-iofernalsouoding Deep Cove.

I had always wanted to visit the place where Lowry wrote Under the Volcano, and also the real-life version of the novel's locatioo. The fact that one of them lay in British Columbia and the other was a small town about an hour's drive south of Mexico City, didn't seem to matter, I needed to see them both, preferably on the same trip. So armed with the two main hiographies of Lowry, I based myself in Vancouver and began the trail that I hoped would lead me to what remained, if anything, of the shack where he wrote his most famous novel

Lowry and his volcano were conspicuously absent from -- Vancouver's guide loved, self-built landing-stage? books. Even Dollarton, the hamlet where he lived from sign of the Shell logo. Images 1940 to 1954, didn't seem to of Lowry's life swarmed guided by fate and the basic a rock to perch on, and taking expanse of the University of ing a bottle of gin.

knowledge that his shack had been on the north side of Burrard Inlet, near a place called Indian Arm, I set off across Vaocouver Harbour on ooe of the regular ferries to the city's northern shore. I also had in mind a memorahly Lowryan vision of a Shell oil refloery, minus its S, htinking infernally opposite the shack. Another clue was the existence of a road called Dollarton Highway, even if there was no sign of Dollarton it its eod.

Once in North Vancouver. I caught a ous west to Phibbs loterchange, then another heading along the highway. On the No 239, I asked the driver if he could help me in my quest. He'd never heard of Lowry, or the existence of some fishermen's shacks along the shore. But he said there was a development that had been built about 30 years ago, called Cates Park, and that every summer there was a local music festival called "Under the Volcano".

And so I found myself heading past harbecue tables to the farthest and of Cates Park. There to my amazement was a huge sign that said "Malcolm Lowry Walk" and a map as if drawn by a hasty child which marked the spot of Lowry's shack with a bold X. I followed the path, which ducked into the wood and ran parallel to the inlct. After a few yards, a boulder lay to the side of the track, noting my man's existence here, or at least a few yards along the

On the beach, a mixture of euphoria and grinning idiocy took over. A rise of stones leading into the water; might that not he Lowry's much There was the refinery, but oo around me like flies. I found

9/FOOTSTEPS

On the trail of Lowry: the author might have lived near Vancouver, but both he and his most famous novel, 'Under the Volcano', are Photograph: Jeff Vinnick/Reuters conspicuously absent from the city's guide books.

out Douglas Day's biography I looked at all the pictures of Lowry and his wife, Margerie. ludicrously trying to spot where such and such a picture had been taken. After a few moments sanity took hold. In truth, there is little sign of where the shack was. Lowry's pier, which had allowed him to dive straight into the deep waters of the inlet, had been destroyed before even the cottages themselves had gone, more than 30 years ago. The area these days is a highly select suburb of North Vancouver. The only modernday acknowledgement is that Park Lane in Deep Cove was renamed Lowry Lane. In Lowry's time the remoteness of the shacks allowed him to work undisturbed; nowadays, the area relies on bordes of Neighbourhood Watch schemes to keep the place peaceful.

Back in Vaocouver itself, the Lowry crusader needs to one other trip - to the vast

British Columbia. Here the Cuernavaca is a long way UBC library is home to an from Vancouver. Quauharchive of goodies about the nahuac's real life counterpart writer. Seeing that Lowry was lies on the motorway from Mexico City to Acapulco. on nearly always rude about Canathe south side of the volcanoes. da, this seems to me to be a show of extraordinary generosity of spirit on BC's behalf. You'll need Popacatapeti and Iztaccihuati, that gave Lowry his novel's title. It was - and to some extent to show some reason for wanting to see the collection, but in still is - an affluent commuter it you'll find such famous Lowrytown for those who can afford ana as sheet music of his a weekend home away from songs, and innumerable letters. Mexico City. But Cuernavaca manuscripts and photos, inis no Deep Cove. Its tight cluding my favourite; one of an streets are filled with slow, minning Lowry clutchafter an eternity of public ser- io during his time io Cuer- lived, and where Lowry staved HarperCollins, 1993.

The Collection

The very best of Cadogan's square, is small and husy. While I was there, it was filled with protesters seeking better rights for Mexico's indigenous One thing it did have in common with Vancouverwas its tourist board's complete ignorance of anything to do with either Lowry or his novel. So it and a map that I'd torn out of the hotel telephone directory. The house that LowTV lived was back to the biographies.

when he inadvisedly returned to Cuernavaca with his secood wife, Margerie, in December 1945. The hotel also overlooks the ravine where the Coosul's hody is dumped aloog with one of the novel's ubiquitous pariah dogs. Other locations from the book abound. There is the Casino de la Selva; derelict in the novel, rebuilt and then left to ruin once more in real life. There is the Jardin Borda and the unsigned brown swinging doors of the town's forhidding Cantinas, now covered in posters of wet gringo girls in wet Tshirts.

Visiting the locations for books and films risks the disappointment of reality. Works of imagination are altered by the passage of time, sometimes beyond recognition. But more otien than not it's a joy to be somewhere that once existed solely on the pages of a book, but now stands before your very eyes. And my journey was more than a visit - it felt like a pilgrimage.

Malcolm Senior paid £583 for an "open-jaw" return on British Airways - flying from Heathrow to Vancouver, returning from Mexico City to Gatwick, booked through Airline Network (01772 727272) in Preston. He travelled between the two cities by bus, train and plane.

In Vancouver he paid $149 per night (about £70) at the Downtown Best Western (00 1 604 669 9888) and in Cuernavaca he stayed at Las Manunitus for 630 pesos a night about £50, but well worth it (00 73 14 14 66). The rate for Hoseems reasonable to believe tel Bajo El Volcan is 256 pesos a night (00 73 12 48 73). 'Malcolm Lowty' by Douglas

Apart from its name, the Day is published by Oxford Unihotel also has a role in our tale. versity Press, 1984 (now out of Part of it is the tower where prim) and 'Pursued by Furies' by Gordon Bowker is published by the character Jacoues Lamelle

TEL: 0171 293 2222

TRAVEL: BROCHURES OVERSEAS

FAX: 0171 293 2505

Classic

EXPLORE WORLDWIDE

Adventure tours, scatrels, iver journeys and cultural tours in more than 90 countries. B days to 6 weeks. In Europe, Middle East, Africa, Asia, Americas, Australasia.

For brochure contact plore Worldwide (SI) Aldershot GU11 2LQ Full bonded ATTO/ATOL 2595 ☎01252 344161

Girbrattar, Southerne Spain and Majorea um and veleoning the hest of the Mest guarantee not to be besten on Holidays are tallor-made from 3-56 nights. Accommodation is in luxury hotels, Bermuda's only aff-inclusive resort, smaller hotels ar rechare Hotise: 0990 171819 Featuring golf, tenulo, waterspring and sea engling opinions and sea engling opinions.

price Scheduled Highl reliability from Heathrow and Gatwick with low cost tegional connections Benefit from live extra nights, celebration packages, savings for single guests, excellent child discounts and our fabulous international Discount Card memorana bacount caro Holidays are tailor made irom 2-56 nights Accommodation or in 3, 4 and 5-sight hories Featuring and Porto Santo, the Algere, Opono, Mercocco, Tunsla, Synta Brochure Hodine: 0990 171819

oavaca, and the ooe that the Consul inhabits in the novel.

was oo a small street called

Calle Humboldt - in the novel, Calle Nicaragua. At the time it was a quiet parallel to the main drag through the town, but now it's almost as busy. Among the hiographers, there's a difference of opinion about precisely which house

Lowry and his first wife, Jan, lived in. Douglas Day has them at number 15; Gordon Bowker at number 62. The reason for this became apparent to me after one of the staff to the appropriately named Hotel Baja

El Volcan told me that the houses on Calle Humboldt recombered, and certainly not sequentially. Either way, it that the house doesn't exist any were constantly being

STEER AND A wide range of summer holidays all at one tred price e.g. July/August '96 Including ferry or le Shuttle. ₽899 for two weeks - tel letting Gites with swimming pool - Louise in Summer-house in Chaireas prounds - Loire Superb holes many with pools (indoorfuntation) Vendoe, Britaniy, Provence, Condoper shan compling II Hat-herm, Easter & May hole from £199 tamily CTMASANEW YEAR from £299p re Hotiline: 0990 171619 Plays de Formentor, Cafa de Sen vacious: 01703 828308 Vicente, rutal Majorca and more.

Brockure Hotline: 0990 171819

Bermuda

Featuring Hammamet, Nebe Sousse, Port El Kantegul a Hotime: 0990 171819 saferix and golf on eightons: 01703 828302 (7) International standard courses.

and the neighbouring isle of Ponto Santo. Brochure Hotline: 0990 171819 Reservations: 01703 828303

-and Porto Santo, Islands of eternal spring

Destination USA

Beckons you to The most magical places or Walt Disney World Resort, Florida Disneyland, California and the all new Disney Cruise Line Vacation packages

Offically appointed World. Tour Operator Call us now on 1171 253 2000 for our new 1998-99 brochure 559X ATOL 2960 0

01492 532 532

Elegant hotels, unique odges and classic safaris made for the discerning Individual since 1947. Please call us for coole of our Atrica & The Indian Ocean or South America prochures. Tel 0171 229 1411 Fax 0171 229 1511 Email u-cl@u-cl.co.uk

UNION-CASTLE ABTA 60675 ATOL V8887

The islands of the Tropical South Atlantic

THE INDEPENDENT Brochures '97 - '98 BROCHURE REPLY SERVICE

To receive up to 8 of the brochures featured, please indicate the number of each brochure in the boxes below.

ADDRESS.

POST CODE. Please return to: Independent on Sunday, Travel Brochures '97, Unit 18, Mitcham Industrial Estate, Streatham Road, Mitcham

Or fax your request on 0181 640 0673 Coupons to arrive by 22nd December 1997

CR4 2AA

from Funway Holidays. one of America's largest tour operators,

Featuring fly-drives, resort packages, city breaks. corted motorcoach tours & cruises.

Daily scheduled flights from 22 UK airports. Unlimited flexibility & unbeatable family value. 10 0181 466 0222

A magical Ringdom of Medieval Arab cities and modern resorts

We guarantee not to be beater

Scheduled flight reliability hom Heathrow and Gatwick with low cost regional connections.

Benefit from free eatre nights, celebration packages, savings for single guests, excellent child discounts and our labulous international Discount Card.

Holidays are tallor-made from 2-56 nights. Accommodation is in 2 to 5-star hotels.

. Trees from tour days to ten weeks · New Kenya Adventurer and Zimbabae in airle • 10" - discount for eath

• Information and enquires

0171 937 8855

Africa film night ever, broking.

Wednesday

BIGFOOT TRAVELLED SKI SPECIALISTS IN CHAMONIX:ARGENTIERE Entry the best with a tarket-made trabilet to the French Alpa. Flexible dates, weekends weeks, in Tek 01491 579601 or see our web sile 4101.270 http://www.bigfoot-travel.co.uk

Voyages to St. Helena, Ascension Island and Tristan da Cunha on the luxury cargo liner St. Helena riv Cruise options. 23 days to 50 days. staning at $2,105. 01326 211466 RMS St. Helena

ESCAPE TO KERALA, INDIA

WITH CAPE We are an independent Operator with extensive knowlede and experience of this special place 2 weeks from £605

THIS WINTER

* Guest lecturer tours led by Lady Wade-Grey MA (Oxon Call 0181 566 2729 or Fax 840 5327 Trans Indus. Northumberland House. Faling, London W5 4NG

TRANS INDUS LIMITED

For quality bolidays to India including ★ Independent tours

* Tailor-made holidays

The Cape Travel Co. Ltd. 0181 943 4067 0181 943 4086 (fax) ①

حجہ ویلیاں مشاکرہ

rochure Hotline: 0990 171819 Reservations: 01703 828304

Featuring Marrakech, Taroudani, Agadir, Cesablanca, Tangier, Fes and goff - in Morocco - the sport of Kings

†@† ●

On Sunday 28th December

97 and Saturday 3rd January

'98 we will be carrying an

AITO Brochure Guide.

For further details and to book please call Omar

Haji on 0171 293 2331.

Mary Mary Control of the Control of What sort of tree should you buy - and how do you dispose of it once the lights go out? Tom Barber advises.

Christmas trees are a boom market. The threatened takeover hy glitzy plastic jobs seems to have receded, and the comforting tradition (even though Germanic in origin) of using a real tree has re-asserted itself. Over the past few years sales have grown steadily, reaching a peak of five million last year. All but 7 per cent of these were home-grown, an enterprise requiring an amazing 2,000 acres of land.

Choice has also expanded. meant a Norway spruce, picea abies. It still accounts for around two thirds of the total sold, but other contenders are eating into its one-time monopoly. The great failing of the Norway spruce is a tendency to part with its needles - a trifling 150,000 of them on a four-footer.

a greater reluctance to shed their clothing are the Nordmann and Noble firs. But they are both slower growing, so more expensive. They also lack that evocative resinous scent that seems half the point of having the tree in the house in the first place. The only other species you are likely to meet is the Scots pine, which fits the bill admirahly as long as it's beco encouraged to bush out by clipping.

When choosing a tree, be sure to look at the needles and disregard anything that looks as if it has begun to dry out. Size is obviously down to pocket, accommodation and ioclination, but unless you are looking to create a particularly bizarre effect. choose a bushy tree with well spaced branches. Perhaps the For decades a Christmas tree most fun, especially with kids is to go to one of the number of "pick your own" enterprises. For a list of outlets send a stamped, addressed envelope to the British Christmas Tree Growers at ground level, but there is an Association 121 auriston Road. Wimbledon, Londoo SW19 4TQ. They also produce a useful leaflet about getting the best from your Christmas tree.

As fir as the eye can see: 12,000 acres are required to grow the trees sold in Britain.

increasing trend towards supplying trees with roots attached. They are more expensive, and I suspect people buy them for two tree will retain its needles just as would do a bunch of flowers. reasons; the belief that trees with

Most trees are simply cut off roots will shed less needles, and treated considerately and given people seem to want their tree the prospect of subsequently a supply of water. Cut off a couplanting the tree in the garden. ple of centimetres from the base den. While it is true that a cut tree Neither of these thoughts and leave the tree standing in a stands up to much scrutiny. A cut bucket of water, just as you well as one with roots, if it is to have an after-life in the garstands no chance of survival, the outlook for one with roots, be it Yet an amazing number of or containerised (dug up from est oo Christmas tree is ever go-into a pot) is not much better. able addition to the garden. When the tree is wrenched from of establishing successfully are not good, especially after two ered in tinsel and baubles.

Perhaps the wish to plant out science that sees binning a tree as a cardinal sin. I'm all for reducing consumer waste and protecting endangered natural habitats - but Christmas trees are just not like that. They are. in truth, a crop like barley or cut flowers; planted and harvested beh over a few years rather than a single season. Nothing of value is destroyed to accommodate them, and their cultivation is probably less environmentally damaging than the arable crop that might have been growing in their place. So I see nothing wrong in huying a new Christmas tree every year and simply discarding it after the hare rooted, wrapped in sacking allotted time. And let's be hoo-open ground and then stuffed ing to make a particularly valu-However, if you're still de-opeo ground, most of the roots termined to grow one afterare left behind and so its chances wards, then buy a container grown tree (as opposed to a containerised one) that has spent is weeks in a heated room, smoth- life in a pot, and plant it out in open ground. If the real goal is to save money and become self the tree arises in part from a sufficient in Christmas trees, misplaced environmental con- your best bet is plant a dozen or so young saplings in an out-ofthe way spot in the garden and harvest them when they have reached the desired height. If you're buying a cut tree, perhaps the best way of assuaging any greeo guilt you may carry is to dispose of the as part of a renewable cycle, al- corpse conscientiously. What better than shredding it so it can be returned as mulch to the soil. More and more councils run special shredding days to deal with the mountains of old trees. or you could get together with a group of frieods, hire a machine for the day and have a new-year garden party. Just imagine the relief of not having to look out of the kitchen window at yet another slowly dying

A shot in t

TEL: 0171 293 2222

CLASSIFIED: PERSONAL

FAX: 0171 293 2505

TO RESPOND TO ANY Voice personals ADVERTISEMENT, CALL: 0891 862 117

AND FOLLOW THE EASY INSTRUCTIONS. 24 HOURS A DAY!

(Calls cast 50p per minute at all times)

my life, London, 274387

Voice personals

TO PLACE YOUR FREE Voice personals ADVERTISEMENT, CALL: 0800 216 318

24 HOURS A DAY! FOR LIVE ASSISTANCE FROM A VOICE PERSONALS® REPRESENTATIVE, CALL MONDAY-FRIDAY 9AM-8PM.

WOMEN SEEKING

Sociable, thoughtful, creative, tachile lentale, passionate about classical music, widitle, seeks cultured, sensitive, emolionally secure, humorous, thorocet man, 44-50, NS, to share travel, theatre, operationcerts, country walks, good conversation, Cambs, 374-365, NOT NUCH GOING FOR ME Attractive intelligent, slim lemale, young 61, normal inter-ests and activities, but not sporty, seeks lively, caring, con-siderate male companion, of siderate mate companion, of similar age, for hieroshophasting relationship. Nons/Derby/Lexester area. 27:4353

NO PLACE LIKE HOMER Marge, seeks Homer, 30-40, for sedentary lifestyle and small amounts of action Non-Ille theatening. NW London 27:4361

ALL THAT GLITTERS...

Optimistic, beautiful voluptuous

ALL THAT GLITTERS...
Codimistic, beautiful voluptious black women, 36, malure student, paradoxical, romanic, caring hedorest, tooking for hor wing commander, 32-48, who enjoys life, wants commitments, support, "gold" in his file, SW London. 27-4389
NOT A MORNING PERSON?
Aftraches having 37, trues the

TM-979

GOING TO WASTE

Arnable & trustworthy make sought by single lady. 40s who pussesses strong SOH, enjoys gallenies, criema, walking, any Independent, spiritual, country-loving, attractive, middle-aged woman, seeking male equiva-give up for right mant, no complications please. London area. TY 4:00

MID SUSSEX

Attractive, vital, warm and creative woman, 43, loves country-see and the arts, seeks intelligent. expressive, soft and strong man, 40s, to laugh, talk, and explore togethers. TX 4403

FIERY REDHEAD

Female, 28, just antwed back from US, seeks solvent, wall-travelled male, 23-33, with GSOH 5 East area. TX 4309

SOUL MATE

Well-built lady, 34, one toenage child, likes tootball, relaxing in front of the television and good conversation, seeks male, by themoship/relationship. A relaxed attitude to housework and a liking for animals essential. Don't Forget 0800 216 318

PICTURE THIS Imriguing, petite lady, 30, malure student, enjoys litera-ture, philosophy, seeking inter-esting, balanced, loyal, warm-hoaned male, who appreciates ior Inendship, possibly more.

17:4395

AUBBLY ALONDE

Outgoing and fun temale, 32.

GSOH, seeks mate, 25-40, for fun and good times. S East.

17:4368

Professional, putite female, 33.

52". blue-green eyes, seeks metiligent, attractive, professional male, for iriendship, possibly more Edinburgh. 27:4385

DRAGON SLAYER

REQUIRED

Mid-30s lays seeks T D S H, K

REQUIRED
Mid-30s Lady, seeks T D S H, K in S A, only those who understand need apply), 30-45, for generally swooping off her loot and living happily ever after London/Berks, 274196

SIRIUS Ask Lot Club Magazine

Sirius, for the intelligent, articulate and well educated, providing personal interviews and, of course, complete discretion at all times.

$100 of free phone calls!

 $\mathbf{0800} \ \mathbf{L}^{5} \mathbf{1}^{4} \mathbf{\Lambda}^{2} \mathbf{1}^{4} \mathbf{S}^{7} \mathbf{0}^{6} \mathbf{N}^{6}$

JOIN CINELINK

Cinema/Arts events in

Tel: 0181 800 4822

or send SAE to 138 Lordship Road

Socialise around liven though the base in utreasuring job and a base contail life, a truli companishe partner can sell be hard to find.

We can help

instant at St. or Call 01869 324 100

GETHER MORE FUN Information Pack

SIMPLY THE BEST
Altractive, forminine blonde, 37, soeks talt, professional male, for romantic times, Must enjoy good food and wine, conversation, countryside, theatre and music, West Midands, 174380
NEWCASTLE
EGYPTIAN GIRL
Single formale, 23, seeks male, to stare fun-loving outings to clubs and pubs, new to Newcastle, needs someone to show me the single and show me the sights and sounds, 274350 TIRED OF SEARCHING

DAY OF CHRISTIMAS
Romantic, fun-loving, professional lemale, 30, GSOH, enjoys theatre, keep-lit, intenor decorating, lazz music, seeks professional, similar male, under 40, great personality, GSOH, nationality unimportant, for friendship possible romance. London only, 74:205
PHYSICS GRAD
Female, 33, with questions still to answer, once into physics, now into metaphysics, with a love of mountain-biding, one-ma and exploring, seeks male, to join in the fun. London. 22:4186
RAVISHING BLONDE
Attractive lamale, 34, seeks attractive lamale, 34, seeks attractive intelligent soul mate, to share cosy nights in and explore the world. Cambridge. 23:4168

CHRISTMAS CRACKERS
Luxuriously decorated, containing quality gilts, original lokes, but no cheap paper hat, wants removing from box, but not just for Christmas, by dynamic, lender gentleman, with integrity and charisma. Northamptonshire area. 274197

SEEKING MR RIGHT Fun-loving, witty, honest, loyal, trustworthy, caring, loving, black tensele, 27, GSOH, seeks the same in a tall, appealing, French male, 24-36, N/S, for triendship first, possible romance. 274155

ON THE FIRST

DAY OF CHRISTMAS

Romantic, fun-loving, profes-

GAY MEN

Form long term relationships through

Significant

Others

the Introduction Bureau for Professional Gay Men

0171 499 5939

PLUMP PARTNERS. National dating agency il you are olump of priors a plump partner ring 01352 715993.
UK'S BEST singles magazine. Froe details + Bargain Offer! PERSON TO PERSON IDept ND). PII. Bos 4. Goring. RG8 90N.

Sn't it Markand Carol, Helen) and Jim, Bob and Sarah, this is Maria time you Experience would. Cambridge.

Experience
SOMEONE SPECIAL
Attractive, intelligent, professional, brunette female, 40-, 515°, with a warm heart, enjoys cultural activities, walks, food 8 wine, interesting convertation, seeks sincere, trun, professional male, 33-45, for triondshipridationship, London area Existate
SOUTH COAST LADY
Genuine female, 40-something, seeks loving, caring male, similar age, for lasting mendship.

Exists.

tried the personals?

To place your own FREE personal ad, call 0800 216 318 EVEN THE CALL IS FREE

For FREE live assistance from a Vaice Personals® representative call Monday-Friday 9om-8pm.

Voice personals

Voice Personals® oppears in The Independent each Saturday and in The Independent on Sunday

Both the advert and the calli to place the advertisement are free, however advertisers are billed at 50p per minute for message retneval. The advertiser is strongly encouraged to record a voice greeting prior to publication. If you respond to an advertiser who has not recorded a voice greeting, you will still have the opportunity to leave a message

Arry Querics?
If you should have any questions about any aspects of air Vaice Personals service, please call FREE on 0800 216 318.

ASIAN CRICKET FANATIC Fairly lively, senous, but relaxed lady, 48, 5'2", girlish related lady, 45, 52, grison SOH, likes gardening, theatre trips, comedy/dramas, rock/classic/blues music. landical crickel supporter, seeks professional educated male, 45-50, with GSOH, for iriondship/relation-than 17/4161

CARING AND CUDDLY Female. 40s. into everything, seeks educated male, 30s/50s, with GSOH, for caring triendship. East Anglia. 224187 ATTRACTIVE, EXCITING LADY Educated, single, with GSOH, would like to meet handsome, Altractive, feminine bionde, 37, seeks tall, professional male. MAGINE

Very stylish, slim, profes intelligent, easygoing, lun, attractive, blonde temale, 5%, auracava, toone termale, 55, varied interests, enjoys social-ising, seeks tall, handsome, sporty, professional, intelligent male, GSOH, for Iriendship; relationship, Midlands, 274156 SUSSEX LADY

piaces, classical music, the-atre, books, writing, seeks kind, academic/professional gentle-man, with similar interests/age, for caring relationship. 274165 NEW BEGINNINGS Creative, pretty, witty, wise, sfim, dark, hollstic female, tate 40s, varied interests, eclectic tastee, seeks real man, as best

Wordly wise female graduate, 40. blondelsh, loves squash and scuba-diving, where poss-ble, seeks contrasting male, to share candlelir meals, were and fun-foring romance. London. 57-4173

SEEKING WOMEN SEEKING OTHER HALF

SEERING OTHER HALF Single, professional male, early 40s. 510°, reasonable looks, into music, carema, theatre, countryside, travel, seeks shigle female, 30-40, no ties, with similar interests, for lasting regalorship. 174363

SPECIAL LADY SOUGHT
Good-looking skip articulate. SPECIAL LADY SOUGHT Good-looking, slim, articulate and sincere male, 34, 5'10', NS, enjoys boesling, badminton, walks, chema and country pubs, seeks attractive, professional female, 25-35,
NS, for friendship/romance,
Devon area, 124367

NOTICE TO

READERS

The Independent cannot

Taurean male, 43, into Sulfolk walks, modern lolk/blues, wine and lood, sunsets. moonlight, candlelight, seeks older woman, with similar interests. TALL GUY Humorous, house-trained, designer/writer, 45, 6'5", into music, fifm and gardening, seeks widey exciting relationship, with wonderful woman, angitton, 254399 LOOKING FOR ADVENTURE Good-looking, sofvent, warm, considerate graduate, 35, 510°, N/S, GSOH, enjoys mote-pendent larved abroad, mountaineering, cycling, running, wallding, seeks smilar female, 25-38, Herts/N London area, 25-38, Herts/N London area.

TA378 EAST YORKS MALE. 230-something, 5°10", intelligent, sim and athletic, seeks striller, interesting female, 25-3N/S, who enjoys culture, conversation and country walks, to share fun and friend-ship. 274373

Fit, medium-built, educated male, 23, 57°, gorgeous eyes, ergoys pubs, clubs, restaurants, seeks good-looking lemale, 19-30, for possible romance. Croydon/Surrey page 774356

AND CREATIVE al, caring male, 30s, gradu-N/S, seeks positive, attrac-female, 25-35, for a caring ngon area. 254386 ALTERNATIVE L'AMOUR?

warm temale, any nationality, for romance. London/SE area. 254394

SOUL MATE REQUIRED
Tall, sim, teasygoing, honest, professional male, young 52, NS, enjoys travel, music, rectauranty concents solution. restaurants, generally enjoying life, seeks attractive, affectionate, dark-haired female, 40s, NS, for lasting relationship, Bucks/Benks/Surrey, 12/4392 SPICE BOY
Tall, dark, bandsome, professionals

SPICE BOY
Tall, dark, handsome, professional male, looks 45, widower,
2 teenage boys, seeks very attractive, N/S, well-educated female, tor turn, triendship, possible relationship, NW or any-where. TR4356
FOREVER FRIENDS
FERSONDER, slim, unpreferen-

FOREVER FRIENDS
Personable, slim, unpretenbous, affectionate, considerate Englishman, 50s, looks/feels 40s, 6', N/S, GSOH, seeks special tady, for TLC, personality more important than age.
Heathrow/20 miles radius.

E14354

ATHLETIC MALE ATHLETIC MAL

ATHLETIC MALE
ATTACTIVE, articulate male, 27, enjoys lide to the full, seeks similar ternale, for fun, thendship and more. London. 184370

ZEST FOR LIFE
Attractive, intelligent male, 27, working artist, seeks attractive and cuddly lemale, 18-40, with cold hands and a warm heart. London. Surrey or Kent. 184383

STEPHEN SPIELBERG, 31
Seeks Nora Ephron, 25-30, to write the screenplay of his love file ond help shoot the movie ho is financing himself. London area. 184383

BE HERE NOW
Tall, honest male, 28, seeks temale, 21+, for fun, thendship and more. Dorset. 184381

FEMALE WITH.
Intelligence, down-to-earth personality, loyalty, creativity, VGSOH, 30-50, any culture, sought by male, 48, to share love of travel, food and mysterles, music, sport, walking, dnoma, theatre, good art and cats.

Any Queries?

Fyou should from any questions obout any corect of but Yoles for the Yoles

POSTGRADUATE WHEN HARRY MET SALLY Intelligent, good-looking, withy male, 28, 6°, into theatre, dining out, walking, cinema, conversation, travelling out, socialising, seeks similar female, 25-45, no ties, for fun, friendship/relationship. West Midlands. 12:4397
NEW HORIZONS
Carton Length strengther, travelling strengther, pro-Caring, Invitry, supportive, pro-fessional male, 32, 5°10°, medi-um build, N/S, enjoys walking, music, cycling, keep-fit, cine-ma, cooking, seeks profession-al female, 20-30, 5°2°, beauty both inside and out, for friendship, maybe more. NW area. EP4396 PROFESSIONAL MANCHESTER MALE: MANCHESTER MALE: Horiest, intelligent, thoughtful,

NS sim male, 33, 5°10°, toves ellemative esoleric subjects, chema, the arts, music, enjoya questioning accepted notions of reality, seeks farmais, 24-34, to give and receive love.
774349
EAFTH MAN

Articulate, adventurous typa, 34, interests include spirmual development, Ireland, breathing fresh air, organic tarming, seeks bright, independent lamale, eny age, for friend-ship/relationship. Airstol area. TF4376

SPECIAL LADY SOUGHT Adventurous, tall, stm., Surrey male, 39, lovely smile, likes travet, widthe, drining out, seeks intelligent, articulate tady, for lasting future. EF4364

OXFORD MALE.....31, 59", sim. professional, graduate, varied interests, seeks male, 30-45, for frendseers male, 30-45, for inend-ship and more. 1243/7 MERRY CHRISTMA2 Handsome, intelligent, creative male, late 30s, with GSOH, into more than just 9-5, seeks simi-lar male, for Christmas and beyond, London, 124388

SEEKING

give and receive loads of affec-lon, East Anglia, 124157 GLAMOROUS LADY SOUGHT

LADY SOUGHT
Externelly good-looking, sporty, professional gentlemen, 30lsh, 611, muscular build, with VGSCH, imp theatre, socialsing, horse nding, genuinely seeks good-looking, older woman, preferably solvent, for tun and intendishin, 374147
GENUINE AND SPORTY
Externelly of the presents

JUST FRIENDS

EXPLORE WITH ME Female, speaks several tan-guages, would like to travel to Europs, Middle East, Africa, visit art gallenes in London. visit art gallenes in London, seeks straight female companion, 30-50. North London, 37-380

ENDLESS POSSIBILITIES Exting, fun-foving male, 31, emjoys longuages, travel, reading, seeks French-speaking, socialising and inendship, 37-4352

SALISBURY ARTIST
Male, would like to meet other local artists, 20s-40s, IVS, to paint, draw and to exchange these $784.192

Independent Hearts

PROFESSIONAL SINGLES Successful, Articulate, Professional and Single: WE HAVE THE VERY BEST PLACE TO MEET YOUR DEAL PARTNER Top introductions

your family or trusted friend know where you Top People Call John or Fenella 0191 224 2414 reply when answering advertisements on this page, although we hope that as a marter of courtesy they will When making contact with people for the first time it is advisable to meet in a public place and let a member of

We would advise readers and advertisers to exercise cuttion when details. This will be respected by genuine will be.

YOUR WILL. can help so many elderly people who have given so much and are now in need of help themselves - with nursing home fees or convalescence and in many other ways. Please ask the NB1 to show > emption, or please send a donation to: The Secretary iestilution 61 Bayswater Road Lendon W2 3PG Tel: 0171-723 0021

you how you can set up a legacy, a coveramed

Chat Lines

Personal PSYCHIC READINGS BY Megan, Gives advice by phone. Can hole with one call, no matter what your oroblem-leve, marriage, busi-ness, health. Guaranteed results by phone. One call will arriszo vour 001 410 425 807 7 ISAN

60 TALK 111444

the Phane Cafe 48 60
WOMEN

Chat Lines

GAY? BI? OR JUST CURIOUS?

EXPLORE YOUR SECRET
DESSIGES! LIVE CHAT 00592-568 586

To advertise in this section please call Claire

Louise Donald on 0171 293 2347.

Wistmas gifts f en at heart

- AT 〒15編

erese de 1 - 14 (1894) in the

A shot in the dark for the woodcock

Woodcock of the north: they are driven south by the winter, but no one knows why the birds end up in Britain

Photograph: Ardea

The numbers of one of our more flamboyant yet mysterious birds are swelled by migrants this season. Duff Hart-Davis writes in praise of the woodcock.

This is the time of year when shooting men hope to come across that elusive and unpredictable rarity - the woodcock. You can go out and find a pheasant or a pigeon any day, but a woodcock is something else - a bird whose magie derives from its very evanescence.

The most fascinating thing about woodcocks is the way they silently come and go; one day there are none in a wood. and the next you may find several. Most country people reckoo they are migrants, and associate their arrival in England with the onset of harsh weather in the far north of Europe; it is well established that ice and snow drive the birds southwards in search of warmer climes, and that during their nocturnal journeys some are forced down by exhaustion, short of their ideal destination. This explains why they are sometimes found in apparently uncoogenial surroundings, such as the middle of a field of kale. A few old boys still speak of a "fall" of woodcocks, meaning that some have dropped in out of the sky during the night. I treasure the story of the Norfolk squire who, early this century, departed for a winter season at his club in London. leaving his gamekeeper George with instructions to inform him when the wood-

a letter which read, in its entirety: Hamed Sir

The kaks becam

No doubt the squire bastened home for when the woodcocks are in, they add enormously to the excitement of the day. From boyhood in the Chilterns I remember old Harry Brown, the keeper, letting out a tremendous roar of "WOODcock!" every time ooe was shoot, but they are delicious to cat, tasting like a pheasant that might have been without moving. lurking in a marsh: the slight fishy tang doubtless derives from their habit of feeding on earthworms.

They jump up with a clap of wings from under a bush, and, considering their rather heavy build, like a jumbo snipe, iink their way through the trees with astonishingly swift and frequent changes of direction.

Even if winter does swell the population with migrants, some woodcocks remain in Britain all year round, and their breeding habits are unique in several ways. On late spring evenings a male will launch into the form of display known as roding, during which he patrols his territory with long, circular flights just over the trees.

Back and forth through the dusk he goes, not dodging about as he would in the wood, but flying straight and fast, with heavy, owl-like wing-hears, sometimes in an oblong loop which may be half a mile from end to end, sometimes cocks arrived. In due course he received in a huge figure of eight. All the time he is turning his head from side to side and uttering two quite different calls: one a single, high-pitched squeak, the other a guttural urk, urk.

His mate, meanwhile, is oesting oo the ground, often at the foot of a tree, should they risk a transit of the North Sea If she has chosen a bed of beech leaves as a site, her wooderful camouflage marbling of dark brown, light brown and black - makes her almost impossible to pick out. It is said that during daylight she slowly rotates on the nest so as to keep her head away from the sun and prevent her eyes giving off any tell-tale glint that might betray her presence. Ccrbut over the tops of Rotation on a nest is something I have never witoessed. What I have seen is another peculiar habit ofteo dismissed as a fairy tale: a mother carrying a chick between her thighs. Ooe summer afternoon, as I walked quietly along a woodland ride, a woodcock hurst out of the undergrowth a few feet away, and I saw at once that there was something odd about her. Io flight she looked abnormally upright and elongated, so beavy that she could barely clear the brambles, Staring, I realised that she had a fluffy baby clamped between her knees. Having plopped it down oo a new site some 20 yards off, she made two return trips to collect the second and third of her Migration to Britain, however, remains the most curious facet of woodcock bebaviour. It makes perfect sense that the birds should bead south for Portugal, Spain, northern Greece and Turkey, to escape the oorthern winter, but why when they could travel more safely, and in easy stages, overland? (Experts assume that if strong south-westerly winds blow up, thousands must-drown.) A recent, fascinating suggestion is that the birds are still following the migralory routes pioneered by their ancestors millennia ago, before the North Sea existed, from the time when Britain was tainly woodcocks' eyes are enormous, still part of mainland Europe. Ringing and set very high on the sides of the bead bas shown that latter-day woodcocks re-- so high, in fact, that biologists believe turn to their winterlag and breeding They are hard to find and difficult to the birds can see not only all round them. grounds with astonishing fidelity - so perdaps our latter-day visitors steer by age old instincts, without realising that a potentially lethal expanse of sea lies ahead of them.

A story is told of the late Sir Charles Clore-less knowledgeable about country matters than the Norfolk squire - who used to bold grand pheasant sboots at Stype, his estate in Gloucestershire. One day, wheo he saw that the bag included a woodcock, he boomed at his gamekeeper, "I like them! We'll rear a thousaod of them oext year."

His enthusiasm was entirely misplaced. The whole point about woodcocks is that they cannot be reared artificially, like pheasants or partridges. They cannot be corralled or decoyed. On the cootrary, they go their own mysterious way, and so retain their magic.

NATURE NOTE

Oblivious of Mike Foster and his bill to ban hunting with hounds, foxes bave started their annual round of procreation - and a rackety business it is. Every night from one until after Christmas, dog foxes will patrol the woods and fields, announcing their presence with volleys of dry, staccato barks. Some males seem to be two-bark specialists, some three: "roff, roff, roff," they go, repeating the call every few minutes as they trawl through the landscape, often following the scent trail of a female that has come into season. The vixen does not answer from a distance; only when brought to close quarters does she give tongue with a blast of hideous, unearthly screams. The noise may be only that of copulation,

Christmas gifts for the green at heart

What do you give a nature lover for Christmas? Daniel Butler has a host of helpful suggestions.

The chances are that your family or friends already possess the best field guide or thermal gloves, while binoculars and walking-boots are beyond many budgets, Nil desperandum: there sive possibilities that enable you to make a gift to benefit more than the receiver.

animals. Prices generally start to join a seal watch. at £20 for a gerbil, kookaburra or black widow spider, running up to £6,000 for an Adoptions, London Zoo, Regent's Park, London NW1 4RY (0171-449 62621.

The Penzance But Hospital which you for the recipient of grasses and seruh. Unfortuyour gift) can sponsor named. nately they can never be eco-- est's barn lowls. These have long-term residents. A sum of nomic because they are al- been particularly bard hit by working bolidays on offer £15 will feed Earwig, a brown long-cared bat, for a year, while the donor's nominee gets an adoption certificate, a welcome pack and two "progress reports". Sponsors are also welcome to visit their charges and - in some cases -to handle them. Write to Cornwall WT, Freepost PY1774, Five Acres, Allet, Truro, Cornwall TR4

9DJ (01736 365687). For those with an aversion to is a host of relatively inexpen- bats, the trust runs seal sponsorship schemes. For £15 you can adopt a specific pun (£1tt for juniors) which gives you a cert-Take adoption schemes, for lificate, seal pack and sixexample. London Zon runs monthly undates; £30 provides such schemes for endangered a colour print and an invitation

Normally environmentalists blanch at the idea of sheep subsidies, but Suffolk Wildlife elephant. Contact Animal Trust has an entirely laudable scheme to help maintain its rare Speekle-faced Beulah flock. These are vital for the health of Sandlings Heath, cover the feed, shearing and veterinary bills. These range from £15 for a lamb to £50 for a ram. For more information contact Suffolk Wildlife Trust. Brooke House, The Green, Ashbocking, Suffolk 1P6 9JY (01473 890089).

You can also provide help out in the wild. Dormice, for example, are threatened almost everywhere, and specially constructed nest boxes can help halt the decline. For £7.50 Cheshire Wildlife Trust | Grebe House, Reaseheath, Nantwich CW5 6DG) will send you a cartificate for your own oumbered dormouse box, ao on occupancy. The Willshire Wildlife Trust (18 High St, Devizes, Wiltshire SN10 1AT for £ltl. scheme to help Braydon For- environment.

-01380 72567(1) does the same

lowed to graze only sparsely the loss of traditional farm and must over-winter indoors, outbuildings to residential so the trust offers packages to cooversions, and the scheme provides artificial nests on suitable farms. Unfortunately each box costs £30 to build and erect, and the project officer, David Picket, says the scheme has run out of money and would welcome docations to build further sites.

ways of providing food and shelter, bowever. The British Trust for Conservation Volunteers runs a tree-sponsorship scheme. For a donation of £17, volunteers will plaot the donor's choice of native tree. tagged with their name, and from theo on each year they will receive a commemorative card information pack and updates and be invited to a tree-planting event.

But this may be too passive for some. Those wanting to get their hands dirty may benefit from a BTCV break. These Alternatively, if birds are offer the chance to learn tradruns an adoption service for where they control course your passion, the trust ruos a itional skills while improving the throughout the year, spread across the whole of mainland Britain, ranging from hedgelaying to otter-bolt construction. The cost of sucb breaks is minimal - voluoteers are charged only for food and accommodation, which is often very basic - and prices start at £22 for a weekend and £40 for a week. Information on both There are more organic tree-plaoting and breaks is available from the BTCV at 36 St Mary's Street. Wallingford, 839766).

Oxon OX10 0EU (01491

Finally, don't forget that gardens and windowsills are miniature eovironments in their own right. Supplying food and shelter can provide help to dozens of creatures, oot to mention increasing humao pleasure. The RSPB, for example, has an extensive mailorder range that includes bird tables (starting at £20), nest boxes (£10.50) and feeders (£8). Cootact the RSPB shop at The Lodge, Sandy, Bedfordshire SG19 2DL (01767

How to order (0161) 431 6431 for enquiries and 24 hour credit card order service OR Fill in coupon quoting your Access/visa/ Mastercard number or send with crossed cheque/PO, NO CASH please, to:

INDEPENDENT SPIREA SHIROBANA OFFER, P.O. BOX 64, SOUTH WEST DISTRICT OFFICE, MANCHESTER M16 9HY Offer subject to availability and UK mainlan resders only. If you are not completely salled return within 7 days for a full refund.

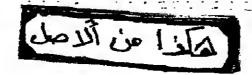

THE INDEPENDENT Joseph's Coat ... The shrub of many colours

From just £8.95 inc p&p

The Spirea Shirobana or Joseph's Coat is an amazing shrub which actually produces three different coloured lowers; red, pink and white. Joseph's Coat will flower en sse from June until October. The shruh will grow to a height of about 3ft and can be used as a very attractive and cover. A pack of three shrubs will cost just £8.95 inc p&p and produce a raised carpet of colour approximately 30 square feet in size. Or, if you need to cover a little more ground there is a pack of 6 shrubs available at just £14.95 including postage & packing.

Please send me Pack/s of 3 Spirea @ £8.95 per pack. inc.	ρēφ
Please send mePackle of 6 Spires @ £14.95 per pack inc p	δp
I enclose my cheque/PO (address on back) made payable to	:
Newspaper Publishing ING915, or please debit my Access/Vise/Mastercard account with the sum of £ My card number is:
	_

My card numb	lastercard account with the sum of £ er is:
五主
Please use BL0	OCK CAPITALS. Expiry date:
Name:(Mr/Mrs/	MissF4s]
Address:	·-  -
	Postcode
Signature
	EPENDENT SPIREA SKIROBANA OFFER LITH WEST DISTRICT OFFICE, MANCHESTER MISSE

CLASSIFIED

Not Antique

a standard unsurpassed this century by master 3 ranges to suit all lifestyle and income groups.

COMPUTER DESKS

& Uousual Antique style cabinets to hide comp

BRITISH ANTIQUE REPLICAS

717 9CHOOL CLOSE, QUEEN ELIZABETH AVE, BUEGESS HILL, (RETWEEN GATHER & BEGINNAL WEST SUSSEX EH15 9RX Mon-Sat 9 am - 5.30 pm. Tel: 01444 245577

The Original Breton Shirt

Scer 5(34"-36") M (38"-40") L (42"-41") XL (46"-41") XXL (50") Childrens sizes also available (22", 26", 26" and 28") @ £1 £00 inc p+p.

Chemics, PO's and Credit Cards to us 01560 485187 for, 01560 485195 Breton at DigZing Dest. IN9, Rivertond Mill, Stawarton, Aprillor KA3 SDH

The Breton Can

Made in France from quality

Sizes: 6% 6% 7 7% 7% 7% 7% 7% (1495 phs 61.55 pmp

BELGIAN CHOCOLATES

DELICIOUS GIFTS BY POST

500gms (1 lb); £11,95cm Port

1 Kilo 12 lbk £19.95 mc PSF)

☎ 01474 537237

JIGSAW PUZZLES MADE

FROM YOUR PHOTOS

DELIVERED IN 7 WORKING DAYS IT AN REGANT GIFT BOX

280 PIECES - 15"X11" - £13.99 inc p&p 120 PIECES - 15"X11" - £12.99 inc p&p 60 PIECES - 15"X11" - £11.99 inc p&p

60 PRCCS - 15"XII" - 211.99 inc pAg.
30 PRECS - 11"XII" - 24.99 inc pAg.
to order send any size photo tretomables and payment be.
ARTY-ZAN, Dept. (N7)
Fairholme Farm. 11 Creydon Lane.
Bartholme Farm. 11 Creydon Lane.
Tel: 01737 379 342
Full refund if not 100", satisfield

SMOKED .

2hi skeel ade.... . SPECIAL OFFER:

KIRKCUOBRIGHT DG6 4N

SALMON ➤

Hand made Belgian

ıny UK address.

The traditional French Fisherman's working shire. Made from 100% unbleached coston. So comfortable they're addictive We bought them on holiday I ill years ago and liked them so much we lelt obliged to share

ORIGINAL IRISH

GRANDFATHER SHIRT generations the CLESSE from his been a made and part of generation like on mural best and 100% brooked colors and described persishe CLESSES process according contents and described speakle and practical common and names.

NIGHTSHIRTS GLENESKE

The Grandfather Shirt Co Jept 052, 15 Hopefield Park, Poctoush 8756 t extending dining tables always in furniture also usually available

XXLXXXI ULW

Da bigadio

£24.95 Post Free. ACCESSATEASWITCH THE PROGRAMMENT THE PROGRAM

SLIPPERS WITHOUT THE ZZZZZZZZZ

FINE ANTIQUE

DINING TABLES

A good selection of 19th century mahogany

Berks
Library and writing 01488 638541/638361

We will endeavour to find the table you require

FAX: 0171 293 2505

Letting, Contract and

Interior Designers

Welcome

Re-Upholstery

Curtains and Divan Sets?

Certainly!

We Make Sofas and Sofa Beds See your Sofas and Chairs being made

By Craftsmen and Women Choose your Sofa or Chair and Fabric. Leave the rest to us.

Made to Measure Vast choice of fabrics. All leading Brand names. Sandersons, Monkwell, Osborne and Little, Liberty and many others. Open 7 days

We will beat any other price of a comparable quality Call the FACTORY SHOP at Poetstyle Ltd.

Unit I Bayford Street, Mare St., Hackney, London E8 3SE (Nr Well St.) Tel: 0181 533 0915 2 lines Fax: 0181 985 2953

Available in two sizes, medium to fit over boot sizes (4-7) and large to fit over boot sizes (8-11) in a choice of colours, blue or green. Buy now - Shutflers are only available direct from furtiones this Chairmas.

Turtle dirt trapper mats

Sluc, Green, Black/White, Fawn, Dark Grey, Seal Brown, Bla

Plus 12.95 P & P per mot. Aut nation backing for use on o rom Turtle Mat Co., 92a Kings Road, Kingston, Surrey KT2 5HT Tel: 0181 296 0366 H & CL TURTLE Fax: 0181 296 0360

Webbs Hanging Basket Ball Kit All wire re-scales plassic model basket

2 will cost only 217.92 for card userly $23.90p.

instructions. Plant and corpor not notable.

ji con be purchased for $11,95p. sec. conf.

Kit comes complete with prelitted liners, irrigation well, beary duty

At last - as seen al Garden ond Flower deer mat that really works! No muddy tooppiets or pawmarks on clean flaors and

BEST BUY UNDER £10 BBC Gardeners World Live 1997

SUSSEX

BASKETS

TRUG

Traditionally crafted from Willow and Sweet Chestnut. Prices from £12.50-£45.00 eg No 5 (18"x10") £24.00 Plus £4.50 p&p Send S.A.E. for details.

'THE TRUGGERY'

(PG), Coopers Croft, Herstmouceux, East Sussex BN27 1QL

01323 832314

Agriframes 24 HOUR DESPATCH ORDER NOW FOR CHRISTMAS Exette .

ORIGINAL SILHOUETTE BRACKETS AND BASKETS

Denaissance Gift Collections

TRADITIONAL & CONTEMPORARY STYLES

THE FINEST FOOD & WINE
CLASSIC CHRISTMAS HAMPERS VELVET WRAPPED PORT & STILTON OR CHAMPAGNE & CHOCOLATES EXCLUSIVE GIFTS FOR CLIENTS.
FRIENDS & FAMILY PROFESSIONAL SERVICE TO PROMOTE YOUR CORPORATE IDENTITY
WORLD-WIDE DISPATCH & HAND DELIVERY IN LONDON
CALL FOR A FREE BROCHURE CALL FOR A FREE BROCHURE

TEL: 0181 780 1560 OR FAN: 0181 780 0557

DAY GIFTS FROM £46.00 FOR AN INSTANT PURCHASE TEL 01283 575671 NR. LICHFIELD, STAFFORDSHIRE

ARS AMATORIA The Illustrated Book of Bottoms

96 pages of pictures and words; surprisingly explicit, engagingly witty and well-informed, to enlighten and amuse anyone with an interest in the past and present, the uses and variety, the delights and shades of the female bottom. A compact little book for your library's top shelf and definitely not for prudes.

Price £10.00. For further enquiries to: EPS, Dept IS8, PO Box 10645, LONDON SW10 92T FREEPHONE 0800 026 25 24 or Fax: 0171-244 8999 or order

THE Erotic Print Society

BEER FOR THE MAN WHO THINKS HE HAS EVERYTHING nalised Hand Crafted Be-Your unsque message printed on the label. No addition or processions persons from hope ORDER now for Unique Years Gill

IX Personne 11.95 Lugton Brewer Gill Steen

BRITISH SCHOOL BALLOONING Champagne Flights for the Experience of a Lifetimo Appensi Christmes CHerri for Gult Vesserom ☎ 01428 707 307

THE LONDON PHRENOLOGY COMPANY LIMITED and then be to the

16" to sui bees up to 4 019,59 inc. P&P 32" la sustines ones CASSING PLF exclusive (01233) 850214 TABLESAFE Fynefish Traditionally smoked on the shores of Loch Fync So theb Social Salmon in packs of short sides from Soz to 3th, 65 to GC. Other Smoked specialities Fractish Products I.

Oburthill, Torbett
Argyll PAZNESS
Extrusion Control
Fyne vish
Fyne vish
Fractish Control
Fractish Control

A high quality stainless steel product, ideal for automotive repairs, camping, hunting, fishing and other hobbles. The The set contains Priers with wire cutter Phillips head screwdriver Small and medium slotted screwdrivers Razor sharp knife Ruler, scraper and hook remover Bottle opener and large screwdriver FOR INFO TEL: 01624 617933 FAX 01624 617934 OR POST TO: FAIRWAY ELECTRONICS, PO BOX 322,

DOUGLAS IM99 2BY

SEND ND MONEY. Balloon Flight riends Family or College Over 200 Sites Nations For more information pleas

THE INDEPENDENT Win a Prize

In our Easy To Enter Christmas Competition

The Independent in association with is offering a special Christmas basket incorporating luxury food and wine every Saturday until 6th December in our Christmas Guide Competition. Every week the first correct postcard pulled out of the Christmas sack will win the special

How to Enter

There are five questions, numbered one to five. hidden amongsi the Christmas Gift Guide advertisements. Once you have found them, you must find the answers. These are located within the advertisements. Send your answers, together with your name, address and daytime telephone number on a postcard

Christmas Gift Guide Competition No. 13, Marketing Department, 19th Floor. The Independent, One Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 5DL

* DFFER ENOS 31st DECEMBER 1997 or until stocks are exhau MEPER T-SHIRTS Size XL. £16.99 White 100° cotton Off - paste Cat 11 E N22 & £1.95 er order. MA WERSTERE TEDDINGTON, MIDDX, TW11 9LL 11 0181-255-9926 24hrs

Recently addered this bust stands 16cm consist Radion Cines Ut analy, (1870-)

1974) milik populady known as Lenin.

Milet in students, historians, ballectors

Substitute of the Control of Showclear Ltd., The Old Bakery, 2

inche of the interest of the 20th Century.

$96695 This or $17 $59396

್ ಗೀಡಿ, cost from a Resstan original t ು

Super Gift Idea 2222

Phone, Post, Fax order as soon as possible to avoid disappointment Webbs 13d: Unit 2, 15 Station Road, Knebworth, Herts SG3 6AP. Tel: 01438 814620 (24 hr) Fax: 01438 815047

gift this Christmas who sho call for 12 gifts in 17

STAMP COLLECTIONS VALUATIONS & SALES

We offer our FREE valuation service, without obligation. If offection is bulky we will send a ralger to your home. We will give you a guaranteed sales figure for other Auction or Private Treaty Sale. Write or phone for brochure Pluusidge & Co (est 1898) PO Box 359, Chialehurst, Kest, luss send your 4 favourite photos (Sumbered, any stars and we will wint you a 1998 full colour calendar with 3 months to a page. 8x12 £9.50 or 12x17 £14.50 inc post. Photo Mouse Most - send any photo £12.00

Ad-lev Feag Theodesier Normands NN12 60J. Tel: 01327 BR7 GUA Tel: 0181 467 5110 FREE LINGERIE Calendars From Your Own Photos!

(1879-1467) Laborth Lobothoro Sonder (1979-1487) Folk (1989-1487) Edit (1974-1983) Formani Albertonia Angli (1888-1488) Erro Hartistonia Editoria (1888-1488) Erro Hartistonia Editoria Coombe Cottage Sen I pelusta Christalli bara fort imm Christalli bara fort imm Christalli Ride Hanta SP6 2PQ Tel: 01425 652482

400 kmi Bothe (2 % In presentation rack)

Will Farm Antiques

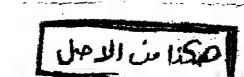

Leekhampstead,

Only 6 mins from J13 M4

369 Euston Road London NW1 3AR Web site:www.chess.co.uk 0171 388 2404 RETAIL SHOP OPEN 10am-6pm One call can solve many problems

Closing date for Competition No. 13 is Thursday 11th December 1997

on't look on't look
st bunge British Santa Care Care

C MAN

W to lose your

17

.

174

13/SPARE TIME

Don't look down, don't look up, just bungee

it's the ultimate virtual reality: falling without the bump. And it's terrifying. But bungee-jumping is not as challenging as it appears.

FAX:0171 293 250

Sofa Beds Ang make

Leave the territory

課題報要。Contract and MILTON BENEFIT $R_{VH^{*}(\sigma_{\mathcal{O}_{\mathcal{I}}})}$ $R_{e,Uph_{\mathcal{U}_{N},p_{m}}}$

Curamana and Divar Sec. Certainly!

> They'd have to pay me more than £50 to jump off there." The old boy from Yorkshire had a point. By normal standards, hurling yourself from the top of a crane to bounce around on an elastic band wouldn't be an obvious thing to choose to do, re-

> As I explained that you have to pay them the £50, another body came winging down. exclaiming: "Better than sex!" before pinging skywards on the rebound. The old cynic still wasn't convinced: "He can't be doing

> It may be fun, as thousands of jumpers have been proving for years, but it doesn't take a Casanova to know that the sex analogy simply can't be correct. OK, hungeejumping is a brief thrill, involving a mighty surge of adrenaline and ecstatic shouting, hut you do il upside down, al speeds of up to 100mph. Call me old-fashioned, but it's > ing, the idea haunts you. If you dither, it could be weeks of torture, the thought forcing its way in whenever there's a gap in the day, and time to frighten yourself. The

> Dwelling on the origins of hungee

the way they mean islanders lowers every year with vines

sage to manhood and to ensure a good yam harvest

In the yam-free world of commercial bungee-jumping, the vines are replaced with latex ropes un to which the jumper is tled, usually by the ankles. Cranes, towers and hridges can be jumped from, generally at heights of between 120ft and 300ft. The vital thing is that the drop is greater than the bungee at full stretch, plus a bit for luck, but that's all taken care of by the operator. You've got more important things to worry about, such as sheer terror.

Though more scientific than vine-jumping, bungee also has ritual elements. Being weighed, going through the "no back problems? no heart complaints?" routine is for real, but in the true spirit of the circus, every last ounce of atmosphere and buzz is wrung from the procedure, just in case you might start to feel, despite your nerves, that your money could have been better spent.

But that's cold feet for you. While waiting for the long crane ride, any number of plausible arguments go from your spinning head to your churoing stomach, not least that there's no sane, sensible reason for going ahead. The reality, once you've been weighed, jnined the queue, stepped into the cage - is that you've come all this way, paid your money - and lots of people are watching. You've got to jump.

And you do. Don't look down, don't look anywhere; don't think, don't breathe. Just 5-4-3-2-1-bungee. The first, fastest, highest drop is almost instantly over, moments of hollow free fall leaving you a few feet from the ground, pumping with adrenaline and gasping at the recognition that you're still alive. Now the real terror begins, as the elastic pulls you inexorably up, suspended in time and space, to hang once more, high in the sky, before plunging back towards earth. Finally your diminishing bounces subside to leave you helplessly dangling on the end of the rope and you're lowered down to exchange endless grins and even transatlantic whoops with other jumpers - a mixture of relief and something have jumped from more powerful that could have you feeling good for days.

It's a fantastic sensation. Many people immediately want to jump again, and tied to their some come back to become serial jumpers, ankles, as a trying every trick imaginable, from acrorite of pas- batic stunts to blindfold, fear-enhancing techniques. But for the majority, that's it: they there. Withoul any skills to leare or progress to make, why do it again? It's the ultimate fairground ride, though maybe safer, but wouldn't driving the roller-coaster be even better than laking a scary

The British Elastic Rope Sports Association, Bersa (01865 311 179), promotes bungee-jumping in the UK and ensures affiliated clubs operate within their strict code have to pull the parachute rip of practice; call for details of your nearest Bersa affiliated jump site.

has mobile rigs that operate all over the country, as well as the permanent site at Chelsea Bridge. Since 1992 more than member at a good party.

in the dark.

making organisation, began the American poet Robert Bly.

of the worst aspects of the

from his work with Blv.

first jump costs £50, subsequent jumps £35. Approximately one-third of their customers jump for charity, one third as a challenge (in some cases having been given "gift" jumps - it's more exciting than a book token). They categorise the final third as adrenatine junkies. Summer is the main season, though weekend jumps continue

Most UK jumping is from cranes, though the first jump was made from aficionados claim that jumping in impres- Better than sex? After a jump there's sive gorges such as New Zealand's Skipper's a mixture of relief and something Canyon adds something to the experience, more powerful that could have you hut a crane probably gives the most extreme feeling good for days sensation of exposure and height. Jumps have also been made from balloons, heli- Photograph: Peter Andrews/Reuters copters, cable cars and dams.

Clifton Suspension Bridge, in 1979, Some change and to wear clothing that's tight head. People looking for an additional thrill can also try catapulting - reverse bungee - which is exactly as it sounds.

writes Eric Kendall.

gardless of any inducements offered.

it right'

not my idea of a roll in the hay.

From the moment you think about jumplonger you leave it, the worse it gets.

doesn't help: a woman on the Vanuatu Islands in the Pacific fled from her marauding husband by climbing a tree. Realising she was trapped, she tied a vine to her ankle and jumped. Meanwhile her husband didn't tie a vine to his ankle, and jumped too, only to overtake her just before hilting the ground in a terminal way. For the woman, proto-bungee was also better than sex, but not these days, Since are both the best and the

The minimal danger utable operator) and zero deeper or in any way influence the outcome: thing is certain about bungee, whatever any-qualifications required

(when jumping with a repworst of hungee. You don't cord, fly the hang-glider, dive a sack of potatoes can hungee-jump. If one one tries to tell you, coming to a sticky end

Taking the plunge

The UK Bungee Club (0171-720 9496) 100,000 people have jumped with them. The throughout the year.

Safety records of reputable companies are impressive. The only special requirements for the jumper, beyond basic good health, are to empty pockets of loose enough not to come straight off over your

How to lose your inhibitions - dramatically

it was a backwards jump into the unknown, but for longthon Stebbings a weekend 'mytho-drama' event was both rewarding and liberating.

Within half an hour of starting for which participants were the Wild Dance weekend I felt way out of my depth. I found myself shifting from one foot to the other as the rest of the group (an intriguing mix of ages, genders and lifestyles) thrashed, rolled, cried and cursed to a tribal rhythm thumped out on a massive drum. If I shut my eyes the beat did become a hypnotic, but I wasn't going to "express" myself for anybody. This was a birthday present. I had asked for an experience I would not normally choose. and my wife had presented me with Wild Dance Events' brochure and suggested "Vision & Regeneration in Winter's Tale". at the Globe Theatre. This was described as "a weekend of mytho-drama". What attracted me was the prospect of hamming it up with Mark Rylance and Richard Olivier, two leading lights behind the rebirth of Shakespeare's Globe.

As the course developed il barely able to think about after is a way of using a dramatic text to explore one's own emotional condition. Each person, obviously, gets something different out of the experience. Our dramatic text, The Winter's Tale, is an archetype of emotional stagnation and regeneration asked to bring two suitable symbols. So from the depths of Oxfordshire I headed for London with some horse manure (my symbol of stagnation) and an egg from my daughter's chicken (regeneration).

The first day concentrated on the tragic first half of The Winter's Tale, and it finished with a requiem chant and the option to present an offering to an altar for something we had lost. I still fell silly swaying and singing in a central African dialect. But after 10 minutes - you need patience before the spirit turns up - I began to feel a strong urge to present my egg to my long-dead father. The more my inhibitions bridled at the prospect, the more I felt compelled to walk alone, in front of all those people, and make a private, personal gesture to someone I had been unable to communicate with in life and became clear that mytho-drama his death. I found myself addressing an issue I had huried for 10 years, clearly and sincerely. It was like an unblocked sink draining away at last. The next morning began with Richard Olivier leading us on a journey through the elements and seasons as a mythic essment of our lives at different stages. Again, I fell that to view my condition as static or dynamic, male or female, was pop psycho-babble. Apparently I was stuck in the autumn of a static male; in other words, I was a crusty old hugger like King Lear, who needed a good shove towards the next stage - "dynamic female". I had to "become" Perdita. heroine of The Winter's Tale. As a classically repressed Englishman I like to camp it up with the best of them; but turning into a 16-year-old shepherdess who is really a lost princess wasn't so compelling. However, soon we were moving to the rhythm of the drum and I found myself drawn to Perdita's wintry domain. Some lilies on the altar caught my attention and as I sniffed them in my ahandonment, red pollen stained my nose. Before long I had daubed my face and arms and began behaving in the way nne can't reponent of workshops for men I spent the rest of the day and women and runs many events - from evenings to weeklooking like a savage. I braved lunch at a Southwark pub, and long retreats, for men, women, then threw myself into the next mixed groups, fathers and sons, ritual. This culminated in being mothers and daughters. The meled blindfold by Richard Olivier dia include poetry, story-telling, music, drumming and dance. along passages and up stairs. I was taken through a door and Every event is unique, adapting felt the wind on my face. I realto the needs and personalities of these taking part. Many of the ritised we were on the roof, seven floors up. I was led up ladders uals are chosen or even inventand round corners - I heard ed as the event happens.

traffic far below and trains on There is no connection with the London Bridge line. Then any religion or New Age prac-I was told to fall backwards. tice, so it is a comfortable place I expected to he caught alfor rational scepties and fundmost immediately, but I conamentalists. You don't need tinued falling into space for experience or talent to take part, what seemed a delicious and liband at no point are you expected erated age. Then hands reached to reveal anything about yourout to stop me. I suppose the self. Great emphasis is placed on physical and emntional essence of it was to be willing to take a risk - literally a leap safety, the leaders remain detached from proceedings to en-Wild Dance, a non-profit sure everyone's well-being. Next year their events will inseven years ago after Richard clude a weekend for fathers and Olivier organised an event for sons, two rites of passage weeks and mytho-drama weekends with Richard Olivier and Mark author of Invi John and doven of the mythic movement. A Rylance, based on the Globe's veteran of the best and victim productions.

men's movement, Olivier de-For next year's programme, call veloped Wild Dance Events Wild Dance Everus (0171-813 4260), or write to BCM, Box 8059, London WCIN 3XX. It is now Britain's leading ex-it was built to keep the Picts at bay, but now it has become a promenade for walkers ...

The Empire hikes back

Hamish Scott patrols Hadrian's Wall.

Old frontiers are thought-provoking. Rivers, hills and bedgerows that once defined a nation's territorial identity revert to being harmless features of a larger landscape once the winds of history have changed. Flint arrowheads and iron swords, bullet-cases and rejected visa applications may lie buried in the soil, but the line defended with such passion has vanished, like some long-dead tom-cat's urine trail, and can scarcely be detected on the ground.

In Northumberland, however, one of the most significant of frontiers in the history of Europe still exists. In AD 122 the Emperor Hadrian ordered the construction of a wall that would define the farthest limit of the Roman empire. Perhaps even at the time there were questions raised about some details of the project, such as the need for gateways every mile, even on the steepest cliff, but orders were obeyed and within eight years the wall had been completed. Some 20ft in height, 10ft wide and 76 miles long, with garrisons sufficient for 111,000 men. it stretched in an unbroken line! from the North Sea to the Solway Firth and was so superbly huilt that long stretches still remain virtually intact, a promenade for hikers following the footsteps of legionary patrols. We began our own patrol at Steel Rig. from a tree-lined car park in a bleak expanse of Border moorland, Taking a footpath to the south, we immediately reached the wall, reduced by plunder to ebestheight hut still a massive harrier of wellcut stone aligned with military precision along the jagged edge of an escarpment. Our route lay to the left, eastwards through the grazing lands of the Votadini, a Celtic tribe whose views, presumably, were not consulted in the planning stages

Roman civil engineers took a virile aititude to contours. Following the whinstone ridge, the path beside the wall dips and climbs along the basalt crags with no concessions to civilian knees. Legionaries could march for 20 miles loaded down like mules, and then, before they had their dinner, build themselves a camp that would last 2,000 years. Few modern visitors would care to haul a single block of stone up any of the steeper slopes.

Coming to our first milecastle, we rested to admire the view. To the north the ground dropped steeply from below the gateway, with rough, uncultivated pasture stretching to the conifer-clad hills of Kiel-

The southern view, towards the Pennine moors, was equally as desolate, and imagination was required to visualise the roads and farmsteads, garrisons and settlements that formed the Roman landscape. Two tattooed walkers nodded to us in a friendly manner, but there was no sign of hoslile Picts, so we continued our patrol above a reed-fringed loch, through a pretty cliff-side wood of rowan, hazel and Scots pine and on past a lonely farmhouse in the lee of Hotbanks Crags. Despite the setting there were no signs advertising Teas or Bed & Breakfast. Northumbrian hill-farmers, even on well-trodden routes, seldom fraternise with hikers.

The route grew husier approaching Housesteads, the wall's most popular attraction. The excavated fort is a ghost town of low, ruined walls that housed a garrison from far-flung corners of the empire. There's an impressive villa that was bome to the commanding officer. harracks, stores and even a small bospital, but the most poignant symbol of the Pax Romana is a corridor that once contained a row of cosy seats huilt over a drain. If any soldier ever questioned the benefits of Roman life. his doubts were soon settled in the known world's last latrine.

Having dutifully paid our entrance fee at the museum, we carried on for half a mile to a stile across the wall at King's Wicket. The linear nature of the frontier does not provide many opportunities for decent circuits, but from here a pleasant footpath loops back to Steel Rig.

It's a lonely route across rough grassland grazed by sheep and shaggy Galloway beef cattle, leading through a small plantation and on past an old lime kiln. Agricultural improvers in the 18th century converted upland farmers to the beer was too weak for the redcoats, and benefits of quicklime with a zeal not seen since the Romans introduced the Votadini to hot haths. High above us to the left, the wall appeared as a spine of stone surmounting the cliff edge. Distant voices could be heard, faint enough to sound like

Wearily returning to the car park, having travelled for eight miles and 18 centuries, we headed off for lunch. The Twice Brewed Inn was built for soldiers working on the military road that General Wade constructed to protect the British empire from Jacobite harbarians. Apparently the required a second brew. Our Marstons was, however, strong enough and very welcome, while Sunday lunch, though scarcely rivalling the roast swan stuffed with peacock of Lucullus, was substantial, and cost just £3.95.

Steel Rig is signposted off B6318 Chollerford-Greenhead road, opposite the information centre near the Twice Brewed Inn. From the National Trust car park at Steel Rig, follow the footpath sign to wall, Turn left along line of wall and follow way-marked right-of-way to House steads. • From Housesteads, continue along the southern (right-hand) side of the wall for half a mile, to King's Wicket.

 Cross the stile and bear left along the footpath over grassland to a small plantation. Follow the path through it and across Pennine Way to a lime kiln.

From the kiln, continue straight ahead along a faint path for half a mile, then bear left along a track towards Flotbanks Farm. Turn right over a stile before a farm gate and follow a way-marked path across fields to return to the car park. Map: Ordnance Survey Landrunger 86

e garden

indsome p

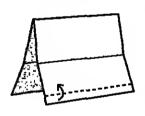

GAMES

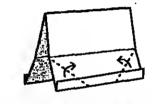

BAWN O'BEIRNE RANELAGH DON'T JUNK IT - USE IT

More origami this week - a credit-card case designed by Humiata Huzita, who is a physics professor in Padua.

paper. Fold it in half, bringing the two shorter edges together. Then fold both free edges to the crease in the middle and unfold again. Now fold up a small hem on each side as shown below. Fold the corners in to the crease in the middle. Do this on both

Next, fold up again along the crease. Leaving these folds in place, unfold the top fold (the first one you made) and turn the paper over, then rotate to leave a short edge at the top. Fold the top down to make a hem. You will notice two into the four pockets.

BOOK OF THE WEEK WILLIAM HARTSTON

Did you know that if you measure the circumference of your head in inches and divide by π, then round to the nearest eighth, you get your hat size? Did you know that the millionth digit of π is 1, or that the 360th digit and the two on each side of it read "360"?

I learned these marvellous pieces of information from a new book. The Joy of π t Allen Lane, £12.99), by David Blatner. The major part of this book is a history of man's quest to achieve ever more accurate approximations to the ration between the circumference and diameter of a circle. It is the story of geniuses and obsessives. from such great mathematicians as Newton and Euler, both of whom made significant contributions to the theory of π (indeed it was Euler who was the first to call it by the name of the Greek letter for p), to modern-day \u03c4-hunters such as the Chudnovsky brothers, who calculated 8 hillion digits of m in 1996, and Kanada and Takabashi who extended the record to over 51 billion digits (bis year.

The book is heautifully designed to include the first million digits. The perfect Christmas gift for anyone fascinated by mathematics.

PANDORA MELLY GAMES PEOPLE PLAY

Rowley Leigh, 47, chef at Kensington Place restaurant, London W8

Nine years ago, before I started playing, I thought golf was desperately suburban - a game for boring people in car-coats - but now I absolutely enjoy it. I know the people who play are awful, but it doesn't demerit what used to be quite a civilized game.

It's a nice walk, and you can play entirely against yourself. The whole point is to have an inner calm - very Zen. because you can't really control how you feel or how you're going to play. Anyone who plays competitively against other people is completely mad.

Proper golf is a good country game, and it doesn't matter how bad you are - at least once in a round you're going to hit a shot as good as Nick Faldo or Seve Ballesteros. And when you do it's sheer exhibaration.

My partners bave a sort of team called Hack in the Bush Club, and we all cheat like hell by giving each other free shots. If you muff your drive you get another go. We do stretch the rules a little bit, as I quite often miss the hall completely.

I like to play on Sunday afternoons in Deauville, where it is incredibly difficult to get on the course. There's always a huge crowd milling round, waiting for their teetime, which is the allotted six-minute span to start off. When I eventually got on last time. my first ball hit a barn door. There was a huge clattering hang, and anybody who hadn't actually been watching knew what had happened. But I'm so bad that I'm impervious to humiliation.

I play on Wimbledon Common, and whenever I'm about to make a shot, I'll always hear someone in the background screaming "Come here. Rowley!" which is incredibly off-putting. Ever since Eastenders, everybody's called their dog Rowley.

From Wimbledon Common, take the district line to High Street Kensington, and then it's n pleasant walk up Kensington Church Street to the delights of the Kensington Place Resinurary and bar.

CHESS: WILLIAM HARTSTON

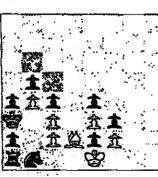

We have two problems for you today, with two things in common. The first is that they are both help-mates - which means that both sides co-operate. to reach a position in which Black is mated - and the second is something you will not recognise until you have solved them both:

The first position is a helpmate in four: Black moves first and both sides conspire to reach a position in which White's fourth move gives mate. This was first shown to me on a long train journey, and it kept me happity inhiriated for about threequarters of an hour. I spent ages trying to checkmate the black king on e7, but first there's the problem that Leb puts White in check, and then there's the other problem of leaving e8 vacant if the king moves to e7.

My next idea was to get the king to d8 and queen to e8, while White's moves are Bxa7, Bxb8. Kh6 and Bc7. But how do the black king and queen swap places in four moves?

The answer Johvious once you've seen it) is very elegant: 1.c6 Bxa7 2.Qb6+! Kxb6 3.Kd8

Kc5 4.Kc7 Bb6 mate. The way White's pieces each dance forward one step on the diagonal, then skip back to occupy their original squares. gives considerable charm to the composition.

I do not know who composed the first position, but this one is by Leon Loewenton and is a help-mate in five. If it were White's move, he could play Bc1 and it would be over, but Black has no waiting move that ters him do it. What we need to do is somehow spend four moves coming back to much the same position, but with White to Here's how it is done: 1.Kb2 Bc1+ 2.Kxc3 Bb2+ 3.Kxb4 Be3+ 4.Ka3 Bd2 and now 5.b4! Bel mate! In the first position it was White's king and bishop that retraced their steps. In this case both the hlack king and white bishop danced round in complete circles. The backtracking is what makes these things so difficult to solve.

CONCISE CROSSWORD

Gatekeeper (6) Roar (6) Bounce back (7)

Group of singers (5) Scented powder (4) Yellowish pigment (5)

17 Fixative used by glaziers (5) 18 Linear measure (4) Firework (5)

23 Best (7) 24 Convent superior (6) 25 Makes amends (6)

Function (7) Run with ball at one's feet (7) Happen again (5)

Planet (7) Deluge (5) Weapon [5]

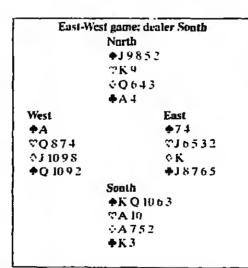

Schooling (9) Nonsense (7) 15 Flower (7) 16 Pharmacist (7)

19 Written composition (5) 20 Guardsman's hat (5) 21 Declare (5)

Solution to yesterday's Concise Crossword:

ACROSS: 1 Hobble, 4 Legato (Obbligato), 7 Emollient, 9 Help, 10 Gull, 11 Egged, 13 Phoney, 14 Runner, 15 Sordid, 17 Pedfar, 19 Eaves, 20 Trot, 22 Gear, 25 Magic wand, 24 Facing, 25 Tetchy, DOWN: I Hush up. 2 Bungs, 3 Eulogy, 4 Loiter, 5 Gong, 6 Oxler, 7 Elbow room, 8 Tunnelled, 11 Eerie, 12 Dupes, 15 Set off, 16 Daning, 17 Pecwit, 18 Rarchy, 21 Taxi, 22 Gnat.

BRIDGE: ALAN HIRON

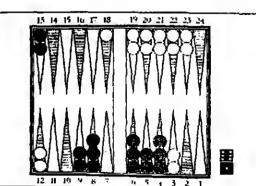

This deal was originally set as a problem, but it is not just a question of spotting an answer - I want you to find the two solutions.

Perhaps the bidding went: one spade - four spades, and west leads the jack of diamonds. Dummy plays low and the king appears. Over 10

The ohvious approach is to win and play trumps, but now west takes his ace and continues with the ten of diamonds. East ruffs the queen if it is played, and there are stiff two diamond tricks to be lost. The "official" solution was to let the king of diamonds hold. Can you see the difference? When west gets in with the ace of spades, he can give his partner a diamond ruff, but it is only a losing diamond - south still bas the ace and queen of diamonds intact to make

And the alternative? Well, south can still recover even if he wins the first trick with his acc. He eliminates both hearts and clubs first before leading a trump. West wins, and the queen of diamonds is ruffed away by east. However, this leaves east on lead with no safe exit and either a heart or a club from him gives declarer a ruff and discard and his tenth trick.

BACKGAMMON: CHRIS BRAY

As I strolled between the boards of the weekly tournament at the Double Fives [DF] Club I spotted this position where The Doven - George Sulimirski had a 61 to play with the score at double match point.

Trivial, I thought. He must make the full prime by playing 13/7, 8/7. Even it his opponent hits with a 1 he is likely to stay on the bar while his opponent's home beard will self-destruct. Even if Black is unfortunate enough to enter immediately after being hit he will still have a full prime versus a 5-prime. If in the original position The Doyen plays something like 8/2, 6/5 then he runs a number of risks; losing the race to a welltimed set of double fours; having a man on his midpoint his as he hrings home his men; and having difficulty clearing his ourside points. By making his barpoint now he avoids all these problems.

Meanwhile The Doyen continued to ponder. We don't keep records at the DF, but it is reckoned that he last felt a voluntary shot at the time of the Suez erisis. True to form, after another minute's thought he duly played 8/2, 6/5. Nothing exciting happened for the rest of the game and he easily won both game and match. Intrigued, I analysed the position using Jellyfish. The results surprised me. The two plays lead to an identical winning percentage (75 per cent). The advantages of making the bar-point are offset by the times that White bits the blot and goes on to win. The lesson is that two plans can be equally valid. Don't assume, as I did, that the obvious move is neressarily the best.

Incidentally, if Black had already doubled, making the bar is hest as this leads to winning more gammons -But this factor is irrelevant at double match point.

مكذا من الاعل

15/GARDENING

Pride of Cambridge drawings from the Fitzwilliam Museum (now part of a collection published by Cambridge University Press). Far left, French School, 17th century, Bluebell and dragonfly; tup row from left, Pieter Withoos' foxglave and ornamental flowers by Thomas Robins the Elder: bottom row from left, Daturz rossi ov Augusta Innes Withers and Michiel van Huysen's Flower in a Chinese Yase

The gardener's handsome prints treasures.

Rare plant drawings: succulent kitchen vegetables; gorgeous antique plants: Anno Pavord offers a Christmas books selection.

$44.7°

150

Tar.

ख्य-१-- ∵

51 - ·

4

微电压

i The w

Br. Br.

4/2 建等。

المستخرجة ger series in

2 1 · · · ·

100 mm

STATE OF THE STATE

87.7.2.2 · · ·

4 mg 15 1 1 2

2-40 Tes

. .

The worst Christmas present I ever had was a pair of insoles for my wellington boots: practical, without a doubt, necessary even, given the fact that blood regularly forgets to visit the distant lands below my knees. But how dreary that present was. And, unfortunately, the person who gave it to me was around when I was unwrapping it. "Gosh," f said, forcing my mouth into a more than usually hideous rictus of a smile. "How very useful." The donor looked pleased.

But what he didn't realise was that usefulness comes very low on my list of priorities. Presents are treats. They don't come round very often and I like them to be deeply unuseful things that I would never think of huying for myself. That's why hooks make such good presents. The element of treat is there, but there is the added relish of matching book to person.

Top of my Christmas present list (if I didn't already bave it) would he the beautifully printed collection of Flower Drawings (Cambridge University Press, £11.95) put together and annotated by David Scrase, keeper of paintings, drawings and prints at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge. The Fitzwilliam has an astonishing drawings. More than 100 oil paintings (including work by Brueghel and Jan van Huysum) and 900-plus drawings were bequeathed to them in 1973 after the death of Major Henry Broughton, of Anglesey Abbey in Cambridgeshire, who had spent a lifetime amassing these

Many of the drawings are bound in albums and are rarely on view at the museum. So this hook gives us a chance to see images that are not only luscious, but also unfamiliar. It's touching, too, in days when the garden presents nothing more riveting to the eye than banks of soggy leaves, to gaze at an image as ravishing as Pieter Withoos's foxglove, painted in the second half of the 17th

Although the foxglove must then have been as familiar a wild flower as it is today, you rarely see them in flower studies. Perhaps the reason this was carefully recorded on vellum, the watercolour highlighted with touches of gum arabic, is that it is not an ordinary, purple kind of foxglove, but a soft, enchanting pink. It is exactly the colour of the strain we now know as 'Apricot'. Was this perhaps the first time a foxglove of such a colour had been seen? Was this why Withoos painted it with such care that 300 years on, you can still feel the velvety softness of the spotted gloves climbing up the

Like all the best experts, He never writes about any-introduction to the book sets in place the great names of flower painting in Europe, such as Ehret and Redoute, but the treats come from his intimate knowledge of lesser-known painters such as the Dietzsch sisters, who worked in Nuremberg at the end of the 18th century. Nuremberg and London were the two most important centres of botanical art at that time, German artists benefiting particularly from the patronage of the rich physician, Christoph Jakob Trew, Barbara Dietzsch's pale iris, glowing luminously against a dark background, is a triumph. The book is arranged chronologically, starting with images from medieval manuscripts and a Dutch Book of Hours, where pimpernels and heartsease are scattered in the margins of the manuscript. It finishes with the imposing flowers of Magnolia campbellii, grown at Kew and painted by the Australian artist Margaret Stones in 1989. I was glad to see that Nicolas Robert (1614-1681), whose fabulous watercolours on vellum I first saw at the Fitzwilliam Museum. is well represented in this collection. Now I can look at his ou-tulips every day. Feeding the soul is the great luxury of heing alive, but you need to look after the stomach, too. For that, I'd choose Christopher Lloyd's Gardener Cook (Frances Lincoln, £20).

trageous red-and-white-striped

ing with deceptive lightness. His hand experience, and is as un-flower." My copy is already compromising about excellence in the kitchen as he is in his garden at Great Dixter, Sussex. Hc does his own cooking, in case there's any one out there about to say, "Oh, well it's all very well

> That means the recipes can be borrowed by anyone who has an equal love of good, fresh food, but also has 100 other things to do in a day as well as cook. I like them, too, because Mr Lloyd, having flourished all his life on lashings of cream and hutter, sees no reason, in his seventies, to give them up. We all have to die, and, like him. I am happier to die from a surfeit of fresh Jersey cream than (which is more likely) in a car crash on the M3. So picnty of double cream in the leek tart (p130), double helpings of double cream with marinated of the stuff in duck stewed with green peas (p152). The text, accompanied by Howard Sooley's succulent photographs, covers the growing of fruit and vegetables as well as their treatment in the kitchen. Again, you know you are in the presence of a man who has done all he is writing about. On parsnips: "Sow in quiet weather (otherwise the winged seeds take off)." On quince: "Pick the mature, fresh fruit as late as you dare, but watch out for the depredations of brown rot fungal patches." On fennel: "Late-maturing crops have been among my most successful, as there is less figs (p47), and liberal quantities spattered with mud and melted hutter. That is a potent sign of its worth.

I first came across The Essential Earthman through an American friend, who sent me a copy from the States. It's a collection of pieces by the late Henry Mitchell, who for more than 20 years was gardening correspondent of the Washington Post. Now the book has been reprinted by Bloomsbury (£12.99) as one of the latest in their admirable series of gardening classics.

Like Mr Lloyd. Mr Mitchell has decided views and a trenchant way of putting them over. "Marigolds gain enormously in impact when used as sparingly as ultimatums," he writes. And "compared to gardeners. I think it is generally agreed that others understand very little about anything of consequence." The "generally agreed" is typical, It's a phrase he often uses to preface some outrageous piece of special pleading. Collections such as this. which you can drop in and out of, make ideal bedtime books. Mr Mitchell restores sense where there has been much gardening silliness. A huge fuss, for instance, has been made over the last couple of years about plants that are potentially harmful. The outcome will be that soon we shall be banned from growing them. Here is Mitchell on colchicums: "Some people get upset by poisonous plants, yet those of us who are not forever gnawing on flowers need not be ple accept that war, automobiles plants are here. Having prevand power mowers are ordinary hazards, but begin to fidget if there is a colchicum somewhere. as if it might attack or poison one when dozing." Hurray! David Stuart's interest is in the background and history of the plants we use in our gardens and his most recent book. Gardening with Antique Plants, has been gorgeously produced by Conran Octobus, £25, Pinks poppies, peonies, marigolds, iously run his own nursery. Dr Stuar is as good on the practical aspects of growing these plants as he is on their history. The history of gardens and plants is still the most undervalued aspect of our past. Catch up with Mavis Batev's Regency Gardens (Shire Publications, £5.99), which is at the same time scholarly and concise. Then drool over Vivien Russell's pictures, in Edith Wharton's

David Scrase wears his learn- thing of which he has not first- urge for the plants to run up to deterred. It is startling that peo- musk roses - all the must-have Italian Gurdens (Frances Lincoln, £25).

Finally, persuade someone to give you a copy of The Good Gardens Guide 1998, edited by Peter King (Ebury Press. £14.99). It's an invaluable refcreace to a thousand gardens. most of them in Britain, with a scatter for Channel-hoppers in France. Belgium and The Netherlands. With this in hand. in the doe days after Christmas. you can plan the gallivanting to

THE INDEPENDENT Photograph Offer

As a special offer, you can order any of these best-selling colour photographs by Independent and photographers at independent on Sunday the special rate of £15 each, or 2 for £25, or 3 for £35

12" x 9" prints

Pheasant by Brian Harris

Frosted Rose by Brian Harris

Independent/Independent on Sunday Photograph Application Form Please send me: Jantar Mantar Observatory Pheasant T Frosted Rose I enclose my cheque, made payable to The Independent, Postcode Tel. no. Please complete in block capitals and send to: Readers Photographs, The Independent, I Canada Square, London E14 5DL

CUTTINGS

Gillian Simmill, of Dorrington, near Shrewsbury in Shropshire, wrote asking for advice about using polythene under gravel areas, to suppress weed growth: "I intend to have gravel walks beside flower borders, across the front of my cottage, and also a gravelled area under a winter cherry, through which I hope to grow small spring bulbs. Obviously, I won't lay polythene where the bulbs are to grow. The paths will not be heavily used, as there will be paving on the other sides of the borders. I want to use gravel, partly to keep costs down and also to vary the textures of the hard surfaces."

By the time the hiatus caused by my recent three-week holiday was over, Mrs Simmill had answered her own question, laying plastic sheeting called Nortene under the gravel of her paths. It's best laid on top of sand, to give a smooth hed for il to sit on. Mrs Simmili used 20/10mm gravel. heavier than the pea gravel that we used recently on our sitting-out area. This is a sensible grade for paths, where gravel may kick up. Nortene, says

Mrs Simmill, is not easy to find, but Agralan sell a black material called Permalay, which can be used in a similar way. A pack of Permalay 1.6m wide and 6m long costs £9.95. An economy roll, the same width but 50m long, costs £62.95. For details call 01285 860015.

Whichford Pottery is offering a minimum discount of 10 per cent off all its traditional handthrown clay garden pots at a series of pre-Christmas sales. Some pots are half price. Bargains (as well as tea, coffee, home-made soup and cake) are on offer today and tomorrow (9am-5pm) at Whichford Pottery, Whichford, near Shipston-on- Stour, Warwickshire (01608 684416) and at The Hop Shop, Castle Farm. Shoreham. Kent, which is open from 10am-5pm.

The River Parrett Trail Project in Somerset arose from an unusual partnership between farmers, environmentalists, river agencies and local craftsmen, with the aim of interpreting and exploiting (in the best sense of the word) the strange and particular landscape of the Somerset Levels. Over the winter and spring, a series of 10 workshops has been set up in this heart uf Somerset's willow-growing area. This weekend, Clare Wilks demonstrates how to make live willow seats for the garden. The workshop will be repeated over the weekend of 24-25 January (closing date for applications, 19 December). On 21-22 March, the sculptor Serona de la Hey will show how to create willow sculptures (closing dute for applications, 20 February). The workshops cost from £125 to 155 per person. The package includes a full day's tuition, all materials, coffee, sandwiches, dinner in a local pub. B&B at a local pub or farm and a day's exploration of the watery Somerset Levels. For more information, send a stamped, addressed envelope to Ros Marchant, Red Cottage, Stowell, Sherborne, Dorset DT9 4PD (01963 370413).

SANDOWN

HYPERION 12.50 Buckhouse Boy 2.30 Klairon Davis 3.05 Potter's Gale 1.25 Friendship 1.55 Direct Route 3.40 Diego

GOING: Chase course - Good (Good to Soft in places); Hurdle course - Good to Soft (Good in places).

■ Right-hand course; seven testing tences along back straight.

■ Right-hand course; seven testing tences along back straight.

■ Course is on A307, 4m S of Kingston, Esher station (service from London, Waterloo) adjoins course, ADMUSSHON: Club £16, Jurior Club (17 - 21yrs) £14; Grandstand & Paddock £11; Park enclosure £4, CAR PARIC £2 in members (More Lane), remainder free.

■ LEADING TRAINERS: D Nicholaon 22-75 (293%), I Gifford 17-27 (134%), J Old 10-38 (283%), N Henderson 8-79 (101%), O Sherwood 7-39 (179%), M Pipe 7-44 (589%).

■ LEADING JOCKEYS: R Durrecody 22-81 (272%), A Maguire 9-77 (247%), A P McCoy 17-59 (889%), G Bradley 9-78 (178%), M A Ritzgerald 8-92 (87%), D Bridgwater 6-31 (194%).

■ FAVOURITIES: 120-314 (882%).

■ LINKERED FIRST TIME: None.

12.50 EWELL CHASE (CLASS B) £10,000 added 3m 110yds Penalty Value £6,840

36-F5 FOODBROKER STAR (#) (C) (Food Broters Ltd.) J Giford 7 ti 10 ________ P Hide S3F-RJ AARDINOLF (14) (CD) (SF) (Latly Camilla Dempsiar) C Brooks 6 ti 7 ______ G Bradley S7F-P BUCKHOUSE BOY (28) (The Beavity Boys) D Nicrobson 7 ti 7 _______ D Maguire 2.11-1.U FRAZER ISLAND (14) (00) (DF 6 Alexander) R Rowe 6 ti 5 ________ D Bridgenster 3-ti F1 BYMBOL OF SUCCESS (15) (D) (N OT Roong Syndicate) D Williams 6 ti 10 like 5 Duruck U4323- THERMAL WARRIDR (199) (The Kentsch Menk J Old 8 to 10 _______ C Liewellyn - 6 declared - - C Lignediyn - - 6 declared - - C Lignediyn - - BETTING: 5-2 Aardwolf, 3-1 Frazer Island, 7-2 Symbol Of Seccess, 11-2 Buckhouse Boy, 8-1 Foodbroker Star, 14-1 Thermal Warrior broker Star, 14-1 Thermal Warrior 1968: Aardwolf 5 10 10 G Bradiev 7-2 (C Brooks) 4 ran

1.55 HENRY VIII NOVICE CHASE (Grade 2) (CLASS C4 A) £20,000 added 2m Penalty Value £12,560

BETTING: 9-4 Space Trucker, 7-2 Hoh Warrior, 4-1 Direct Route, 11-2 Chief's Song, 13-2 Hurriosne Lamp, Queen Of Spades, 16-1 Crack On 1996: Muligan 6 11 D A Maguire 4-6 tev (D Nicholson) 3 ran

FORM GUIDE
Champion Hurde third SPACE TRUCKER had jumped in fine style until blundering and unshipping four fences out on his tending bow in the race Queen Of Spades bear Di-nect Route (7to better here) a neck at Cheherham three weeks ago Jessica Harring-ton's charge went on to open his chasing account all Haydock a week ago and while this is lougher even though he goes unpenalised, his classic can see thin through ill looks one of the bottest makes the tender of the comment of the tender of t of the hottest povice chases of the season so far, with Crack Dr. and Hoh Warrior both of the horisest notice chases of the season so far, with Crack Dn and Hori Warnion D to winners of their only chases to date. Chief's Song - successful in two of his three chases at Kempton and Ascot and beaten only a neck by Mandy's Mantino at Chellentan in between - and exciting chasing prospect Hurricane Lamp also under orders Perhaps Hori Warnor, who impressed encompusty when giving a tit-length beating to Cherly's Lod at Market Rasen, will prove the pick of this quarter, though Hurricane Lamp (half-brother to smart but it-fated Martin's Lamp) is one to be watched with interest. David Nacholson's runner won twos over briber last term and it would have been three except for him failing white leafon at the last here on March He lengts the time to make be smarth; at this falling white leading at the last here in March. He looks the type to make his mark at this game and will be fit enough despite the 273-day lay-off. Selection: SPACE TRUCKER

2.30 MITSUBISHI SHOGUN TINGLE CREEK TROPHY CHASE (Grade 1) (CLASS A) £53,000 addad 2m Penalty Value £33,110 2134-P ASK TOM (32) (D) (BF) (6 T Stream-Brown) T Tate 6 ft 7 R Gamstly
Royal Elvie, park epithets, park cap
F2-54 CELIBATE (18) (D) (Stanford Ending Parknershop) C Mann 6 ft 7
Grey and composite (seafered), composite besees, dark base cap 2141-1 KLAIRON DAVIS (FR) (44) (D) (C Jones) A L Moore (4ft 6 ft 7 R Durancocy 294-1 N.J.A.H.ON DAVES (FH) (44) (D) (C. Jones) A.L. Moore (m) 6 if 7 ... H. Durmoocky Marcon, whate stopes, marcon cap, whate hoop fifF-2 MULLIGAN (32) (CD) (L.2) Harrs) D Nicholson 7 if 7 A Maguitre Marue and yellow check, yellow steeves.

20-3FR OH SO PISKY (7) (D) (2) Eabor) D Elevatin 10 if 7 P Holloy Riggid blue, crange death organized blue steped steeves and cap. Phothey in Cap. Royal, (FR) (4) (D) (87) (D A Johnson M Pipe 6 if 7 A P McCoy B Royal, (FR) (14) (D) (FRost Floods Limited) D Michalson 10 if 1 ... R Johnson Ried, while cross belts, hooped sleeves and star on cap.

- 7 dectared BETTING: 15-8 Kleiron Davis, 100-30 Mulligan, 7-2 Vilding Flogship, 5-2 Or Royal, 6-1 Ask 33-1 Celibrate, 100-10h Sp Risky 1998. South Man 6 11 7 R Currencopy ID-11 tay (E O'Grady) 4 ran
FORM GUIDE
MILL LICAN & force and to be a separately licing Cold Computers with problems and Millian Cold.

FORM GUIDE

MULLIGAN is tavoured to turn around Haldon Gold Cup running with stablemate Viking Flagship (witner of this event in 1994 and runner-up to Sound Main in 1996) who beat him five lengths and renews invalry with a 10th advantage. Only sever and open to improvement, Mulligan landed his first five chases in 1996-97 - including the Henry VIII Chase in this card - and would probably have gone through that season undertexted had he not loppled over at the Chellenham Festival and at Aintree His jumping is normally firstrate - it certainty was at Eweter - and should stand him in good stead over these lincky obstacles. Askt Tohin ingstified connections with his lack-lustre deptally behind Viking Flagship obstacles. Askt Tohin ingstified connections with his lack-lustre deptally behind Viking Flagship in the Queen Mother Champor Chase (taltron Davis could finish only fourth in the latter event, having won it the year before He scored easily at the Punchestown Festival in April and comes here in good heart after a fuent victory at Paryhouse in October on his return.

Selection: MULLIGAN HILL HANDICAD HILDDI F. (CLASS R)

3.05 WILLIAM HILL HANDICAP HURDLE (CLASS B) C4

FUE: GREENBACK (BEL) (14) (CO) (Jack Joseph) P Hoobs 6 to 7 . . . M Richards Result blue and aposts, black calp, white spots 29,3904 NON VINTAGE (7) (0) (Alan Manni M Chapman 6 10 6. . .

1. June 1 vini Mode (7) (b) Walth Namin M Chapman 6 10 6.

1. June 1 GLOBE RUNNER (20) (0) (6 3 P Barbar) JJ O'Neil 4 10 5.

6 cyal blue, not cross of lonaine and alexess, quantized cap

1. NAHRAWALI (35) (0) (6 7 Sparmwharth G L Mooring cap, brown starth of the complete of the comple Mr S Durack (5)

Light blur, yellow hosp, hosped cap 115/41 PUNKAH (14) (D) (NotCourt Fine Medis & D.J Rusher) (G McCourt 4 to 0 ... D.J Molfatti Shysh Nuu and who stripes, chacked alsows - 21 declared -

Shari Neu and white strates, checked stewers

1. 2.1 declared
Missimum weekt 1:62 fore harvestap weekt Punka 97 12th BETTING: 11-2 Stormytaurweither, 6-1 Grimes, 6-1 Alabang, 9-1 Potter's Gate, 16-1 Princeful, 11-1
Chal-Yo 12-1 Ela Agapi Mou, Potentate, 14-1 Caribo Brigantin, 14-1 Kerawi, 20-1 Beltator, Globo Rumer, Nahawaki, 22-1 Major Jamie, 55-1 Forestal, 33-1 New Iria, 40-1 Punkah, Silver Groom, 50-1 Danegold, Greenback, Non Vintage 1996 Valve A Stard 5-17-1 (in Driver) (13-1) (Al Pipe) is ran

FORM GUIDE

ALABANG is lacking in experience but is open to Improvement, Unibeaten in both starts last term invince events at Market Rusen and Newcastie, Alabang made an encouraging return when beaten a couple of tengths by hotpot Good Vibes at Wotherby. There are many dangers not the least of them being Stormytelinweathers, who won his last three races of 1966-91 and went in all Newbury on his return. He needs further than this but the Biety this pace and uphit finish will suit. Drimes, runner-up behind Commanche Court at Punchestown in February beat that rival, who won the Thumph, is length at Leopardstown in Dictober on the return. However, only four and tumbered with 11st 13th, he might find one or two loo good on the insal battle up the hul. Martin Pipe has won this with Corporal Clinger, Liadett Balasani Valtinet and Matie A Stand, so Potentate must be kept on the right side, though this one has the same burden as Grimes. Potter's Gate is unbeaten after a couple of races this term all Chepstow and Leocester last morth and, although tilb worse of livin New tim in second at the Midstands track and semilarly placed behind Teolan at Humingdon since) can again prove the poly of the pair Supreme Novices hurdle runner-up Princeful, beaten a length and a haif by El Agapi Mou at Ascot on his first appearance since the end of March can reverse form on 2th more favourable terms. Nahrawati, undefeated after two runs last season and two this term, should again go weel of it a 5 th topter mark has when beating Palamon fou

3.40 MERCURY FM NOVICE HANDICAP HURDLE C4 (CLASS C) £6,000 added 2m 110yds £4,280

FORM GUIDE

BALLADUR best market leader Loncers hell a length at Wincenton in October on his first appearance ance April. The son of Nursyev will progness further and, with Tony McCoy in the saddia, can supplement Wincenton gams. Solyasan won a Dundalk marken on the Flat when with Kowin Prendengest, and changed hands for 33,000 gas at fast year's Newmarket July Sales. Winner of his first two hurdle races both at Chepstow in October before a remote fourth to Sarmarino at Newbury, Labd Hernes four-year-old will do much better in this leaser company Final Stab did not account for anything of note when scoring at Ludlow but it was only his second outing and he will improve.

Selection: BALLADUR

CHEPSTOW

1.15 Lough Tully 2,50 The Swan 3.20 Landed Gentry 1.45 Giventime 2.15 Banjo (nb) 3.50 Lord Jim

GOING: Soft [Good to Soft in places],

Left-hand, uncluding course with run-in of 240yds.

Course is on A466. Chapstow station (Carotti - Gloucester line) Im. ADMISSION; Cuto Etx; Entersols 210 (OAPs 25). CAR PARK: Free.

LEADING TRAINERS: M Pipe 41-177 (222%), P Hobbs 19-71 (268%), N Twiston-Davies 19-107 (178%), P Nicholts 17-74 (22%), D Nicholtson 16-58 (278%), Mrs J Pitman 7-36 (184%), LEADING JOCKEYS: A Thornton 5-41 (122%), D J Burchell 3-19 (158%), L Harvey 3-38 (78%), Blaude 3-52 (56%), T J Marphy 2-19 (111%), S Curran 2-20 (10%),

FAVOURITES: 150-369 (40.7%),
BLINKERED FIRST TIME: Spring Double (3.20) (visored).

1.15 SHANE BRODERICK APPEAL HANDICAP HURDLE (CLASS B) £7,000 added 2m 4f 110yds Penalty Value £4,500

ter answerres and trainer upon Otshea expressed the view that she was up to withing a nice handicap. She was a six-length third to Commanche Run at Punchestown last Feb-nary and likes cut underloot. Sewame Seed has gone well fresh in the past, but it was still a decent effort to win under first Tilb in soft ground at Worcester on his reappear-ance 11 days ago. This sound jumper comes into the reckening along with Lough Tully, who improved last season and ran well on his return to action here in October, firshing second to Tidal Force over this distance.

1.45 JACK BROWN BOOKMAKER HANDICAP BBC1 CHASE (CLASS B) £10,000 added 3m 2f 110yds Penalty Value £7,119

BETTING: 3-1 Givenitine, 100-30 Turning Tits, T-2 Dom Samoural, 11-2 River Mandate, 13-2 Ortwell Led, 16-1 Little Mertine, 20-1 Killeshin 1996: Samise 7 to 4 D Bridgwater 9-1 (P Nobbs) 7 ran

1996 Sarriee 7 to 4 D Brogwater 9 1 (2 Nobbs) 7 ran
FORM GUIDE
This trip will take some staying in the mud and Robert Thomton's claim will be invaluable on TURRING TRIX, who was better than ever last season but did not get much luck in the Grand National, the had a tough task anyway from 160 out of the handicap, but was appeared twice. Perhaps he will have another go in the spring, but there should be a good handicap coming his way in the imanim and lack of a recent run will not be a problem. He goes best fresh and has won first time up for the past two seasons. He is only inactionally higher in the weights than when beaung Sater Stephanie and River Mandate in a timee-mile Newbury handicap in March. River Mandate, who also contested the Grand National, was a first-time-up winner in the mud last season and missed the 1995-96 campaign, so there is come mileage left in turn. Giventime is probably high enough in the weights, but more improvement is possible given a test of stamma life tims. He found the timp too short when a running-on second to Super Tactics over an extended two miles and is half at Kempton 17 days back. Dom Sampoural is in good form, but two recent and a name at rempton 12 days bette both sampler is in good both, but two recent hard races could leave a mark, while Orswell Lad is a real mudiant and further ran would bolster this escond-season handicapper. Dour stayer Killeshin rarely had ground conditions in his favour last season.

Selection: TURNING TRIX

2.15 CORAL REHEARSAL LIMITED HANDICAP CHASE (Grade 2) (CLASS A) £30,000 added BBC1
3m Penalty Value £18,534

History Control of the Control of th

FORM GUIDE FORM GUIDE

BANJO could be another winner for the Nacholson camp. This smart French-bred has had an operation for cold since winning such lades as the Softy Isles (Sandown) and Murrim Molling (Anuree) and was having his first race for almost two years when pulled up in the Gold Cup last March. There is a good chance he will bounce back his season and he locked off in the right way by beating What A Hand and Coome Hit at Cheltenham (3m 3t-plus) last month. The softer ground will suit and he could be a major Gold Cup candidate this season, although the Welsh National is his first big target. See More Business shaped well on his first start since February when third to Suny Bay in the Edward Harimer Memoral at Haydock 17 days ago.

2.50 GOOD LUCK NOVICE SELLING HURDLE (CLASS G) $2,500 added 2m 4f 110yds Penalty Value $1,898 2.500 added 2m 4f 110yds Penalty Value 21,898

DRAMA KING FISH (Mr. Vot. Guyl 6 Levellyn 5 til 2 Michael Brennin (3)

50-6 OHESTAN (11) (Stree Nelson) M Ppe 5 til 2 C Mande B

4 503-02 OHET MOMENTS (10) (Mrs Louse Murphyl P Murphyl 4 til 2 C Mande B

5 F4351 ROYAL HAND (16) (F) A Famouri R Amson 7 til 2 Mr R Amson N

6 TYCOON TED (F155) (Mrs May Brobourne) W M Brishourne 4 til 2 C Lamence

7 43504 FORTUNES ROSE (220) (Mrs A J Garretty J King 5 til 7 T J Murphyl

8 PCPR NDIAN CROWN (16) (Philip Sudkeyl N Thomson 7 til 7 T J Murphyl

9 200 REPHANDED (2d) (Dynd Brace) D Brace 6 til 7 R Thomson (10)

10 255-33 SONG FOR JESS (14) (Seve Joose) Fortain 4 til 7 A Thomson (10)

10 068-06 THE SWAN (91) (Ferry Sanders) R Frost 4 til 7 A Thomson (10)

11 declared

BETTING: 5-2 The Swan, 11-4 Questan, 8-1 Lyphard's Fable, 7-1 Quet Moments, 8-1 Fortaines Rose, 9-1 Royal Hand, 10-1 Song For Jess, 12-1 Reditanded, 16-1 Drama King, 20-1 others

10 ELIBRY KNOX NOVICE CHASE (CLASS D) $5.000

3.20 FLURRY KNOX NOVICE CHASE (CLASS D) £5,000

added 2m 3f 110yds Penalty Value £3,625

bfe, 33-1 Charse's Folly 1996 Or Royal 5 11 10 A P McCoy 5-4 fav (M Pipe) 6 ram 3.50 DECEMBER MAIDEN HURDLE (CLASS D) £4,000 added 2m 110yds Penalty Value £3,155

BEAR HUG (F67) IX Jones M Steppand 4 n 5

BEAR HUG (F67) IX Jones M Steppand 4 n 5

P. BOLD BUSTER (F33) IXB Exors Late Boxbern Hicknes I Balding 4 n 5 R Thom

C2 DESERT POWER (10) (Mrs Londa M Williams) D Burchell 9 n 9

C3 PHYLAMICE (E98) (Auron) C Books 5 n 5

C49P. KARICE (E98) MAN (369) (M R C Catherwood) P Hobbs 7 n 5

Mr R WM

C43F KING DF THIEVES (8) (J D I Bell) C Marm 5 n 5

LORD JUM (F42) (Mrs 5 Y Thomas) J Odd 5 n 5

D0010. MAZBRAH F162() (Mrs 5 S Y Thomas) J Odd 5 n 5

Min M 4

S0010. MAZBRAH F162() (Mrs 6 S T Thomas) J Chris 5 n 5

SBERTIAN HENRY (299) (IC S Tateson) 6 Smart 4 n 5

E55 SBERTIAN HENRY (299) (IC S Tateson) 1 Kng 5 n 5

J J

PO00P: STORM POINT (399) (R J Parsh) H Howe 9 n 5

G Ht

440-44 CRYSTAL JEWEL (22) (Mrs babel Palmen) P Hobbs 5 n 0

D Bur . D J Burchell I Lawrence I J Murphy G Hogan (3) A Thomson 2- SOLAZZI (FR) (274) (Nrs Sarah Faules) L G Cottreli 5 ti 0

= 14 declared = 8ETTING: 3-1 Lord Jim. 4-1 Sol Music, 5-1 Bold Buster, 8-1 Crystal Jowel, 8-1 Siberian Henry, 10-1 forg Qf Thewes, Solazza, 12-1 Beer Hug, Fitzmaurice, 14-1 Desert Power, Mazirah, 20-1 others 1996 Tompetoo 5 ft 5 C. Maude 5-2 (N Twiston-Daviest 9 rain

WOLVERHAMPTON (AW) 2.45 STATE OF CAUTION (nap) 12.35 Confronter 1.05 Killarney Jazz 3.20 Centre Stalls 3.55 Rex Mundl 2.10 Jubliee Scholar 4.25 Prix De Clermont

GOING: Standard.

STALLS: 71 - Outside; rest - riside. DRAW ADVANTAGE: High from 6f to 1m 4f.

Fibresand. left-hand, ovel course.

Course is N of form on A449. Wolverhampton station 1m. ADMISSION: Club £16; Tatersalls 08 (OAP members of Darmond Club £4); Viewing Restaurant £25.90 including entrance and meat. CAR PARK: Free.

LEADING TRAINERS: R Hollinsheed 50-560 (103%), M Johnston 53-233 (22.7%), J Berry 43-300 (14.3%), A Belley 34-235 (105%), P Hastern 33-185 (17.8%), P Evans 30-319 (9.4%), O LEADING JOCKEYS: 6 Outsided 27-81 (14.9%), F Lynch 24-237 (101%), A Clark 22-96 (10.2%), Dean McKeowm 22-209 (105%), T Williams 20-208 (19.6%), D Holland 18-120 (15%), F KNOURITES: 398-1232 (32.3%).

FAVOURITES: 398-1232 (32.3%).

BLANKERED FIRST TIME: Dance To The Beet (1.35), Zermatt (2.10), Mr Majlica (2.45), Rex Mundi (3.55) (visored).

12.35 ANGLO HOLT CONSTRUCTION HANDICAP (CLASS F) (Div I) £3,300 added 1m 1f 79yds Penalty Value £2,294

ern Fan, 20-1 others 1996 Desert Zonej T 6 TD S Sanders 5-1 (J A Harrs) drawn (12) 13 ran

1.05 HOLIDAY INN GARDEN COURT WOLVERHAMPTON MAIDEN STAKES (CLASS D) £4,550 added 2YO 6f Penalty Value £3,234

O DESERT MELAGE (60) (The Courtess of Derbyl P Chapple-Hyam 9 0 T Quien 13
ORTAD (Bran D Cardie) N Litaroden 9 0 S Whitworth 2
28 KILLARNEY JAZZ (50) (M P Burke Developments Limited) J Wharton 9 0 . T Lucas 6
0 MUSALSE (29) (Mr.s. C Barday Natibeham Park Racing VIII) P Hastam 9 0 . P Goode (7) 5
POLAR MIST Their Grey Sr M Prescott 9 0 G. Duffield 8 00 TAJ MAHAL (15) (Guy Reed) C Thomson 9 0 Dean McKeuwn 12
0230 WOLFHART (42) (Mr.s Eleca Queekly P Jakon 6 0 D Holland 10

SETTING: 3-1 Sada, 4-1 Desert Mirage, 5-1 Polar Mist. 6-1 Wolfhunt. 7-1 Treble Term, 12-1 Killer ney Jazz, Phambon Ring, Little Emily, 14-1 Indian Splendour, 25-1 Dryad, 33-1 others 1996. Fit For The Job 2 6 o T Sprake 10-1 (W G M Turner) drawn (9) 9 ran

1.35 MANCHESTER SELLING STAKES (CLASS G) £2,875 added 2YO 6f Penalty Value £1,999 445300 FIGAWIN (12) (D) (Clear Height Racing) S Dow 9 2

= 10 declared BETTING: 9-4 ha Tet, $-1 Dance To The Beat, $-1 Sing For Me, 7-1 Pinup, 8-1 House Da Fire, Velvet Story, 12-1 Burnden Days, 14-1 Figaren, 20-1 others
1996 Lightning Bolt 2 8 6 D Hotland 5-1 (M Johnston) drawn (10) Ti nan

2.10 ANGLO HOLT CONSTRUCTION HANDICAP (CLASS F) £3,300 added 1m 1f 79yds Panalty Valua £2,294

1996. Barrel Of Hope 4 9 6 D Pears (3) 12-1 (J L Eyre) drawn (12) 13 ran

2.45 TOTE JACKPOT HANDICAP (CLASS C) £10,000 C4

- 12 declared 9ETTING: 4-1 State Of Caution, 5-1 Primo Lara, 6-1 Brilliant Red, 7-1 Forcing Bid, Geolic Storre.
Chevit, 16-1 Tenn Creeks, 12-1 Mr Bergerac, 14-1 Mr Majica, Jibereen, 16-1 Sea-Deer, Astract 1996. Can Born Som 4-3 3 G Facilities (M Bell) drawn (*) 12 ran

FORM GUIDE PRIMO LARA was well beaten the only lime to hits raced on Fibresand – but that was in a Southwell maden on the second of two juvenile starts and it will come as no sur-In a solutines in space to the second of two juvanes starts and it was come as no sup-prise if he makes a race of it with the proven all-wealther performers today. Pick of them must be State Of Caution, who has beaten several of today a opponents in compling o hat-frick on this course. There is no reason why he should not go well again. Pirmo Lain looks bottler than ever judged on tast months will under Richard Durin at Redox, 8 race in which Geeffe Storm was about two lengths away swift, with Mr Bergerac mint and Sep-Deer 11th. That Redcar race was over six furlongs, yet Primo Lara is more at homover this distance. Perhaps best from the front, Primo Lara would have been better of over this distance Perhaps best from the front, Primo Lara Would have been befire off with a lower draw but he might be good enough, nevertheless, Joint fifth of 29 behind Wildwood Flower in the Ayr Gold Cup. Gaeko Storm promises to stay this distance and Mark Johnston's horses take to this surface readily enough but Mr Bergerac needs to improve on recent efforts here and Sea-Deer is mail fair lougher race than the claimer in which he ran The Happy Fox to a head. First-time blinkers enabled Forcing Bull to beat Mr Bergerac (third) almost seven lengths three weeks ago, but the 11 bir iss plus the ex-tra furtong will make life tougher for him.

Selection: PFIMO LARA

3.20 WULFRUN STAKES (Listed race) (CLASS A) C4

Brown and orange cliemonds, brown steems and cap 044242 RUNNING STAG (USA) (11) (BF) (Richard J Cohen) P Mitchell 3 6 11 A Clark 5 BETTING: 11-10 Centre Stalle, 9-2 Runching Stag, 5-1 Prince Of Dental, 11-2 Russian Music, 12-1 Farmost, 14-1 Loch Bering, 33-1 Puzzianesti 1996 Prince Of Andros 6 8 10 J Red 7-2 (C Wal) drawn (7) 13 ran FORM GUIDE

CENTRE STALLS inched last of new behind Air Express in the Queen Elizabeth if Stakes at Ascot in September, but his neck second to Allied Forces in the Queen Anne Stakes (Group Two) at the Royal meeting (Air-Royal third) stampo him as the class act in this line. Bit! Centre Stabs is up against useful horses with might be more at home than he is over the extended nine (urlongs, a trip that looks ideal for Prince Of Denial. An improving handicapper, he can make his presence left at Listed level. Like Centre Stabs, Rusealine Music might be better off over a stightly shorter journey but he is useful on his day and versable able to win from the front or from off the pace. Running Stag has run fair races in Listed and higher company, but the fact remains that he has just a Lingfield all weather maiden to his credit STALLS 3.55 LONDON HANDICAP (CLASS E) (Div I) £4,025 added 1m 4f Penalty Value £2,960

1 25511 SWAN HANTER (21) (C) (0) (Dench Yerwood) D Cosprove 4 (0.0 G MARgan (5) 6
2 00346 TO TOT (12) Mod Connet D Arburtor 3.8 n S Winkworth 9
3 070400 REX MANDI (7) (CD) IJ W Littler) P Extra 5 9 8 ... A McCarthy (7) T V
4 04290 ORDANED (20) (0) (Peter Endan Roans) E Aktion 4 9 5 ... Metanie Worden (7) 6
5 2940 B, BALLADOR (SS) (0) (Mrs. John Lee) J Bethet 6 9 4 ... G. Dyffold 5
6 5-0004 BEZAO (28) (6 Piper) R Smyson 4 6 10 ... M. Gallagher 2
1 04-064 DANNA (9) (M G S Curtari P Velayin) 18 3 ... D Holtand 1 V
6 000055 SEFTON BLAKE (21) (Setton Surfacing Co Lod M Mesopher 3 8 2 ... R Winston (5) 4
4 ROSG GROVERAN LAD (19) (David Gamer) S Bowning 3 8 0 R Financh (3) 10
10 00045 CHARBSSE DANCER (140) (Day Reed) C Thomson 17 12 ... Date Gibson 3
- 10 declared BETTING: 15-8 Swan Hunter, 3-1 Tol Tol. 6-1 Ontained, 7-1 Danko, 10-1 Rex Mundi, 12-1 Grove-lair Lad, 14-1 Setton Stake, Charlese Dancer, Belzon, 20-1 El Ballador 17
10 DONO HANDICAD (CLASS E) (One III) CAS Color (Day III) Cas Colo

4.25 LONDON HANDICAP (CLASS E) (Div II) £4,025 added 1m 4f Penalty Value £2,960

50046 PRIVATE AUDIENCE (USA) (8) (Nor H Lovy) W Max 4 to 0 C Lowthor (3) 7 40440 CHARNWOOD JACK (USA) (7) (Anchew both) Composed 4 9 th T G MicLaughain 6 6335C CHEROMEE FLIGHT (A8) (7) (Saker Knopt Eurhbertz Lut) S Moltor 3 9 7 M Wighain 6 6335C CHEROMEE FLIGHT (A8) (7) (Saker Knopt Eurhbertz Lut) S Moltor 3 9 7 M Wighain 6 6335C CHEROMEE FLIGHT (A8) (7) (Saker Knopt Eurhbertz Lut) S Moltor 3 9 7 M Wighain 6 6335C CHEROMER (J16) (Wignam, M Johnston 3 9 5 D Holtand 5 00255 BONJOUR (J16) (Wignam, C Carl Engineering) Litol 1 Semple 3 9 D Holtand 5 00255 MERCURY (15) (Wignam, C Carl Engineering) Litol 1 Semple 3 8 m MERCURY (15) (Wignam, C Carl Engineering) Litol 1 Semple 3 8 m MERCURY (15) (Wignam, C Carl Engineering) Holtand 5 D Haydri Johns 5 8 1 T Williams 8 0 05064 PRIX DE CLERMONT (11) (The Jet Stream Protresphy) G Lews 3 8 0 R Finench (3) 3

- 9 dockared BETTING: 5-2 Private Audionce: 7-2 Cherokee Flight, 9-2 African-Pard, 6-1 Prix De Clermont, T-1
As-is, 6-1 Charmood Jack, 12-1 Mercury, La Grand Goueler, 20-1 Bonjour

والمتعلقين والمتعلق والمتحقيل والمحالة فالمعالية والمعارف والمارا والمتحالة والمتحالة والمتحالة والمتحالة

PUNTERS' GUIDE

CHEPSTOW

1.15: LOUGH TULLY, five lengths second to Tidal Force over today's course and distance in Octoher, can go one better. Sesame Seed looks the danger.

1.45: GIVENTIME, 11 lengths runner-up to Super Tacties over an inadequate 2m4f110yd at Kemptoo last time, is a course and distance winner and looks fairly handicapped. Dom Samourai may pose most problems. 2.15; BANJO, who beat What A Hand by 11/2 lengths over over 3m3() 10yds at Cheltenham on his reappearance, is lightly-raced, holds ample scope for further im-good season. See More Business may give him the most to du.

SANDOWN 1.55: DIRECT ROUTE, a neck second to Queen Of Spudes in the Grade 2 November Novice Chase over 2m at Cheltenham (ast time, reopposes on 7lb betters terms today and can turn the tables.

000 2.30: KLAIRON DAVIS, who troited up by 11 lengths from Fiftysevenchannels over 2m at Pairyhouse on his seasonal debut. remains a top-class chaser at this distance and will be hard to beat, Viking Flagship may prove the non polent threat.

HYPERION'S

- - 7e#

e i en ida

44

1.0

4.4 1 15C

2.5

والمنطق والراس

Barrier Constitution

TV TIPS 3.05: POTTER'S GALE, who beat New Ino by seven lengths in a 2m handicap hurdle at Leicester last time, remains well handicapped and should go well.

3.40: DIEGO, who ran the in-form Saint Ciel to six lengths in a 2m handicap burdle st Uttoxeter last time, can go one better here. Sofynan may pose most problems.

Alabang looks the biggest danger.

WOLVERHAMPTON -2.45: STATE OF CAUTION, who provement and looks set for a completed a hat-trick when beating Sir Joey by 11/2 lengths over today's course and distance in November, is still teniently treated and should be hard to beat. Primo Lara may be the one to follow him home.

3.20: CENTRE STALLS, eight lengths binth and last to Air Express in the Group One Queen Elizabeth II Stakes at Ascot over tm in September, takes a massive drop in class here and, if able to reproduce anything like his turf form on Fibresand, will make short work of his rivals today. Running Stag may be the most potent

87 1		89	90_	91	92	93		TAU 95	96
1_	,							-55	30
:		F	1	3_	1_	12	1	4_	12
ı	2	a	1	3	1_	3_	1	3	D_
1 -	9-2	12-1	11-4	7.1	5-4	13-2	4-5	15-2	9-1
		100	10.12	100	102	112	10.2	10.10	105
5	g	4	5	5	5	6	5	5	5
avo	urite	5 +£	30 S	econo	Favo	rurites	-54.5
ced	let,	2nd o	3rd	n les	race	40% elec	el (19	94) 4	5
dett	(1986	9) 12-1
Con (199	pora 96)	Cling	er (198				_	mri (16	191) , ed dett Cor	is 10.7 gewourite sed 1st, sheel (1986 Corporal (1996)	15 70.7 100 16 9 4 invourites +21 16 12 2nd o 16 12 2nd o 16 12 2nd o 16 12 2nd o 17 12 2nd o 18 12 2	15 70.7 100 10.12 16 9 4 5 revourities +£0.30 Sized 1et, 2nd or 3rd 158.cel (1994) 4-5 101 (1996) 12-1 Corporal Clinger (19 (1996)	16 107 100 1012 100 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10	15 107 100 10.12 100 10.2 15 9 4 5 5 5 Revourities +£0.30 Second Favorad 1st, 2nd or 3rd in 1st race pb.ed (1994) 4-5 Lott (1996) 12-1 Corporal Clinger (1988), Lisdett (1996)	16 70.7 100 1012 100 102 112 12 12 13 9 4 5 5 5 6 6 14 14 15 15 15 15 6 14 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15 15	16 707 100 1012 100 102 112 102 102 103 103 103 103 103 103 103 103 103 103	16 107 100 1012 100 102 112 102 1030 103 112 102 1030 103 112 103 1030 103 112 103 1030 103 112 103 1030 1030

FIRST SHOW

In the 1.45 at Chepstow, River improved with racing this sea-Martina, a tough sort who has

Chepstow - 1.45 52 52 114 Turning Trix 3-1_ 3-1 Dom Samoural 10-3 3-1 Little Martine 13-2 7-1 11-2 River Mandate, 13-2 7-1 ANC Express dbt dit Orswell Lad_ 6-1 8-1 20-1 20-1 25-1 Gleshin Each way a concer the odds, places 1, 2

H - Wittom Hill 1 - Lestonies T - Total Sandown — 2.30 Klairon Davis 13-8 13-8 13-8 13-8 T-2 7-2 7-2 7-2 Viking Hagship 7-2 4-1 7-2 7-2 Or Royal 41 41 92 51 Ask Tom T-1 TI-2 6-1 6-1

Collegate 33-1 33-1 40-1 40-1 Oh So Risky 65-1 100-1 50-1 66-1 Factures a 8th the odds risces 1.2 C - Coral H - William Hill L - Lachroles, T - Total

Sandown --- 3.05

Stormyfeinweather 5-1 11-2 11-2 11-2 Grimes 11-2 11-2 6-1 13-2 10-1 9-1 8-7 8-1 Potter's Gate 8-1 16-1 9-1 8-1 Princeks 10-1 10-1 8-1 11-1 Chai Yo 12-1 13-1 11-1 13-1 Ba Agapi Mou 101 121 101 14-1 Potentale 12-1 11-1 12-1 14-1 Cardio Briganie 16-1 14-1 16-1 12-1 Kerand 16-1 16-1 12-1 14-1 Globe Runner 16-1 20-1 20-1 20-1 15-1 15-1 20-1 20-1 25-1 6-1 20-1 20-1 25-1 25-1 25-1 15-1 Major Jamie 28-1 25-1 16-1 25-1 New Irm 33-1 33-1 33-1 33-1 Silver Groom 33-1 33-1 40-1 33-1 33-1 90-1 50-1 40-1 50-1 50-1 50-1 66-1 Greenback 50-1 50-1 100-1 50-1 Mon Virtage 50-1 50-1 100-1 40-1

Each way a quoter the odds, places 1 2,3,4 C - Coral H - William Hill L - Ladbroles, T - Tice

Mandate, who has been off the son, are both 7-1 with Ladtrack for a while, and Little brokes-the Tole, who quote the doubtful A N C Express and may therefore also have a Rule 4 deduction on their prices, go just 11-2. to the 2.30 at Sandown Ask

Tom, who went well for a long way before pulling up on his reappearance, is 7-1 with Coral - William Hill are offering just In the 3.05 at Sandown, Bel-lator, who is held in high regard by his trainer and figures in hill go just 16-1. Punkah, who is reported to be quietly fancied each-way by a few good judges in the Lambourn area, is 50-1 with William Hill and Ladbrokes - Coral offer just 33-1. And Non Vintage, a perfectly solid performer, is 100-1 with Ladbrokes - the Tote go just

The Tote but on the 2.45 at Wolver-hampton: 9-2 Britiant Red, State Of Cau-ton, 6-1 Forcing Bd, Primo Lara. 8-1 Chewit, 9-1 Nin Creeks, 10-1 Geetic Storm, Mr Borg-erac. 15-1 Astrac, Jibereen, See-Deer. 20-1 Mr Mejica.

Ian Davies

100hot Sports The 100 most popular sports sites on the Internet:

3. Sporting is

*November 4, 1997

www.sporting-life.com bringing total speed to the world wide web some Champion Hurdle lists, is 25-1 with Ladbrokes – William 55110 to DE The McCoy: the mighty man with the 10-year plan

The jump jockey Tony McCoy is charging towards domination of his sport at an alarming rate. His critics say he will fall victim to burnout. McCoy says maybe, but not for 10 years.

As he marches contemptuously through this his fourth season in Britain, Tony McCoy is closing in on 600 career winners. At this remorseless rate the Irishman will not only beat Peter Scudamore's career record of 1.678 winners, he will exceed it by a further 1,000 at his anlicipated point of retirement in 10 years' time. A P McCoy describes Richard Dunwoody as ately and would earn £100 a the most obsessive jockey in the week for his effort. "He could weighing room. He must be jok-

Anthony Peter McCoy has ridden so many winners already that he seems to have been around for a generation. It is quite arresting, however, to consider that his first ever hurdles race, at Leopardstown, was on the day Jodami and Mark Dwyer won the Cheltenham Gold Cup. Since then there has been the conditional jockeys' championship in his lum. He left at 14 without a sinfirst campaign over the Irish Sea, followed by two titles among the fully-fledged ranks. Earlier this year McCoy, aged 22, became only the fourth man to ride the winner of the Champion Hurdle (Make A Stand) and Gold Cup (Mr Mul-Festival. His booking is now his mount with a fifth leg.

Yet his achievements do not count as a speck of grit for Tony McCov. As the bandwagon rolls on, he would prefer to crack the whip on the team abead rather than look at the mileposts in his slipstream. "I don't want to look back or even think about the present and how I'm flying. because that's the moment you fall over and make yourself look like a clown," he says. "Your luck can only last a cermatters to me now is tomorrow, was on.

what I'm going to ride on Saturday and possible winners at Cheltenham this season." And, of course, the Christmas sales of his recently published biog-

If you look in the past, though, you find what has made this near mechanical man before us. The son of a Catholic horse breeder from Toomehridge, Co Antrim, McCoy was brought up as one of six in buecolic Ulster, close to the inland sea of Loch Neagh and on the banks of Northern Ireland's longest river, the Bann,

By the time he was 12, Me-Coy was an unfettered truant. spending most of the day at the yard of a local man, Billy Rock. He could ride, and control, the higgest horses almost immedido the work of three grown en," Rock says.

McCoy was not a daft lad, but the subject he enjoyed most was not on the school curricu-

BY RICHARD EDMONDSON

gle O-level to his name and joined the Flat yard of Jim Bolger. Coolculien has produced some mighty racing names, both human and equine, and none was brought up gently. If anyone is caught smoking at the yard, Jim Bolger does not ask the staff ligan) at the same Cheltenham to form a seated circle to discuss the topic. He boots the miscregenerally accepted as providing ant out. McCoy does not smoke and chops are now off the cane to this day and the strongest hrew he takes is dict coke.

The jockey found his master as terrifying as a tiger in the bedroom and it is testimony to his fortitude that he disobeyed Bolger in moving to Britain in 1994. By then the tyro had broken his leg on the Coolcullen gallops, an accident that erased any lingering notion that McCoy would appear on the Flat. During recuperation his body started to change and did not stop tain amount of time, so you're until it reached its present ing to wake up in a morning and frightened to look back and see shape, as if its owner had been have a fried breakfast. It just lieve the McCoy way does not how long it's been going on. I've splayed on the dungeon rack won't happen." been very lucky so far. What while a particularly nasty shift du jour (although the way things are going they may soon be off all our menus). The jockey has attempted the black techniques that comes to few. For him the of pee pills and sticking his fingrind, the hunger and the travgers down the throat, but now elling of his sport is surpassed just settles for surviving on varby the rewards, financial and lous natural gases. "My weight emotional, of winning, "You've got to want winners, he greedy. and I don't mean being ignorant is a worse problem than for most jockeys because I'm five foot 11 inches," he says, "But I've got used to it and I can live with the fact that, for the rest of my days riding, I'm never go-jockey himself, who would rather have a finger off than a day, snorts at this theory. "I can't imagine there is a single jockey in the weighingroom who wouldn't like to be suffering from the sort of humout I'm supposed to be getting at the moment," he says, "I love going racing every day, especially as I usually get two or three really decent chances. I think a lot of people get more burned out thinking about what I'm doing than I do going There are some who be- through it.

"I can cope with feeling as foster a lengthy career, that the burned-out as this for the next place." His physique apart. Tony starving, 70080 miles travelling 10 years if things keep hap- @ The Real McCon. Hodder & McCoy is made notable by a jut- a year and high expectation will pening for me. There will plen- Shoughton £16.99.

ty of time for me to relax in 10 years' time when I can't ride horses any longer. But tomorrow is another day, never mind 10 years' time. If I keep riding consistently for another 10 years I'll he the happiest man alive, but when you're a jump jockey your fingers are permanently

Photograph: Robert Hallam

crossed. "This is a game that becomes obsessive and when you ride winners consistently it's something you want more and more of every day. Anyone in my position would become obsessive too, but maybe it was being that way that got me here in the first L is for . . .

Law: Of which there is about as much in the world of hetting as there was in Tombstone before Wyatt Earp rode into town. Bets are considered to be a private matter of honour, and thus heyond the reach of the courts on the basis that, well. Good Gawd, if you can't trust a man's word, don't v'know, harrumph. harrumph, what in blazes can you trust? This was all fine and dandy in the days when Lord X would pit his best coll against that of Lord Y for a modest side-bet of, say, half of Gloucestershire, hefore heading off to string up an adolescent or two for sheepstealing. In 1997, when British consumers are, hy and large, fairly well protected against the less scrupulous members of the business world, it is hopelessly inadequate and thus, you might suppose, an obvious concern for a go-ahead Government with a mandate for change. Early indications, however. are that New Labour is as in-Ladies' race: And also for Lydia Pearce, whose pre-eminence in such events was something of a hlank cheque for punters through much of the 1990s. Races for amateur riders of either sex are generally contested by poor, unreliable individuals of very doubtful stamina - and sadly, the horses are even worse. As such, they are hardly the ideal hetring medium, but if you always back the best jockey, you can usually be sure that, whatever other shortcomings the beast may have, it is the best part of a career is now seems to be ness to impoverish anyone, drawing to a close, but one heir apparent is Emma Ramsden, (that's Ramsden, as in the trainer Lynda and Jack, her professional gam-

different to our problems as the last lot.

the most stupid aphorism ever invented, even in the rich hreeding ground for cod philosophy that is the average betting shop. Your selection has been beaten but it didn't usually and) the jockey was hacked it with is lent, not lost. and will undoubtedly be repaid, with generous interest. in the not too distant future. This belief also appears in Chapter One of the Teach Yourself Guide to Economics, by Nick Leeson.

hler husband).

Ladbrokes: Established in 1886 in the Warwickshire village from which it takes its name, Ladbrokes moved its operation to London well which was the complete opposite of that which it pitches to today. Snotty to the

GREG WOOD THE A-Z OF BETTING

Ladhrokes were turf accountants to the aristocracy

(and even now, so rumour has it, several members of the Royal family would not dream of punting with anyone else). From their credit office in Burlington Street. Ladbrokes were purveyors of min to the landed gentry on scale that would be matched only by the introduction of death duty, a couple of generations later. The business plan changed radically, however, when Cyril Stein, son of the legendary pre-War rails bookmaker Snouty Parker, took over as chairman in 1966. Stein was quick to appreciate the potential of off-course betting shops, which had been legalised five years earlier, and through a combination of tireless acquisition and an approach to the competition which was straight out of Jans, built the firm into Britain's biggest bookie, before expanding elsewhere. "Is that the best deal you've ever done?" he was famously asked after adding Hilton Hotels to the Ladhrokes portfolio for £645 million in 1987, "It's the best deal anyone's ever done." Cyril replied, and even in the poststone well-in with its rivals. Stein years, his firm exhibits Unfortunately, Mrs Pearce's the same egalitarian willing-proven existence of which is 500-1 with William Hill, a price that must surely persuade even the most gullible Lent, not lost: Arguably of Sassenachs that the Scortish Tourist Board has been having them on these past 60 years. Novelty odds on such events as aliens landing in Trafalgar Square, Lord Lucan turning himself in to the poget a clear run, needed fur- lice or Manchester City winther, run green and/or (it's ning the Premiership are generally nothing more than a jerk. Thus, the money you an easy source of silly season publicity for the bookies, and of no interest at all to serious punters. A few optimists, though, have 500+1 about a British winner of the men's singles at Wimbledon before the turn of the century safely hidden away - (the price is now down to single figures). When Meeea took over William Hill a few years ago, meanwhile, only one major stumbling block emerged when the accountants went before the First World War, through Hills books. The where it cultivated a clientele multi-million pound buyout is said to have come close to stalling - because Mecca did not want to take on Hills' #3m point of rudeness about who - liability over the reappearthey would do husiness with, ance of Elvis.

whatever their class.

Loch Ness Monster: The

Flagship to be the leading light on a day of riches

The Festival arrives early at Sandown on a day which offers punters a serious alternative to numbers and fruit machines. Greg Wood studies the form.

-

-

S-4

...

45.4

issur Intal

non the internet

Amid the backslapping at Coral headquarters as the bookmakers revealed profits of £33m this mediums with much fatter and week, there was a message for racing which offered less cause for celebration.

This pile of cash was not the result of punters jostling their loe-to-toe against any other atthe horses, but rather a result alone is arguably the most at-49s and slot machines. Since bookies pay a levy to racing only on racing turnover, this is not a trend they are likely to disturb. The turf's market share among off-course gamblers, so the bookmakers will tell you, will continue to decline, and since they are doing everything possible to shift punters to betting guaranteed profits, it could be a self-fulfilling prophecy.

On an afternoon like today, though, racing can still stand with the Grade Two Rehearsal Chase at Chepsiow and two good all-weather races from Wolverhampton, there are nine televised races in the space of two and a half hours.

RICHARD EDMONDSON NAP: Princeful (Sandown 3.05) NB: Ambleside (Chepstow 3.20)

The Tingle Creek Chase brings together three of the first four home in last year's Queen way into Coral shops to bet on traction. The Sandown card Mother Champion Chase, and two chasers in Mulligan and Or around, Klairon Davis is expected to set off a warm favourite, but the worry for his supporters must be that he does not find his best form until the spring. There is also a suspicion that, when the ground is not testing and the pace not strong, two miles is a bit sharp. for him. Klain in Davis may be vulnerable today, and Viking Flagship thest best 2,300 is an greedy," he says. "You've got to want success every day, and when you get it that makes you greedy for some more."

ohvious value bet. Adrian Magnire, David Nicholson's stable jockey. chooses Mulligan, but then, he did that a few weeks ago and Viking Flagship beat him Musof the low-cost, high-margin tractive weekend jumps fixture. Royal with the potential to line. Jigan should have improved for new arrivals in betting shops like this side of Aintree, and what up for that race next time that, but Viking Flagship, too. has every right to come on. The Grade Two Henry VIII

Novice Chase - won by Mulligan 12 months ago ~ is fiercely competitive, with Chief's Song (1.55) only a tentalive choice, while the William Hill Handicap Hurdle also appears - at first sight anyway - to dely solution. This is more than just another handicap, with Celtic Shot and, last year, Make A Stand both wanning this on the way to the Champion Hurdle.

Urimes, the right capable of making similar improvement. eruised home on his seasonal. Albur at Leopardstown in October, and is just 7lb higher today. His chance is obvious, but in such a big field, others make more appeal at the prices, NEW INN (nap 3.05) must be the bet at 33-1. He has returned in fine form this season and has the leading young rider Seamus Durack taking 51b off his back.

Elsewhere, Bells Life (2.15) could be the value in the Rehearsal Chase, while Giventime (1.45) also stands every chance. Centre Stalls would be a certainty for the Wulfrun Stakes at Wolverhampton were it run on grass, but may be worth apposing with Farmost (3.20). proven on Fibresand.

Results, page 21

WETHERBY

12.40 Ardronan 1.10 Edelweis Du Moulin 1.40 No More Hassle 2.10 Strath Royal 2.40 Real Ton-ic 3.15 Second Fiddle

GOING: Good to Soft.

GOING: Good to Soft.

Left-hand oval circust. Run-en of 200yds sightly uphal.

Gourse & NE of town on B1224 near junction of A58 and A1.

Gourse & NE of town on B1224 near junction of A58 and A1.

ADMISSION: Cub 613 (accompanied under-16s free); Tatternalis 52; Course 63 (OAPs 5150) CAR PARK: Free.

JEACHNG TRAINERS: Mrs M Reveley 44-76 (25%), G Richards 24-72 (253%), D Nicholson 17-64 (26%), T Easterby 17-77 (25%), G-12-23%), G Nicholson 17-64 (26%), T Easterby 17-77 (25%), G Lec 3-23 (15%), G Supple 6-66 (31%), M Brennen 4-25 (15%), G Lec 3-23 (15%), G FAVOURITES: 163-449 (43%)

BINKERED FIRST TIME: Master Boston (240).

12.40 STEVE HUMBLES BIRTHDAY NOVICE HURDLE (CLASS D) £3.650 added 2m 7f

BETTING: 2-1 Artronom, 17-4 No Giamminies, 100-30 Revolt. 9-2 Arctic Fox, 8-1 Paleckes, 16-1 Clarical Country, 29-1 others 1.10 DICK WARDEN NOVICE CHASE (CLASS D) 25,000 added 2m 4f 110yds

7 307-7 EDELWES DU MOULIN (15) (C) (D) GROTACTS 7 TO P Carberry CO-251 DAWN MISSION (R) (C) (D) F EASIERD 5 TO P Carberry CO-251 DAWN MISSION (R) (C) (D) F EASIERD 5 TO P Carberry CO-251 DAWN MISSION (R) (C) (D) F EASIERD 5 TO P Riven R 500-251 DAWN MISSION (R) (C) (D) M W EASIERD 5 TO P RIVEN R GO PARTIE CASTILE 2013 (C) M W EASIERD 6 TO B Storey R GB-5B PROCKETTE CASTILE 2019 M/s 5 Brand (R) 7 TO Mr. J Cullen (7) 6- RYSANSHYN (401) R Johnson 5 to 9 - 7 declared - 7 declared - PARTIE CASTILE 2019 M/s 5 Brand (R) 7 TO Mr. J Cullen (7) Feels (Like Gold, 14-1 Mattre Os Musique, 25-1 others

1.40 ATS HANDICAP HURDLE (CLASS C) 25,000 added 2m

9 declared - 9 dec 多金元 SAINT CIEL (USA) (9) (D) そかつからりり F Carberry

2.10 WHARFE HANDICAP CHASE (CLASS B) £10,066 added 3m 11

1 SACT STRATH BOYAL 69 (CD) C Stander of T M Brannan 2 2007 COLONIE. With CHEER (272) (CD) S Review 1 1.5 P Corborny 3 908-2 Wurdung (19) (VS J Sovie, 20) Mr. C Score 4 0000 PERMYPOT (ABS Lot 1) Sovie, 20) Mr. C Score - 4 declared - 1 Standard (19) Mr. C Score - 4 declared - 4 'EMMERDALE' SILVER ANNIVERSARY

2.40 EMMERIDALE SILVED ANNUAL 19.500 added 2m 4f 110vds mFFF EASBY JONER (7) (CD) S retrieval a 10 0 Mr C Borner (3) m221 MACGEORGE (210) (CD) P Lee (10 10 P Minor California (10) Mr C Morrisol (7) Material (7) Materi

3.15 RACING CHANNEL NOVICE H'CAP HURDLE (CLASS E) £3,650 2m 4f 110yds

GLee (3)
GLee (4)
GLe

Manufum count, they ince frendeng seights Raising Stars 92 13th Prinsions that the Unit Device Stars 92 13th Prinsions that the Unit Device Stars 92 15th Moontight Venture Star 15th Mars Gen Star (Mar Barry Reg Star 15th Scotten Green, 9-2 Reach The Clauds, 6-1 Southern Cross, 8-1 Second Fiddle, Primitive Heart, Reinling Stalins, 10-1 Lerisanti, 14-1 Dan De Mari. 16-1 Alias Chiebb, Moonlight Venture, 20-1 others

HAVE TO THUNK (229) (D) F Nicholski 9 n 12 L Commins (5) 6006 A N C EXPRESS (234) / kmg s n 9 J Custory 4122 PRICE'S HILL (252) (CD) K Baley 10 n 5 P Henky (3) 6013 PORTUNES COURSE (30) (CD) J Krz 8 n 0 3 W Marston

Fig. HILL TRIX (7) (CD) is Retrop to 10.3 A Greene Fitted 3-1 Carolers Crusedo 100-23 Fortunes Course, 5-1 Price's Hill. Have To Think 3-1 A N G Sepress, 7-1 Sir Leonard, 10-1 Hill Trix

3.30 WEATHERBYS STARS OF TOMOR-

- MUSIKHILL (18) D NEWBERN 6 TO 0 R Mossey (3)
LEMESDON MANCR (189) (D 12 Weber 6 TH J J R Mossey)
SALLYHOLLEN (231) 1 Secret 5 H 2 IS Berry (7)
SRUGAMER Met J Primar 5 H 2 D Leaby
SRUGA WITH FAME (124) P Proces 5 H 4 G Tomboy 1
COURT JOE (27) J Jerseyn 4 H 2

£1,500 added 2m

Progessive Mulligan to make all the running

The former National Hunt jockey Steve Smith Eccles (right) gives a runner-by runner analysis of today's Tingle Creek Chase at Sandown

ASK TOM: Pulled up in the OH SO RISKY: As his name Haldon Gold Cup on his sea- suggests, a wager on this geldsonal reappearance at Exeter ported to have had a viral infection, he is best watched.

CELIBATE: Started the campaign with a win at Kempton but has fizzled out. The major players here look too good for him.

KLAIRON DAVIS: Won the Queen Mother Champion VIKING FLAGSHIP: This with a minor victory recently. Will take all the heating.

MULLIGAN: Unbeaten until novice, he was a creditable secand to Viking Flagship at Exeter, making the running before tiring at the last. He should strip litter this time and his front-running style will be seen to good.

effect on this track.

ing wouldn't be wise. A decent behind Viking Flagship. Re- hurdler on his day but is not up to this task. OR ROYAL: Disappointing behind Simply Dashing at Ascot but he will be better suited by this two miles. Loves to come off a strong pace and is sure to be involved in the finish.

Chase in 1996 and tuned up great old horse doesn't know how to run a had race, as he proved by taking the Haldon Gold Cup at Exeter on his reappearance. He was put in his he fell in his last two races as a place by One Man last time but will figure prominently here over his best trip.

> Conclusion: I am convinced that we have still not seen the hest of David Nicholson's exciting youngster MULLIGAN.

ot Sports TOWCESTER

HYPERION 12.45 Quistaquay 1.20 Ainsi Solt II 1.50 Texan Baby 2.25 Danger Flynn 3.00 Fortunes Course

3.30 Muskhili GOING: Chase - Good to Soft; Hurdie - Soft.

© Right-hand, undutating clouit. Flunt of 140yd.

© Course is on A5 SE of Iown, Bus service from Northampton staton. ADMISSION: Members 212; Tattersalls 28; Course 25. CAR PARK: Free.

PARIC Free

LEADING TRAINERS: 0 Michalson 27-67 (403%), K Bailey 2-53 (226%), T Forsian 9-76 (128%) Mrs J Paman 5-76 (222%)

LEADING JOCKEYS: W Manager 70-81 (23%), R Guest 6-39 (54%), D Byrns 4-19 (211%), B Powell 4-66 (51%)

FAVOURITES: 728-454 (292%)

ELBIKERED FIRST 1066; None.

12.45 EBF STOKE PARK NATIONAL HUNT NOVICE HURDLE (QUALIFIER) (CLASS D) £3,550 added 2m 5f

505. HEN EIGER (10) N Twiston-Covies 5 10 2 ... J Goldstein (7) 0: CROSS THE NÚSICON (505) G Brosin 6 10 2 ... M Berry (7) orting-life con C CROSS THE RUBICON (SIG) C Stocks 5 10 2...s 5-17 (17 1922) IN THE SECOLO (12) P HOLDE 6 10 2... G Former 50P-2 JET FILES (15) Mis J Person 6 10 2... G Former 50P-2 JET FILES (15) Mis J Person 6 10 2... JET FILES (15) Mis J Person 5 10 2... JET FILES (16) Mis J Person 5 10 2... JET FILES (16) Mis J Person 5 10 2... JET FILES (16) JET FILES (16) JET FILES (16) JET FILES (16) Mis J Person 5 10 7... S Styrme D JULIA (16) Mis J Probeson 5 10 7... S Powell 00003 LUGSAYM PERK (211) Miss C Caros 5 10 7... C Webb (5)

fi P. PISANYAHEI (299) S Brookstaw 6 10 7 Miss H Brookstaw (7) 12 60 WINNETKA GAL (369) N Twiston-Danes 5 10 T . W Marston
— 12 declared —
BETTING: 2-1 Quistaguay, 4-1 in The Blood, 5-1 Jet Files, Swynford Flyer, 11-2 Majastic Affair, 20-1 Lucrative Park, 25-1 Ban Elger, Winnekto Gel.

1.20 PURY END CONDITIONAL JOCKEYS HANDICAP HURDLE (CLASS G) 52,375 Bidded 2m Penalty Value £1,895

Bidded 2m Penalty Value £1,895

1 25-P0 SPRINTANKE (31) (CD) J Long 9 in 0. G Gallagher (7)

2 P5-PP2 AMES SONT it. (FP) (5) G McCourt 6 in 9 Guy Lewis B

2 207-4 MLSEUM (22) P Windows in 6 in 7. ... X Ampuni

4 407-06 UNITED FRONT (8) J Newise 5 in 0. ... X Ampuni

5 P34F. BE BRANE (282) T Ethernique 7 in 0 in 1 Cancombe

6 00-45 DNIGHT SPRINGE GRIL (18) I Wildows 6 in 10. ... E Husbrind

6 00-45 DNIGHT SPRINGE GRIL (18) I Wildows 6 in 0. ... E Husbrind

6 00-45 BLAZE OF SONG (7) D Virtue 5 in 9. ... E Castaghan

8 1933F. GAMBO (199) (1) (D) Ixt Sanks in 0.6. ... W Greathou (5)

9 PP-31U MEMORTYS MUSIC (17) Ixt Madpack 5 in 0. J Powel

10 00-572 MEGA TID (14) J Paulon 5 in 0. ... J Goldstein (3)

10 00-572 MEGA TID (14) J Paulon 5 in 0. ... Music 9 in 10. Mega Memorum skight 10st. True handless one girts. Memory's Music 9 in 10. Mega 70 89 in.

7/1 92 1b.
BETTING: 7-2 Ainsi Soit II, 4-1 Museum, 9-2 Memory's Music, 6-1 Knights-bridge GM, Sprintfayre, 10-1 Be Brave, 12-1 Cambo, Blaze Of Song, 16-1 United Front, Mega Tid

1.50 TOTE NOVICE CHASE (Qualifier) (CLASS D) $5,000 added 2m 6f BOU-4 BANK AFBATE (50) U Perman 6 T 0
20-50 HERRY CONE (24) Mass V Marris 9 T 0
10-701 LUTTERY TOCKET (204) T George 3 T 0
60-203 MITCHELLS BEST (204) A Total Control Control

ওপ্-ও | SPANISH RIVER (23) N Lungard filit () | A Bates (5) ১০০ ঃ | TEXAN BABY (20) (D) ম জৈলকেন-দিলক ওলাও J Goldstein (শ) 2PG-3 THE MEDICANS GONE (10) (0) (3 Sergery 8 To 12 V Statesy 553-27 COUNTRY $TORE (10) (0) 4 F Jones 5 10 G Upton 653-65 FORTYTWO BEE (11) It Series 10 W M Shamati 10 doctared -- 10 poctance BETTING, 7-4 Henry Cone, 11-4 Years Baby, 3-1 Lottery Ticket, 10-1 Raka-zons Beate, 16-1 Earth Avenue, 20-1 Country Stote, Mitchellis Best, 25-1 Fortytvio Dee The Meticans Conc., 33-1 Spanish River

SYLVIA MARSHALL HANDICAP HURDLE 2.25 (CLASS E) $2.925 added 3m GRUNGE (302) (CD) Distancy Street, 9 or 90

C MODE IN COMPANIES TO THE TOTAL COMPANIES OF PROCE MEGABORICH NATION OF THE COMPANIES OF T

Approved by Transfer State and Transfer State of the Education Porce 13-2 Successful Transfer State of the Education State of the Educati 3.00 N E M HANDICAF CHASE (CLASS C) THE CAROLES CRUSHOFF AND

9

5 SHENT ACTION (USA) [637] N. Sosti, S. H. 2. M. Sharmar S. CREZY CRUSADER S. Sarvost S. H. 2. M. Sharmar S. CREZY CRUSADER S. Sarvost S. H. 3. G. Upton 2. H. Sockey B. 1. G. Guy Lewis (3) —15 deckned — BETTING 3-6 Most Intl. 13-2 Brush (Vin Farre, 7-1 Broganics, 10-1 Bally-booken Lewesoon Monor 14-1 Countryman, 15-1 Cleary Grusader, Silent action, Faiher McCarten, Demi Century, 20-1 Ertin Allary, Politeris, 25-1 others

COUNTRYMAN (25) 1 Second 11 4 DEM CENTURY MS / Force 5 11 4 ERIN ALLEY P R VIECES 4 11 4 FOTHER MCCARTEN M Roman 4 11 4

FOUNTAIN VILLE IS Veryord 4 II 4 MARKET SPRINGER 11 House 6 T 4

POURERRIS J Marg 5 T 4 SILENT ACTION (USA) (643) % Soct. 5 Tl 4

€.__.

ROWBOTTOM

ON THE PERILS OF REPORTING ATHLETICS

I woke up and my trousers were around my ankles. Whalever if was, il wasn't good. I was in a place that was hrightly lit and dimly familiar. My hotel room? Did I gel a taxi, Ihen?

No, not my hotel room. A toiles. A toilet in a restaurant. A toilet in a Basque restaurant. In... Spain.

I looked at my watch - how could it be 10 to 5? Because that would mean... that surely would mean I had... where were the others?

Hitching up my crumpled trousers, I unlocked the door good sign that, must have locked the door, you should lock the door - and stepped out, Unlike the restaurant I had visited the previous evening, this was a very quiet, dark place, not at all popular. So unpopular, indeed, that I was the only one in it, although l was not entirely alone.

by the eerie glow of the drinks cabinets, hung huge hams. These Basques. I thought, they do love Iheir meat.

I hadn't noticed the hams on my way in. Then again, I hadn't noticed anything for five hours.

Drink, I reflected, might have played its part in my situation. Some drink had undoubtedly been drunk - a sock brown with a silly pattern. couple of beers, no more. Big worn half-way up a weedy ones, though. And just that one glass of red wine. Or so. But, in the evidence for the defence. the prime exhibit was surely Long Day in Hot Sun. Madrid's Estadio de la Comunidad had turned out to be entirely open to the elements - the relevant one being fire. Iy be termed Exhibit B for the An hour into our early start to the day's European Cup athlctics, the sun had heated us to about gas mark 6. The guys from L'Equipe had stripped the shirts were back on with the Something was nagging at me... the French, always M1 Stylish, you didn't catch them wearing ankle socks with their shorts... Nagging... sports socks, maybe, but they looked OK somehow, meant, not like the typical Englishman abroad white calf ... At me. The bill? have paid it, t couldn't even remember what I'd eaten. Oh ves could.

Momentarily I turned back to the cubicle t had vacated as the thought of what could fairdefence - plate of odd meat regurgitated itself. But that wasn't it. Not the bill. Not the odd meat. What?

side was the courtyard where I had sat with a large tableful of my fellow toilers before that rising feeling - unmistakeable as grief - had drawn me discreetly and swiftly away from the jocund throng.

I wanted nothing more now than to slide between the confsheets of my hotel bed. My hand was on the door handle. Maybe it was a door which simply locked itself as it was swung. shut. Or something like that. Coot sheets, fizzy mineral water, I furned the handle.

To no effect, as far as getting out was concerned. But to considerable effect as far as filling the restaurant with a noise. that resembled an LA cop car at the scene of crime was concerned. After about five minures, the noise was replaced by a deafening silence. Then the phone behind the bar rang.

All around the bar, lit only down to the waist, but by noon restaurant door. On the other And as I had no other pressing husiness, I answered it. I couldn't understand what the man was saying - and he couldn't understand what I was saving. The Spanish phrase for: "I'm sorry, I'm an English journalist and I have fallen asleep in your milet" cluded me.

ti was as I put the phone down that the nagging feeling suddenly turned itself into something more tangible. It wasn't nagging any more, it was shouting in my face. Policemen in Spain carry guns! Guns! t thought: How can I make it very clear - crystal clear, as my old headmaster would have said - that I am not a burglar? Sit by the bar, casually, as if you have fallen asleep there. But they won't be able to see your hands. How will they know you don't have a gun or a knife? Simply stand in the middle of the room with your grinned.

arms in the air. I tried this. It was just Ioo absurd. And of course, 1 thought, it might make them think you've done something criminal and were owning up, whereas the image you need to foster at this poin! in your life is "poor, sleepyheaded Englishman."

Torch beams swung across the windows. I heard the sound of voices. Now the doors were opening, and two very large, uniformed policemen were moving towards me with guns.

My plans were as nothing. Instinctively, I embraced the mternational language of helplessness - palms together as if in prayer at the side of my tilted face. Then palms outstretched beseechingly.

For a moment the two big men looked at me with incomprehension. Then one glaneed at the other and

By now, a rumpled man I took to be the restaurant own er - and perhaps also the owner of the voice on the phone had joined the party, a jacker over his pyjama Iop. As they spoke to him, he stared at me with an expression I find hard Io describe.

So what was it to be? The policemen were taking me outside now. Oh, cool sheets and mineral water...

Assume the best, I thought Hotel Cuzco?" I asked, And one of them pointed his finger in the right direction, sending a poor, sleepy-headed Englishman - Yesssl - off into the streetlit night.

The foregoing obviously, is by way of a personal plea to all designers of sporting stadiums. Designers, please, go that extra mile and cover all the stands. Otherwise it will only lead to trouble...

> SPORT ON THE INTERNET

Reggae Boyz

call the tune

So now we know the draw and what England and Scotland have to do to qualify for the last 16.

world rankings on the official website of Fifa, world football's governing body, England are in the toughest group. England are ranked at 6, up from 12 at the beginning of the year, but Romania are 5, Colombia 9 and even Tunisia are 23. Scotland are out at 36, behind

all three of their group,

Brazil (1), Norway (14)

The site also contains such gems about the official match ball, which "features a newly engineered hi-tech foam layer, which improves on the high compression rapid responce [sic] polyurethane". It is also "softer and faster than its predecessor". Well I'm site on a busy day, but there were problems getting through to various other sections. It does have the feel of an official site with the conservatism one might expect.

A plethora of more interesting unofficial sites is bound to spring up. The unofficial World Cup site

zlad i know that. Perhaps I tried the and Morocco (16).

According to the

of Jamaica

Brilliant Hollioake leads from front

Mark Baldwin reports from Lahore England 264-9 Pakistan A 229 England win by 35 runs

Adam Hollioake led from the front, scoring 86 and taking 2 for 38 as England heat Pakistan A by 35 runs in Labore yesterday.

Hollicake's hrilliant innings from 99 halls was the centrepiece of England's 50-over total of 264 for 9. He then took two important wickets with his medium pace to stamp his authority on his new position as England's one-day captain.

Graeme Hick also impressed with 50, Matthew Fleming made on invaluable 29 not oul at the end, and the War-

Marvan Atapattu hit a defiant

98 yesterday to steer Sri Lanka towards safety in the third and final Test against India in Bom-

India's mammoth first-innings

score of 512, ended the third day on 286 for 5, needing only 27 more runs to avoid the follow-

on. Atapattu, who hit a century in the first Test, missed a second one by two runs when he hands of silly point.

The Sri Lankans, replying to hay yesterday.

new-hall wickets in an eventual analysis of 4 for 58.

Eatham also contributed good 229 in the 49th over.

The Pakistani side were led by the former Hampshire fast bowler, Aqib Javed, who faded to take a wicket in his eight overs. Yesterday's game was the first of two matches against Pakistan A which have been organised to provide match practise before the four-nation Champions' Trophy tournament, which starts in Sharjah next week.

Meanwhile, England's chairman of selectors, David Graveney, said yesterday that the first-class counties' refusal to wickshire all-rounder Dougie give him total control of in-

Brown included two important ternational players was "not a

Dean Headley and Mark Pakistan as the manager of bowling stints and Pakistan A reacting to the 10-8 first-class fowere eventually dismissed for rum vote against the proposal at Lord's on Thursday.

"But I don't see this as a major issue as long as the counties appreciate that sometimes players do need time off - and that we have a very busy international schedule over the next 18

"Last summer we had a gen-

India make late progress after "I think it's important at the moment to stress that there is no perceived conflict here. We are more concerned with how Iernational match is impor-

Pakistan A won toss signs of wear and tear. Rosban Mahanama was Brown run out Silva (48no), the scourge of Indian bowlers over the last year. saw out the day in company with Hashan Tillakaratne, who was unbeaten on four.

pushed a ball from the off-spin-Third day: Sri Lanka won tess INDIA - First Innings 512 (S C Ganguly 173. S R Tenduser 148 R S Dravid 93). ner Rajesh Chauhan into the Atapattu and the nightwatehman. Kumara Dharmasena, who resumed at the stand for the second wicket. The pair batted through the morning session, before Dharmasena was dismissed after lunch for 40, caught at mid-on overnight score of 66 for 1, had thwarted India's hid to snatch

the initiative with a 115-run

Atapattu steadies Sri Lanka India 512; Sri Lanka 286-5 also off Chauhan. Sri Lanka then reached 219 for 2 before India struck three times late in the day as the wicket showed > caught at gully off the seamer Venkatesh Prasad for 20, before Chauhan removed Atapattu and the captain, Arjuna Ranatunga, in quick succession.

Then, though, Aravinda De

Graveney, who is here in England's one-day squad, was Graveney said: "I can see the arguments for making it official for the selectors to be able to withdraw players from county games if they feel they need a tleman's agreement Ihat any requesis from us would he considered sympathetically, and as far as I am concerned it worked well. I certainly didn't have any refusals.

M V Flemming mot our A F Gres b Fazie Akbar Felt: 1-49, 2-65, 3-65, 4-65, 5-170, 6-172, 7-196, 8-234, 9-232.

Bowling: Shahid Nazir 8-0-52-0; Aqib Javed 8-1-45-0; Nanem Ashraf 6-0-31-2: Fazia Afr bar 8-0-40-4; Arshad Khan 10-1-39-0; Shahid Afridi 10-0-48-2. PAKISTAN A Fall: 1-24, 2-40, 3-73, 4-137, 5-157, 6-178, 7-204, 8-219, 9-228.

Umpires: Javed Akhtar and Naza Junior.

Lara decision sparks reaction Malcolm's move is 'big wrench'

Not long ago Brian Lara was the record-breaking hatsman whose signing by a county side would have been greeted with a firework display. The reception he gets nowadays still generates a lot of heat, but it is more in the way of smouldering resentment. A section of the 15,000 Warwickshire membership have reacted to Lara's appointment as captain with a petition questioning the way the West Indies batsman appeared to be rushed into the job as replacement for Tim Munton, last year's injurytroubled captain. The petition organisers are unimpressed with Lara's limited record as a captain and are concerned that "disagreements within the West Indies side could spread into Warwick-well), all the most famous World Cup moments over

some rather cheap disco

"We had no problem with Brian when he was here in 1994 and it was a unanimous decision - involving many former players - to make him captain. Dennis Amiss, the club's chief executive, said. "We debated the matter nature. long and hard once it was deeided there were too many uncertainties about Tim Munton's match fitness for next season.

We talked about Nick Knight and Ned Smith, but decided that if Brian were to be captain he would be even more. focused and committed."

Warwickshire appear to be unusually anxious about heading off a rehellion. Amiss cancelled a prior engagement on Thursday to answer questions at a routine social gathering at Edgbasion.

Devon Malcolm's desire to win a big wrench. "I have had a great back his England place has taken him to Northampton- and Derbyshire people have shire, the 34-year-old paceman having neatly taken the middle stump out of Worcestershire's late, hut forceful bid for his sig-free agent on 1 November af-three-year deal. "To make such a decision there are a hell of lot of things to he taken into consideration, such as my family," he said. "I I have decided to move to give me the extra motivation so I can win by England place back." he made his debut in 1984, was tralia.

time at Derbyshire for 14 years shown me a lot of affection, hut vou have to move on and 1 thought this was the best time

Steve Coverdale, Northamp-Malcolm, who became a tonshire's chief executive, said: "He is perhaps the most poputer rejecting Derbyshire's offer lar player in English cricket and of a new contract, has signed a is much admired as a cricketer and personality throughout the world. There has been enormous interest locally since it became known that we were in for him - it compares to that genhave given it a lot of thought and erated when we signed Dennis Lillee 10 years ago."

Malcolm will team up with his former Derbyshire team-The fast bowler admitted mate Paul Taylor and overseas that leaving Derbyshire, where signing Paul Reiffel from Ausis a little more lively and to do it," he said. has all the qualifying results, history plus videos of great goals from World Cups from 1930. One of the more interesting associated World Cup sites is Reggaeboyz, the unofficial sile of Jamaica. There is great debate going on whether their Englishhorn, hut Jamaica-qualified players should be added to the squad. You can add your vote. The official England site is disappointing. You would be hard pressed to know that there was a World Cup next year, let alone with England playing in it. The Jamaica site puts it to shame.

For a good World Cup archive and statistics site you could do much worse than the International Football Archive, which includes a full World Cup section.

You have to be selective in your web searches. Entering "Fifa" gives you a drum and bass group of that name led by Digital Bob. - Edward Abelson

ADDRESSES

Official Fits site
http://www.tis.com/indechtnl World Cup Francess (unofficial site) http://www.worldcup.fe/uk/index.html
Jamasica's Web Site
http://www.worldcup.com/index.html http://www.regreeboyz.com England's Official site http://www.greenfag.co.uk/ks/ index.html

tional/World Cup Archive http://www.rdesive. demon.co.uk/loobsi/ worldcup.htm Sporting Life http://www.sporting-life. com/spoces/worldcup/re

Unreal and surreal meet in the acid-hued world of the cavorting cockerel "Unreal," Barry Davies by) singing the diabolically clip-sequences they love so Carole Rousseau (1 don't tained the Rest of the ers were enlisted to help and MC Blatter zipped shire's dressing-room".

CHRIS MAUME

SPORT ON TV

said as Scotland found themselves in Brazil's group yet again in the came across like an emas-Ivorld Cup Draw (Eurosport, BBC2, ITV). But he might have been talking about the whole damn show, which was enacted on a stage set constructed by someone with either no taste or lots of good acid. A mad riot of blue, I think it was probably the same set used for this year's Eurovision Song Contest (which I only saw because, er, I was tied to a chair with my eyelids held open like Malcolm McDowell in A Clockwork Orunge).

The BBC wisely steered clear of the music at the beginning of the show, while Eurosport gave us Youssou n'Dour and a French chanteres: who seemed to be called Axle Red (one of Dulux's new range, apparent-awful France 98 anthem. Via much (and generally do so Eurosport's lousy sound it culated Paul Simon circa Graceland. Pele lookalike N'Dour, though, is a genuine star - despite his jacket, which was clearly seem to remember).

joined by a hunch of kids dressed in an overblown parody of street style. dancing with those jerky was his usual slightly donmannerisms so beloved of Janet or Michael Jackson dition like an old, comfy (I can never tell which one modelled on that corneaabrasing blue-and-whiteflecked number that Manchester United wore as their 13th away strip a few years ago (for Coca-Cola was an R in the month, I is which these days). The Bech kicked off in-nonsense (whoever selects their music, which is usually done brilliantly, let themsion). Then after accounts of how England and Scotland made it this far. It was on to the Old Dependables in the studio, where Jimmy Hill pronounced Cup second legs when there bimself "frightened already" and wondered where Paraguay was. The He and Mile Red were ever-prescient Alan Hansen picked Romania as > the seed to be seen with. In Marseilles, Davies nish self, wearing his erucardigan. On stage, the show was being presented hy a couple of TF1 pre-know if she was born free. but she wasn't in chains). Eurosport's Archie Mc-Pherson (who has written on Scottish football for this paper) was doing a perfectly good job, but it's difficult to match Bazza's languidly elegant way with words.

Sepp Blatter was running the show, complete with one of those microphone headsets also popularised by Janet Jackson to a fair number of whistles from the crowd (everyone who set foot on stage to help with the draw also had them, which seemed a little superfluous as no one except Blatter and the TFI couple spoke.

Brazil, naturally, were first out of the hat - or flashy salad bowl, in fact - and Ronaldo was brought on. fresh from the exhibition stead with one of those senters. Roger Zabel and game, in which he'd cap-

World (he must have had to burry, though he didn't have much in the way of hair to dry). As each team was drawn, a player from that country was led on by one of a team of hostesses, to sit by the side of the stage like guests on This Is Your Life and do little else (nothing else, in fact]. It was interesting that out of the 32 two did not look like refugees from an Armani fashion shoot - Paul Ince and Gordon Durie, who were wearing those big football coats, no doubt to fulfil some sponsorship deal (if my cars didn't deceive me. by the way, the Seot, who had been hilled for the afternoun's game as Ian Durie. suffered further nomenclaturial indignity when he was ushered on to the stage as Darren Jackson). Famous former play-my hero from the 1982 World Cup. Marius Tresor. who had the air of an enlightened African head of state. Once each salad bowt was manned, the show resembled the set of the Fifteen To One quiz show, which I was once forced to watch one afternorm in a similar manner in the Eurovision In stark contrast to the dignified bearing of Tresor and the other elder luminaries were the anties of Footix, the infernally irritating masent, which I guess is supposed to resemble the Gallic cockerel. The creature pranced around the stage for no apparent reason - all crickerel and bull if you ask me.

Once the draw was unnately, few interruptions, really, with the draw, including through it all with a thuroughly professional air. There was a cutaway of Glenn Hoddle looking suitably smug when England were given a fairly easy ride, though Craig Brown looked a little taken aback. Back in the studing

(once again the BBC wise. ly avoided the music, a kind of salsa without the spice), Jimmy Hill was playing Nostradamus, "You can look at five of the groups and I can pick the results nim," he said. I wish they'd held him to that. When it comes to the Sents, he was probably right. You can see it now: gallant defeat to Brazil. goalless draw against Norway, apocalpytic praifall against Morocco. They derway, there were, fortu- needn't bother going,

19/RUGBY UNION

Randell at hub of Hart's philosophy

Where on earth do they find them? The All Blacks' anguish at the loss of the great Zinzan Brooke from their illustrious back row has been softened by the emergence of another Maori maestro blessed with the full range of talents plus a few extra. Chris Hewett lifts the lid on Taine Randell, a New Zealand captain in waiting.

So who is the player of this extraordinary New Zealand tour, the noir de la noir of the 1997 All Blacks? Christian Cullen. perhaps? It seems churlish not to bestow the accolade on the world's only untackleable fullback. How about Jonah Lomu, who now defies medical science as well as opposition defences, or Robin Brooke, whose skill at organising four-on-three overlaps contrasts sharply with the to organise anything more complicated than a knees-up in a stand-out player on the current record-breaking rampage through England and Wales is blind-side flanker from Otago whose performances in one of powerhouse positions of New Zealand rugby lore - Peter Jones, Kel Tremain, Ian Kirkpatrick, Mark Shaw, Alan Whetton and Michael Jones are among the luminaries of the past - have earned him a foothold in the grandest of grand traditions. His stock is now remarkably high: no one seriously doubts that he will lead the All Blacks into the 1999 World Cup, always assuming that the ailing Sean Fitzpatrick does not manufacture a Second

it s simply not an issue as far as — expected advancement. I'm concerned," insisted Ran-WEEKEND FIXTURE GUIDE

herent modesty inspires an expression of embarrassed horror when it is suggested that he might fill the chasm at No 8 left by Zinzan Brooke, who retires from representative rugby at Twickenbam this afternoon. "Oh God, please don't put me in that bracket," he pleads.

Yet Randell is that good. His performance in overshadowing the brilliance of Cullen, Jeff Wilson and the rest during the 80-point jamboree against Llanelli at Stradey Park a month ago had John Hart, the All Black coach, singing his praises from the West Wales moftops - "Jeez, did you see Randell out there?" he beamed - and was all the more impressive for the fact that he had spent the previous seven weeks on the treatment table. After four weeks of careful reflection, Hart was equally fulsome when he returned to the subject in London on Thursday. "I sometimes sit down with Zinzan and say: 'Let's talk shout Taine, let's compare the two of you at 23. And Zinny is always quick to admit that Taine inability of British second rows is much, much further along the road in terms of development. What we have here is a young man who made the All Black Worthy candidates all, hut team and captained Otago at oot quite worthy enough. The both provincial and Super 12 level while completing a double degree in law and commerce. He passed with honours, too, Taine Randell, the quietly in- and that tells me something dustrious but hugely effective about his quality. If I have to criticise him, I'd say he needs to get in the gym and work on his strength. But he has all the talents and the maturity to maximise them. He's a natural role model.

At 21 years and 275 days. Randell became the second youogest All Black captain in history when he led the midweek "dirty dirties" during the triumphant 1996 tour of South Africa. Hart now believes he was guilty of gilding the lily in fast-tracking his protegé with such velocity - "he coped pretty well, but it was a hurden he could have done without given There have been a few all the other demands on his things said and written back time" - but the man-boy had home about the captaincy, but long been used to early and unplanation for his startling precocity. "It's furny, actually. I first played rugby at a hometown club where the lower age limit was five. I was four at the time." A law-breaker, eb? If the police had been alerted there and then, England might have heeo spared the clinical try he scored against them at Old Trafford a fortnight ago.

Having watched from the bench as his beloved Otago unveiled a prototype All Black game plan against a bewildered Lions side as far back as 1993, Randell is now a key component of a Test back row at the hub of Hart's oew-age rugby philosophy. Typically, he makes no grandiose claims on behalf of himself or the team. "There is." he emphasises, "no great mystery to what we do out there on

He made his provincial de- hasic skills of the game are but there was a different sort of dell this week. "My sole aim is but at 17, spent three seasons handed down from generation eojoyment to be derived from to retain my place in the Test with the New Zealand Colts to generation - rugby runs in the being up against the wall, from is side and when you look at the rather than the usual one and blood in New Zealand, it's in the being takeo to the limit. It's then quality of the other guys in the captained them while still a full soil - but there is a bottom line that you look at yourself in the squad who have the same thing year short of optimum age. "It to all this and it's simply that we shaving mirror and your eyes in mind, it is a touch enough cull just seems to be the way of have some very good players in stare back at you, straight and unable to offer the remotest ex- faster and wider you play the game, the greater the demands on your skills. If you can't play football under pressure, the whole things falls flat on its face. Take Zinny, for example. He is capable of anything, absolutely anything, but wheo you play alongside him you know he will perform the basics as a first priority, that he will take the ball up properly and make his tackles. There is oo place to hide on the Test paddock, oot with these guys around you.

"It doesn't always go to plan. We very oearly went down to South Africa io Johannesburg a few months back; we'd stayed in Sun City, the temperature was off the scale and wheo we ran out at Ellis Park, we were already jaded. The Boks sensed that and ran in a couple of early tries and we had to dig very deep to get out of there with a "I suppose we instinctively fit win. Now I'd much prefer it if In with each other because the — we blitzed every team we played

Scotland fear cricket score rout at hands of Springboks

it was the South Africa XV of 1951 who inflicted the heaviest defeat on Scotland, However, Simon Tumbull has a strong feeling that the record books will be revised by the Boks of '97 in Edinburgh today.

Scotland, it would appear, do not have the ghost of a chance at Murrayfield this afternoon. Having nailed France and England by record margins, the Mallett-driven Springboks seem destined to conclude their European tour by administering the biggest hammering of the lot.

Jim Telfer, the Scottish Rugby Union's director of playing operations, has suggested it would take "a miracle" to hring about a victory that, in his estimation. would rank as "Scotland's greatest rugby achievement." And The Scotsman, while pondering the possible selection permutations, pointed out that the one most likely to succeed, "playing all 26 squad members at once, is apparently in contravention of the laws".

Such defeatist talk is not the canny Caledonian kidology it might once have been. The ghosts of pre-Christmas games past are threatening to haunt Scottish rugby today.

The nightmare 37-8 defeat inflicted by a less than accomplished Australia is still fresh in the memory - a performance, fereot to last year, when I more faint-heart than Braveplayed at Twickenham with the heart, which had the punters pouring out towards Princes New Zealand Barbarians, We Street long before the merciful wanted to win that one. of blast of the final whistle. The course, but it wasn't a Test. The game came at the end of a long home challenge today will be to season and the pressure was off. mend broken hearts and avoid A Test is something else, hefurther record-breaking damage cause the silver fern is sacred on the scoreboard. and we all feel the responsibil-South Africa may have

And today? What about

England? "I think it will be dif-ity we owe to the shirt. This will suring. For anyone who has managed to erase last seasoo's scoreline from their memory, it finished like this: Eogland 19,

New Zealand Baa-Baas 34.

Thanks, Taine. Very reas-

be serious."

crossed the equator without Joost van der Westhuizen and Andre Jonbert, twin-orchestrators of their 34-15 win at Murrayfield three years ago, and this week been deprived of Henry Honiball, but the releotless progress they have their Hertfordshire-born coach. Nick Mallett, suggests they are capable of emulating the All Blacks of 1993 by becoming the second team to put a half-century of points past Scotland. Anything less than that would represent a qualified success in damage limitation for the Scots, who welcome back their cantain. Rob Wainwright, at claims to be wary of a potential blind-side flanker, but who have backlash. "I hate coming in been denied the totemic presence at inside centre of Alan Tait, scorer of the clinching try in the Lions' first Test victory against South Africa at Newlands in June. With Doddie Weir and Tom Smith also Lions still licking wounds, Scotland would seem to be in danger of losing by a record margin too.

That particular humiliation was inflicted not in the 51-15 defeat against New Zealand four years ago, but by South Africa in November 1951. Ten of the Springbok XV got their names on the Murrayfield scoresheet m that 44-0 rout - among them Aaron "Okey" Geffin, the placekicking Transvaal prop who landed seven of his nine conversion attempts.

Scotland have not beaten the Springboks since Ian Robertson and Chris Rea performed the dummy scissors move which set up lan Smith for the clinching try in a 6-3 victory at Mur-

Referee: P Thomas (France)

made under the direction of rayfield on 6 December, 1969. The captain that day, one JW Telfer of Melrose, will not be expecting a victorious 28th anniversary present, but the SRU's director of rugby will be hoping for a vast improvement on the showing that left him "embarrassed and ashamed" at Murrayfield a fortnight ago. Mallett, publicly at least, against a side like Scotland, who are coming off a bad defeat and being written off," he said.

In his days as a padded-up Oxford Blue, Mallett once came in against Ian Botham - and struck him for three sixes in one over. The fear of Scotland is that South Africa's coach could be chasing a cricket score again this Cardiff and the Welsh Rugby Union are poised to settle their differences and finalise a 10-year loyalty agreement next week. The Arms Park club are the only side from the eightstrong Welsb Premier Division not to have signed a formal contract with the WRU. Once they come to an arrangement they will be paid around £220,000 in back payments from the union.

Cardiff have refused to have television cameras at their ground for league matches, putting the WRU's contract with

Kick-off: 3.0 (BBC 1)

SCOTLAND v SOUTH AFRICA

at Me	urra	yfleld
R ShepherdMelrose	15	P Montgomery W Province
C Joiner Leicester	14	J Small W Province
A StangerHawid:	13	A Snyman N Transvaal
C ChairmersMelrose	12	R MuirW Province
D StarkGlasgow	11	P RossouwW Province
		J De Beerfree State
A NicolBath	9	W SwanepoelFree State
		O du RandtFree State
G Bulloch W of Scotland	2	J DaltonGauteng
		A GarveyNatal
		K OttoN Transvaal
		M Andrews Natal
		J ErasmusFree State
		G Teichmann
		A VenterFree State
Replacements: K Logan (Wasps): F Hodge (Wassoniars); G Armstrom (Nawcasdo): P Wahton (Newcasdo); G Graham (Newcasdo): J Hay (harrick).	Ę	Replacements: J Swart (Western Province): D Van Zyl (Haumainga Punas): A Alticen (Western Province): W Mey- er (Free Scale): N Drotato (Free Scale), to be going on with." His in- things with me," said Randell. our team at the moment. The true. Incredibly satisfying."

Football

Protiball

3 O unless stated

RYMAN LEAGUE Promor Division: Durech
Hamida V Cardentin Athirts, Erfeid v Kingsonart Heyfreig Swifes Visition 3 Herstein, Onford City v Behops Startfred Purfleid v
Aylesbury Lid. States Lid. Harris Berrugh,
Vestein V Behops Startfred Purfleid v
Aylesbury Lid. States Lid. Harris Berrugh, Vestein Berrugh Town First Division: Amy dan Hams Spines; Son, Aldershol Carar V Watring Barton Robert v Trame Lid. Eleancy form
v Bertamant Spines; Songer Reut Lans & Maderhead Lid. Christev Lam v Larcherhead. Croydon v Grap. Article, Humpon & Michael, Lans & Harris Lid. Christev Lam v Larcherhead. Croydon v Grap. Article, Humpon & Michael, Liny den v Grap. Article, Humpon & Michael, Lans &
Harris Lid. Christev Lam v Londy v Enthside States Lam v Bart ing. Edystem Lam v Kindser G. Elbor. Ergitam Fount & Eracket Elborn, Horsham v Chelland Si Peter Humpelbad Town v
Werentee Entern Fount Legistro Lawn v Sanstonal Amvector of Elbor. Bart Humpelbad Town v
Werentee Entern Lid. Chapton v Sanstonal Amvector Third Division. Article Lid. Chapton v Form v East Thurnel. Lid. Chapton v Fluck and Headth. Croyden Adleton v Harbad Town Hend
Headth. Croyden Adleton v Harbad Town Harbad Hengasand v Derkent, Homelmach J. Coordinan Chanals Lewes v Epison & Essell. Imp Town
v Amplay V Sonn: Name v Essell Fung Town
v Randery Mackelm Marten & Landacherouth Frentie, Galsselv v Accoration Starky Hyde Utd.
v Being Daucklard. Marten & Landacherouth
Frentie, Galsselv v Accoration Starky Hyde Utd.
v Being Daucklard. Marten & Landacherouth
Frentie, Galsselv v Accoration Great Haravool
Lown v Stockandop Park Sonds, Germa v Farley Celter: Lancon Lid v Whitely Reim. Netterhed v Flaten Trailinet & Beher Town, Witten
Albern Harrogato Town
V Bown v Harrogato Town
V Stockandop Park Sonds. Germa v Farley Celter: Lancon Lid v Whitely Reim. Netterhed v Flaten Trailinet & Beher Town, Witten
Albern v Harrogato Town
V Stockandop Park

Openion Cown

Del Martens League Premior Division (Retores not on pools coupons): Bromsgroup

Rounds, A Aberdano Uni, Barton Roben V Forest Green Revers, Crawley Soen v Morocole

Oly, Heldroden Town Lourensers, Stomards

Stambort V Gleucester Cry, Tamacrin v Hazrigs Term, Middand Division: Bedrach Uni, Roddich Und, Barton Town v Everham Uni,

Brackle, Town v Hindry Uni Corby Soen v Salaron Codified Town Moro Green v Balanda Rooing Warwelt v Sollau Broough, Runds Town

v Granitians Town, Steptised C, name v Pipel

Rougers VS Rugs, v Stoutenders Seathern De visions Buzzing v Nomport (2007): Chelmolott

Chy v Ramport (Georg): Conderion Josen v Fate
ham Isomic Erd & Behedders v Canadian Town,

Febre Adliest v Baldoot, Texton Soen v Pate ham Town Trowbridgo Town v Windicoule, Wo stom Josephane v House Town Soen Orders

Windston Add Room v Crockerine

Windston Add Room v Texton Controllor v Turned Soen

Windston Add Room v Crockerine

University Cary, Stadio Geora v Crockerine

University Statio Geora v Crockerine

Statio George Statio Geora v Crockerine

Statio George Statio Geora v Crockerine

Statio George Statio Geora v Crockerine

Statio terbury Cay, State Green v Croberhet UNALET SUSSEX COUNTY LEAGUE First Division: Anarda a Halsham Town Chaireler City v Eastbourne four Halshocks Projections of Telecomptor Texts v Whitether Projections of Telecomptor v Portfeld, Redail v Shortham, First mer v Mo Chill, Stadfern Udd Varryck, Hall Text Wick v Hoggen YAKA, John O'Harm League
Cap second round: Langhov Spaces v Solon, Cup second rounds Langua Spots C Second Language ton v Mirriees Blackstone SCHEWFIX DIRECT LEAGUE Promiter Divisione Barrishop Kennis Chard Keen, Distyre for Lown v Gold Down, Bindborf v Paulian Resorts, Cathe Kennis Merophisist Und Missistem Town
v Endebort, Tamter Itown of Errorie Town
v Bradebort, Tamter Itown of Chryshian Town Westbury, Utd v Keympham Keen
Westbury, Utd v Keympham Keen voorthaliems of Martine Endeborts.

Ecclosful Utd v Seiby Torm, Classhounthon Wel-fare v Shefstet Albart v Protestract Collience, hartiget Mater. Victoring Town, Huchroll Torm v Dereby United: Levinodige v Amptinope Wel-fare: Litably MW v Bitry Town, North Femily United v Trackley, Osboth Town v Ossott Albaro. United of Prockley, Claself Town v Claself Albert NORTH WEST COUNTIES LEAGUE First Devisions Alberton Collemas v Ramabettam Uri, Hastingdon v Salford Chr., Holser Old Bays v Alherina for Florisondale Urd v Messiley, St Noters Sown v Entrept League Cop second round: Burscough v Notern Cassiston Gebruels v Glossop North End, Christone v Statistical CM, Corsonald Urid v November Sown v Presont Cables; v Chadrichian, Marine Road v Blackpool Royces, Martineth Sown v Presont Cables; Statisticalistic Urid v Namenghon Town. JEWSON WESSEX LEAGUE: Newtonry v Estatistics, Tation v Resources, Brochestust v Gosport Brough, Christianch v Windoms Town Cowers Sports, Traction Remarks of Section Colleges; South Colleges of Section Colleges. Performent Colleges of Section C Cowes Sports, Treatrant Town v BM Sowrts, Whitcharch Life v Bournamouth JEWSON EASTERN LEAGUE Premier Division: Bury Sown v Woodbridge Town: By Cry v Clarch Down, Febrishone Port & Town v Rader Cown v Randon Rown (Research Town v Randon Rown) Research Cown v Randon V Roman Sown v Randon v Remarket Town. Suddary Wandrers v Great Yormouth Town. Watton Utd v Soddary Town: Whochart v Sownamaket Town. Suddary Mandrers v Great Yormouth Town. Watton Utd v Soddary Town: Whochart v Sownamaket Town. Watton Utd v Soddary Town: Whochart Town Remarket Town. Suddary Renderers v Great Yormouth Town. Watton Utd v Soddary Town: Whochart Lown. Compared Town v Rades Remarket Something Compared Town v Research Cown. Sender Boowing of Straight Compared V Research Town. Rodwing v Bright Rown V Research Cown. Sender V Bacteria Town v Rocespar Amount Times Remarket Cown. Senderer Cown V Research Cown. Senderer Cown. SQUAD TREASH LEAGUE Premier Division Accusing Supprior F BRISH LEAGUE Premier Division Anda & Ballymana, Gontonia v Cusaders Lin Rold v Genaton, Omodo v Colonedos, Dendero Pallydane v Cultomette First Division: Ballydane Carrob, Dendero y Barrago, Dungarinon Swift v Newty, Lurne v Limitady HARP NATIONAL LEAGUE OF IRELAND Premier Division: Killenny v UCD (730)

Rugby League

2 0 unless stated
SR K CUT CHALLENGE CUP First round:
Errunjihon RR v Huß Dockers, Charleston v
West London; Dewsbury Moor v Dublin; Ecclos v Featherstone Lond. Elenborrough v Crostietis; Farmsorth ROB v Lowez, Ideas
ASI v Hunslet Warnors, Leigh EDI2 v East
Hat, London Sollars v Myton Worners, Mitard v Queens, Millom v York Andron; Modgreen v Barrow Island: New Earsench v BRic, Norland v Westfield Hotel; Normanton v Folly Lane, Oulhon v Loughtonagh Universily; Ovenden v Dodworth, Queensbury v Ears Leids, Rechil v Wigan St Jublet; Shan Cross
v Coxton: Sedas v Lacets University; Waterfised v Weestgler Redoubt, West Bowing v Thombal, Wigan Rose BR v Wels; Worlin
Wappa v Fultam Tigerfors, John Moores University v Eastmoot. NORTHERN COUNTIES EAST LEAGUE Pro-mor Division: Curach & Man & Arrord Dec.

Rugby Union WTERNATIONAL MATCHES England v New Zealand (20) .

TETLEY'S BITTER COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP

TETLEYS BETTER COUNTY CHAMPRONSHIP North and Midlands Leegus Once Currbria v Warnaccistro (230) (at Azabas); North Linca 5 Destry v Durham (230) (at Newers); Leegus Two: Luceserather v North Midlands (230) (at Storegate); NORTH AND MIDLANDS LEAGUE Three East Midlands v Staffordshire (230) (at Northamborian (250) (at Cleves Staffordshire (230)) (at Northamborian (250) (at Cleves Staffordshire (230)) (at Northamborian (250) (at Cleves Staffordshire (230)) (at Staffordshire (230), (at Staffordshire (230)) (at Staffords

Newbury (30). Two North: Marchester v Sunda (215).
WELSH NATIONAL LEAGUE Premier Division: Bridgend V searces (20): Landa v Bibby Vale (30). Nest, or to Vale (30). Nest, or to Vale (30). Nest, or to Vale (30). First Division: Aberdany v South Vales Palce (20): Cloros Keyn v Rumony (20): Marshay v South Wales Palce (20): Cloros Keyn v Rumony (20): Marshay v Teachty (20): Marshay v Landausey (20): Lancatown of Control Incit v Portypool (20): Marshay v Itandown (20): Dephan (20): Od Geleval (20): All LEAGUE First Division (20): Od Geleval (20): Voung Marshay (20): Remand v Si Mary s (20): Young Marshay (20): Remand v Si Mary s (20): Young Marshay (20): Remand v Si Mary s (20): Young Marshay v Contant (20): Second Division: (20): Deny v Successor (20): Od (Marshay (20): Instonians v Bective Ranges (20): Maiora v Monkstown (20): Wandows v S-entis (20). CLUB MATCHES: Se margham/Solikil v CLUB MATCHES: Bernangham/Solitul v Bronsgree (230), London Welch v Bressi (20); Plymouth v Berny Hill (230), Rednuth v St Not (230), Rossym Park v Valscell (20); Shefhold v Nottenghym (230), Stourbridge v Worseyler

PTOCKEY

NATIONAL LEAGUE Premier Carnock v Barford Tryers (III). Domosian v Beesten p.20; OdLoughsoners v Contectury (20): Reading v
Guiddord (20): Southgels v Hourslow (20). Redchigton v Soci Granistasi (20) (at Reeds School)
WOMEN'S NATIONAL LEAGUE Premier:
Collon Sociatà Life i Tripers (200): Domositre
v Silough (1130): Heightown v Surton Codificial (1145): Otton Torrapicis v Leyword (20): First Division: Bradford Swithinsbark v Chelmsford highway (20): Loughborough Bulents v
Brachnet (230): Surdichand v Carlettury (1130): Weighboden v Lebessor (120).

Ice hockey BENSON AND HEDGES GUP Finel: Cardit Devis v Air Scotten Eagles (70) (at Shelfeld

BROWESSER LEAGUE: Dorby Storm v Greater London Leopards (730). UNI-BALL TROPINY: Brangil Leopaster Paders v Newcastle: Eagles (730). Thomos: Volloy Tigos v Waldord Royals (80). ITT LSE Worthing Scars v Cancorce Crystal Palace (80).

Other sports

BORNING Warts Boaring Council International su-per-middeweight bits. If Graham Shroffeld, had-er's v. Pazieras (U.S.), locarus Continonweight of agent Riddaugh; with 0 State (provided) v. Middeweight bits. 0 State (provided) v. Middeweight bits. 0 State (provided) v. Middeweight bits. 0 State (provided) v. Middeweight provided v. Middewei

TOMORROW Football

Rugby Union

2 0 grides stated
TETLEY'S BITTER COUNTY CHAMPONSHIP
North and Middanda Linguar Proc Creating v
Loncating CSO: (at Sale). Sooth Linguar
Tive: Goucester-time v Berkship (230) (at Light-man) South Languar Pour: Device v Oxfordship (230 pt Bernstaple).

ray) South Laugus Pour, Deson v Ontardaire (230 of Elimistopie).

SRILTENERNIS VELIVET CUP Fourth round: Abardeon GSPP v Glasgow Harrics, Bogger v Grandeon GSPP v Glasgow Harrics, BSPP, Edhourgh Acads v Desoel: Hawdh v Langhdyr, Harct FP v Arnam; John Forent v Gemock, Krischen V Round, V Gordeniard, Studiendard, V Massolaurgh v Curris, Peetide v Gota; Safring County v Genderiard, Studiendard, V Massolaurgh v Curris, Peetide v Gota; Safring County v Genderiard, Studiendard, V Massolaurgh v Grodeniard, Studiendard, V Massolaurgh v Strategour v Reduced Ednar Dunber, Hawdhall v Reduced Computed in History v Hawdhall v Reduced County of the Count

PIOCKEY

NATIONAL LEAGUE Premier Bosston v Berford Tiger (21); Conceste v Carnock (20); East Granteed v Houndow (20); Galerier's Versional Version (20); Bosston v Beaching (20); Bosston v Bernelle v Geologist (20); (20); Gronley V Fretariets (10); Brodiserde v Suction (20); Chemiston V Weinington (10). Hul v Loughborough Sudents (20); Indian Gymhloria V Hering (20); Leave v Support (20); Leaves v Stabors (10); Orderd Howkey Orderd Univ (20); Shelfield v Hampstead & Weiningston (20). Basketball

BUDY/BBER LEAGUE: Convene Crystal Patron v Peugeot Bullots Emmingham (B.D., Shoffleid Shorts v IT LEE Worthing Bears (B.D., Eactle London Rovers v Thomas Valley Tugers (E.D.), UNI-BALL TROPHY (Group Stages); Chester Jebs v Marchester Garts (E.D.)

Other sports TENNIS: AIP Sense You of Crompions for Ro at Albert Hall, Landon). ACCOLADE TEST DRIVE BEAUTY VS. BEAST

PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROBERT HALLAM

The mad, muddy world of cyclo-cross

Cycling is generally regarded as a summer sport, but the arrival of rain, wind and snow does not put a brake on the action. Cyclo-cross riders relish the challenging weather conditions, as spectators at the recent Open London Cyclo-Cross Champinuships at Addington Hills in Surrey discovered.

Cyclo-cross riders tackle cross-

Cyclo-cross riders tackle crosscountry courses in which the terrain is aften so rough that they have to pick up their bikes and carry them. There are obvinus similarities with mountain bike racing, but in competition terms there is one key factor that keeps them apart: mountain bikes generally have much wider tyres and are considerably heavier. To underline how much crossover there is between the two sports, the London event was won by Manchester's Nick Craig, the current national mountain bike champion.

The London championship is

The London championship is one of the most important events on the cyclo-cross calendar and it again attracted a large crowd. The competition featured some 80 riders, including teams from the Netherlands and Belgium.

The course is regarded as one of the toughest in the sport. In the senior event riders had to complete cight laps of a three-kilometre circuit, Craig winning in a time of just over one hour and four minutes. Roger Hammond, the former world junior champion, was third and took the prize as the first London rider home.

The veterans' event (over six laps) was won by Peter Smith, with Peter Middlehurst taking the junior title (over five laps).

Opposites attract in old rivals' revival act

John McEnroe defeated Bjorn Borg in the Honda Challenge at the Royal Albert Hall yesterday, 2-6, 6-3, 10-7. The tennis legends showed how entertaining play can be on the ATP Senior Tour and enjoyed themselves so much that they requested a re-match at Wimbledon.

It was not the pits, not even the orchestra pits. It was simply beautiful tennis performed in the splendid setting of the Royal Albert Hall as John McEn-3,472 devotees on a excursion to vestervear.

Playing against each other in Britain for the first time since McEnroe ended Borg's five- such as yesterday's reunion of year reign at Wimbledon in 1981, the pair gloried in an array of shots, classical and improvised.

The scenario, a duel of opposites in both technique and temperament, produced much that was expected - McEnroe's sublime left-handed touch play. Borg's breathtaking passing shots - plus one or two surprises. Not least of these was Borg's eagerness to approach the net and make confident volleys, a capacity unsuspected when the Swede ruled Wimbledon's lawns with top-spin from the baseline.

So unusual was the rhythm of the points in these days of explosive serving and pounding groundstrokes that some of the action appeared to be in slow due to the seniority of the pro- unsportsmanlike conduct (he tagonists but chiefly because of belted a ball in the direction of the enduring quality of their timing and anticipation. When it came to alacrity of movement, both men were equal to the demands more often than not, an indication of pride in performance and another sign of how perfectly matched are their

McEnroe, three years the younger at 38, won, 2-6, 6-3, 10-7 (a "champions tie-break". first to 10 points, is used on the senior tour in the event of the two sets being split). The very notion of a tie-break delighted the spectators, many of whom recalled the drama of the shootout at Wimbledon in the 1980 roe and Bjorn Borg escorted final, McEnroe edging the fourth set, 18-16, only to lose 8-6 in the fifth.

> There is a risk of overcooking the romanticism of occasions old warriors, a temptation to make an idyll of idols. Suffice flag. to say that few present, while enwould underestimate the superiority of the current campaigners, headed by the splendid Pete Sampras, in terms of power and fitness. As for style, however, who could ask for more?

"I wish we were still out there playing," McEnroe said. "The tie-break is fine, but I wish we had played a third set. It felt too quick. We're not that old!"

There were moments, admittedly, when one began to suspect the happy coincidence of the two sets being shared, and McEnroe's reputation would he ruined if he failed to sound off at umpires and line judges. The New Yorker was warned for a line judge). McEnroe's eyes may have narrowed to match Borg's as soon as he realised that he had a Craven umpire (Kim Craven), and at times, the American admits, he does become a parody of himself. But even the element of pantomime was taken in the spirit of the oc-

Borg even broke his silence after being foot-faulted during the tie-break to shout to McEnroe, "You get bad calls? You get had calls sometimes?" McEnroe gave his opponent an oldfashioned look and said. "You've got to roll with the

The Swede even involved himself with some laterplay with the crowd, hlowing a kiss in response to the volumble support of a spectator in a gorilla mask waving a Swedish

McEnroe and Borg are keen thralled by what they saw, to extend their trip down memory lane to the lawns of Wimhledon, and mentioned the possibility of a special event on the hallowed lawns to Alan Milis, the Ali England Club's referee.

"I think it's a great idea," Mills said, "and I'm sure it will he discussed. Initially, the idea of staging some kind of special event on the Centre Court or No 1 Court will be put before the order of play committee and then go to the management

In keeping with the retrospective nature of yesterday's both received a presentation from the ATP Tour to mark the world No 1 since the comput- Friday with a 6-4 7-6 win over four.

25th anniversary of the ATP. er rankings began in 1973. They were awarded Waterford The women's world No 1, the 17-year-old Swiss three wins crystal trophies as players who Martina Hingis, eased into the out of three in the group stage contest, McEnroe and Borg have been among an elite semi-finals of the new Masters of the exhibition tournament, group of 13 who have been the of Champions tournament on assuring her of a place in the last

Photograph: Robert Hallam Anke Huber. The victory gave

Albert Hall of fame: John McEnroe and Bjorn Borg before the start of yesterday's match, their first against each other in London since 1981

BOXING

Graham faces an evening of hard work

Age will be of no concern when Julian Jackson, while the colour- land, has made a full recovery Herol Graham and Vinnie ful Pazienza is ever-popular in from a broken neck sustained Pazienza make renewed hids for his homeland - for just being in a car accident six years ago. world honouts on Frank Mal- Pazienza. oney's heavily hyped "Good v Bad" promotion at the Wembley Arena tonight.

The fact that Graham is 38 and Pazienza 34 has done noth-pearance for eight years. Defeat ing to reduce the appeal of an would most likely send the ple don't see. intriguing fight which has stirred Sheffield southpaw tumbling t on both sides of the Atclose-call world title fights fancied Chris Johnson in July. up my mother." against Mike McCallum and

It will be Graham's first defence of his World Boxing Council super-middleweight title, and his first Wembley ap-

Pazienza, from Rhode Is-

Doctors told him he would never walk again, let alone box.

"Herol can't stay with me," Pazienza said. "I bring a lot to the ring - speed, power, movement and I do little things peo-

"I fight more for the thrill. Someone was ugats like me

- David Field putter of 17 years before the day with a 64.

GOLF

New putter-works wonders for Straub

England's Barry Lane is three tournament and duly sank five round five-under-par 66 in the Hong Kong Open yesterday.

place with Italy's Costantino Richard Kaplan. The trio are two shots behind Frank Nobilo of New Zealand.

Straug. 30. owes his seven-shots behind the leader, Tim hirdies and an eagle as he Straub, after shooting a second moved to a 10-under 132 for the tournament.

"I'd had the old putter since The 27-year-old shares third I was 13 and this is the first tournament I've played since I Rocca and South Africa's slopped using it. I putted real well today," said Strauh, who is looking for his first tourna-

Another Englishman, Mark lantic Graham is well-respect- he climbed them following his doesn't do it for the money. I under-par second round of 64 Davis, had set the new mark for ed in America, notably for his outstanding win over Canada's fight like someone has just beat to a change of putter. The the slightly altered Hong Kong hirdies on the eighth and ninth Americao ditched his faithful Golf Club course earlier in the Britain's Laura Davies and the American John Daly are among five pairs sharing third place after the first round of the US PGA-LPGA Penney Classic in Florida.

Under a best-ball format at the event, they compiled a seven-under-par 64 to lie two shots off the American leaders, Barb Mucha and Mike Brisky.

They began to play well on the back nine and closed with holes to go one stroke ahead of Dottie Pepper and Jeff Sluman. RUGBY LEAGUE

Arnold becomes a Giant

Super League newcomers Huddersfield have made their first major signing for next season with the acquisition of Danny Arnold from St Helens for a hargain £50,000.

at 20, represents an impressive purchase. It is also further evidence of the disintegration of the Saints side that won the first Super League title in 1996 and the Challenge Cup for the last two years.

Warrington have also made a significant signing. with the news that the Western Suburbs stand-off, Adam next year. Doyle, aged 22, was rated one of Australia's best prospects as a teenager but last season he was one of six Wests first-teamers sacked.

The uncertainty over the future of Keighley will carry over into the new year after Arnold is a winger of a count hearing in Leeds to proven try-scoring ability and, consider lifting an injunction placed on the Rugby League by the club, which has been threatened with expulsion. was deferred.

The highlight of today's Silk Cut Challenge Cup ties is the visit of the first trish club to take part, the Dublin Blues, to Dewsbury Moor. The Blues qualified by winning an eight-team tour-Doyle, is joining them for nament spanning both sides of the Irish border.

- Dave Hadfield

HOCKEY

Dancer's winter warmers

Barry Dancer, England's new coach, arrived from Australia yesterday and headed straight to the shops for a pair of long johns.

Dancer will take his first England training session on Monday at Lilleshall after watching Premier League games today and tomorrow with the intention of adding to his World Cup squad.

The coach is expected at Teddington today for the game against East Grinstead in which several of the squad will feature. Dancer, however, may be more interested in Jason Laslett, Great Britain's Olympic captain, who has re- we intend to keep our memsisted the temptation to return hership." to international bockey.

Also in the Teddington line-up, with an early opportunity to play their way into Dancer's squad, will be Nick Conway, James Wallis, Danny Haydun and Phil McGuire.

It is an important weekand for Beeston, the Premier newcomers who take on fellow-strugglers Doncaster this afternoon and Barford Tigers tomorrow.

"It's taken us a few months to get to grips with the rather rarefied atmosphere of the Premier." Graham Griffiths, the Beeston manager, said. "We are privileged to be in such an exclusive club and

- Bill Colwill

BASKETBALL

Amaechi debut on hold

John Amaechi's much heralded debut for Sheffield Sharks in the Budweiser League was suddenly put on hold last night. The club's owners decided the former British hasketball." Cleveland Cavalier's arrangebe investigated for possibly contravening salary cap regulations.

The owners meet tomorrow and will decide whether the 6ft 10in, 27-year-old player can make his debut for

Bears in the evening.

Sharks owner, saying: "His decision to play the rest of the season in the Budweiser League vindicates that commitment of all involved in

Wright's fellow owners ment with his new club had to appear not to agree, maybe concerned at the impact Amacchi may have on their own team's chances of winning honours this season.

QUOTES OF THE WEEK

 I want to start tornorrow. Glenn Hoddle, England coach, after Thursday's World Cup draw.

I've knocked England out of the World Cup once, so why shouldn't I do it again? Henry Kasperczak, Tunisia's Polish coach, a member of the team that eliminated England in 1973. ● I did shiver, but only because it was freezing. Berti Vogts, Germany coach. after his side had drawn Yugoslavia, the US and Iran. Rum and coke, bananas, sugar and laid-back, lazy black men. Speaker at the pect in the West Indies. Listen, I could have sex on Saturday afternoon and still knock out Herol Graham. Vinny Pazienza, who fights Graham tonight, asked if having his fiancée with him in London is too much of a temptation.

Caribbean Experience

briefing for the England cricket team, on what to ex-

TODAY'S NUMBER

The number of touchdowns scored - plus 246 yards rushed - by Corey Dillon for Cincinnati Bengals in their 41-14 rout of Tennessee Oilers in the NFL on Thursday. The figures gave Dillion the most productive game ever by a rookie running back

SPORTING DIGEST

American football

Basketball Latrel Sprewel, the Golden State Warrior's leading scorer this season, who was sacked earlier this week for attacking and threatening to kill his coach, has been suspended by the NITA for a very CO2271, RBS 00en SUSPERIORG by the NBA for a year. NBA: Vachington 118 Sacramento 96; Dultas 105 New York 97; Houston 94 Atlanta 67; Me-wawes 92; Charlotte 92, LA Ciopers 100 San Antonio 96 (of).

Cricket TOUR MATCH (Cape town) Final day of three Viestom Province Academy XI 262 685 cvers: X Blabely 77no). England Under 19 of overs! Match drawn.

TOUR MATCH (Cape town) Final day of three.

Viestom Province Academy XI 261 Uselvalv.

Bobby George, better known as "Bob-by Dazzler" because of the bizarre outby Deizzter" Decause of the bizarre out-fits he wears; has received a favourable draw in the Embassy World Profes-sional Championship that starts on 3 January at Finley Green. George, who qualified for the championship in Lon-don late. Thursday night only three weeks after undergoing a serious op-eration on his left knee, will meet a tel-low qualifier. Dutchman Braulio Roncero, in the first round and then el-ther Welshman Sean Palifrey or Austratian Peter Hinkley in the second.

Football

The Hearts manager, Jim Jefferles, is the Bells Manager of the Month for November. Ayr United's Gordon Dalziel took the First Division award. In the Second Division Clydebank manag-Second Division Clydebank manager ian McCall took the honours and another former Rangers man, Neale Cooper, was the Third Divisions choice at Ross County.

at Ross County.

Johan Cruyff was released from hospital yesterday. 10 days after being admitted suffering chest pains. Cruyft, 50, who underwent by pass surgery in 1991 after a heart attack, was diagnosed as having angina, but surgery will not be necessary. Edgar Davids, the Dutch International midfielder, has moved from Milen to Juvenius on a five-year contract. to Juventus on a five-year Contract.

ENGLAND LINDER-21 SQUAD (European Under-21 Championally play-off second leg vigrases, Norsich, 17 Decembert: Wright (p-sect), Bernatt (Kirchestrough), Kirchestrough), Kirchest (Contract), Respect (Circhen), Eventus (Reservation (Reservation)), Kirchest (Circhen), Buttery (Circhest), Germelle (Circhen), Armstrong (Nottingham Forest), Hughes (Arsmail), Carragher Liverpool), Oussite (OPR), Butters (OPR), Lumpard West lami, Bullock (Barriely), Heslay (Location), Securotif (psychol), Device (Southampton), Obsert (I person), Illegation (December 1), Securotification (December 1), S WPGET QUALIFYING 9CHOOL (Arosins, Port Leading Engl scores (GB or unless stat-adt: 280 L Philo (US) 71 70 72 76 250 L Nicenz

Leading second-round scores (Aus unless stated): 135 R Alamby 70 65, 136 2 Applicht 68 68, 137 P Senore 68 69; R Stephens 67 70; T Carolan 70 67, 138 C McCourt 70-68; R Swan-T Caroken 70-67, 138 C McCourt 70-68; R Gwein-son 72-66; Multiflew King 68, 72, 139 C How-oil 70-68; S Thompson (NZ) 69 70, 140 L Parsons 72-68; A Bornhorme 72-68; C Gray 71-69; J Chappy (Pr) 70 70; C Jones 70 70; S Sophil (NZ) 72-68; 141 G Chalman 71 70; R David 69, 72; S Roberson 72-69; G Norman 73 68; R Pamping 72-69; II Howell (Engl) 71 G Selected: 143 A Collary (Soo) 74-69; 144 K Enksson (Swe) 78-68, 145 R Byrd (US) 73-72.

ice hockey NHL: New Jersey 4 Pittsburgh 0; Ottawa 3 Los Angeles 2, Colorado 2 Chicago 1; St Louis 4 Toronto 3; San Jose 3 Vancouver 2.

Ice skating Derrick Delmore, of the United States, Demick Delmore, of the United States, produced a near-perfect performance on Thursday night to win the men's it-ite at the World Junior Flgure Steating Championships, in New Brunswick, Canada, Delmore, a student at north-em California's Stanford University, wor the free skate to edge out Sargal Davy-dov, of Plussia, Yunfei LI, of China, freiched third.

Luge Radim Lanca, of the Czech Republic, remains paratysed despite surgery af-ter a crash during fraining for today's World Cup race in Igls, Austria, Lan-

ca had a six-hour operation in the near-by Innsbruck University Hospital fol-lowing the accident on Thursday when he lost control and was cataputted into the side railings half-way

Motor racing Formula One's nulling body the Federation internationale de l'Automobile yesterday said it had accepted Stewart Grand Prix's entry for next season after receiving assurances that the team had the necessary financial means to complete the season.

Rugby Union Wresham has been awarded a 1999 World Cup Group game after the sel-out success of this season's friendly

RACING RESULTS

12.50; 1. 11°S WALLACE (L. Aspell) 4-5; 2. Swan Street 9-1; 2. Province 4-1 9 ran, 3-1 tim Lord Nitrogen (5th), 4-1; 4 Poulton, Lowes; Tobe; 5440; 5190, 5170, 5140 DF: 61850 CSF: 63658 Thisset: £140.77 Tho:

1.20: 1, SILENT GUNS (D Salter) 6-1; 2. Gien Mirage 9-1; 3, Colette's Choice 11-1 18 ren. 7-2 far Shrebs His turssealed rid-ri, 9 1 (G Edwards Minehead) Tote: ES.20: E3.00, E3.60, E2.30, DF: ES2.40, CSF: £5388. Tricast £53275. TAO. £21420 (per

1.50: 1. BOARDROOM SHUFFLE IL AGpell) 1-7 fav, 2. Pennymoor Prince 20-1; 3. Artistic Plan 25-1 4 ran. 12, det. U. Gifford. Findon). Your £110. DF; £480. CSF- £353. Only three finshed.

2.35: 1, MALMOOD CASTLE IA Thorriton) 5-1; 2. Special Account 9-1; 3. Cliftoni Set 1: 4 Set 7 ren. 10, 37.6. [R Alnex Bland-ord Fount). Total 200; 53.30; 54.80 DF $15.50 CSF; $2380''. Only three finished. 2.55: 1. SUPREME CHARM (Mr R Wait-key) 3-1; 2. Winston Run 3-1; 3. Not For Parrot v.-1 10 mm. Evens lav iranos (pulled up). Nh. dist. (K Bailey, Upper Lembourn). Tota: C100: C10 C130. C190. DF: C540. CSF. C1158. Tho: C10.20. NR: Benehl-in-Kind. 3.36: 1. SADLER'S REALM (G Tormey) 2-1 tay; 2. Walter's Destiny 6-1, 3. Nusi-cal Monarch 18-2, 7 ran, 2, 6, (P Hobbs.

Minehead), Tota: £300; £130, £220 DF Placecost £18070 Quadrott £1400 Place 5: 124259 Place 5: 08919

12.40: 1. SUPERBACK (C Maude) 4-7 tax. 2. Soldier Cove 8-1: 3. Indian Mediar 9-1 8 rat. 9.11/4. (M Pipe) Toke E170; E131 Euro, E220 DF: E390 CSF: £859. Tho; E150 NR: Meadow Dencer.

1.10: 1. JASON'S BOY (R Johnson) 5-2; 2. Sense of Yakus 20-1; 3. Seshawk Re-plever 11-8 tov 5 ma. 5. 13. (J Bradley) Total 0260, 0150, 0240, DF: 64(3), CSF; 028,71. 1.40: 1, GUTTERIDGE (Nr A Found) 9-4 fav; 2, Dietant Storm 5-1; 3, Beryfitum 5-2 14 ran. 37. 4 (F Evans) Tota; (3.00; (1.40, 0.23, 0.240 DF: (3.40 CSF: 178.75 Tricast: 0.3071 Trio: (2.40)

2.15: 1. GROCKND NUT (B Powel) 4-5 tay: 2. Lord McAlturough 4-1; 3. Stage Fright 20-1 8 ray, 12, 5. (R Buckler), Total 1:190; 1:10, 1210, 1300, DF: 2500, CSF: 0453 2.45: 1. LAREDO (Mr S Durach) 9-2; 2. Cul de Sac 3-1; 3. Brambieldi Dulae Evens tev 15 nm. 9. 25 (Noci 7 Chance) Tote; 550; EtaD (Eta Cho DF: E750, CSF: £1578, Toto; £220, NR: Torka.

8-1; 2. Toskano 7-2; 3. Lsuran's Theasure 10-1, 10 ram. 9-4 fav Indian Delight, 3, dist (R Alner) Tota: 06/70; £130, £180, £350, DF. £110, CSF; £34.78, Theast; £19044, Tho: 3.50: 1. KADOU NONANTAIS (J.A.Mo-Carthy) 4-1; 2. Ties Frênch 13-2; 3. Danny Bell 5-2 km 16 rpd. 11, 7; (O Sherwood), Totas 1300; £120, £260, £150 DF; £1950, CSF; £3051, Tro; £1020, NR; Pollys Sister

Placepot: E14.20, Quadpot: E2.80.

Place 6: £2502 Place 5: £19.4

3.20: 1. MARKET GOSSIP IM: J Tg22rd)

SANDOWN 1.00:1, COUNTRY BEAU (R Duniscody) 3-1 far; 2. Stycab 18-1; 3. Bracey Run 25-1 21 fan. 8, 3. (J. King, Swindon), Tota: £330; £150, £26, £800. DF: £2120. CSF; £47:8. Tric: £222.40.

1.30: 1. WISE KING (C Liewellyn) 3-1; 2. Bengers Moor 3-1; 3. Amath 5-1, 6 ran. 9-4 fav Dantes Caveller (4th), Nk, 1½, (J Old, Wroughton), Tota: £3.50; £190, £2.70, DF: £700, CSF, £1122, NR: Smuggler's Point. 2.09: 1. SONG OF THE SWORD (3 Bradley) 11-4: 2. Prospero 9-1; 3. Fullys-ma Crest 13-2. 9 ren. 7-4 fav Nosy Miner (pulled up) 6.3'/... (1 Old, Wroughton). Totac 6390; Cleft, E280. $190. DF: CM-80. CSF: 12847 Tibe: $87.0 £2847 Trio: £18.70.

2.36: 1. OATIS REGRETS (A Maguire) 2-1: 2. Linton Rocks 6-1; 3. Philip's Woody 4-1 6 ran. 9-4 fav Redsennyoursell (Isl.), 2/s., 1/s. (Wass I Kngft, Wartage); Totac CAUC; 2270, 2180, 2180, DF, 28040, CSF: 276.55 Tricest: £31406. 3.10: 1. SAMILEE (O Bridgwater) 2-1; 2.

What A Hand 13-6 fav 4 nan. 1. (P Hobbs, Minchend). Total: £280. DF: £290. CSF: £529. MF: Lutle Martina. Only two finished. 3.40: 1. TOUGH ACT (M A Regeral) 8-1, 2. Nejesty 14-1; 3. Running de Cortsy 9-4 ty. 12 rau. 5, TL (Mrs A Penett, Puborough) Tota: $330; $200, $270, $190, DF: £5460 CSF: £8942 Trio: £9450. Jeckpot: not won (pool of $5,841.74 carried Placepot: £18650: Quadpot: £1860.

Place 6: £21398. Place 5: £12792.

international between Wales and Ro-mania. The Welsh Rugby Union yes-terday confirmed Wrexham Football Club's Racecourse Ground and terday confirmed Wraxham Football Club's Placecourse Ground and Straday Park, Lianelli as the two additional venues in Wales' qualifying pool. Wales will play their fixtures at the £120m Millemium Stadium, which is currently under construction on the former Cardiff Arms Park site. The WRU also confirmed yesterday that Twickenham is being considered as a possible location for this season's Weish Cup fired.

Weish Cup fired.

DUBAI SEVENS Quaerierfinata: Fij 24 Arpertim
12 Natol 17 Scotland 7, Western Samon 2 Worbigs International 30, New Zoeland 7, Al S Ausvala 7, Sensi-Amala: Fij 40 Natol 12, New Zoeland 2
4 Western Samon E. Final: New Zoeland 2
5 Fij 21. Plette Quaeria-Final: News Zoeland 2
6 Fij 21. Plette Quaeria-Final: News 22 Conscla 17, Zmbabwe 21 Morocod 7, USA 5 (Dougle
1, Maracuters 24 Finals Froggles 7, Sensi-Amala:
Zmtgelwe 15 (News 7, USA 2) Maraudors 5.
Pinet: Zmbabwe 19 USA 17.

Silk Cut's 24-hour run of 4491 nauti-cal miles in the second leg of the Whit-bread Round the World Race has given bread Round the World Race trae given the boat the world record for speed. The World Salling Speed Council confirmed yesterday that the 4491 nautical-mile stretch that finished on 20 Nowember had beaten the mark set by Toshiba in her transatiantic qualification possage in July. The 10-boat Writbread fleet will leave Frementle on 13 December for the ,1250-mile third leg to Sychae.

SKIING
WORLD CUP PREESTYLE MCGULS EVENT
(Tignes, Fr): Women: 1 E Mchrtyre (US)
24Peps; 2 M Elman (Swe) 2420; 3 T Micharmaye
(Ac) 2594; 4 C Gag (fr) 2470; 6 A Berbyre (Der) 2515; 6 C Bodiner (Swi) 2420; 7 M Martin (Frig.
2528; 6 T Solonya (Linnan) 2273; 9 T Weightmich
(US) 2238; 10 S Solrnitt (Swi) 2229; More
T Hember (19 38650s; 2 J Moseley (US) 2545;
3 L Not (Frig. 2541; 4 A Refeation (Arm) 2520; 5 Hone 2578; 7 F Ougler (Frig. 2589; 8 Roper Heitender
(Pem) 2494; 9 Max Wilson (US) 2485, 10 J
Rwyndolck (Swe) 2484.

MAHINDRA INTERNATIONAL (Benebay) Sami-finate: Janahar Kram (Pah) ist J. Power (Can) 5-6 12-15 (0-5 15-13 5-17 Phon (Sco) bt M Chaloner (Eng) 15-5 6-15 5-17 5-11

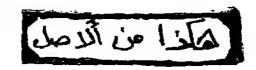

Table tennis PRENCH OPEN CHAMPIONSHIPS ILYO

PRENICH OPEN CHAMPRONSHIPS (1, yours) Constitying groups: Men'e singles (estected); A Perry (Eng) to S Remen (and) 22-20 21-2; A Perry (Eng) to S Remen (and) 22-20 21-2; A Perry to H Essortia (Cumy 21-13 19-2) 21-20; Perry to K Aribida (Mun) 2-17 32-21 21-3; B Billington (Eng) bit P Jectisson (N/2) 22-20 21-25; Billington bit S Calliess (F) 21-32 22-20 21-25; Billington bit S Calliess (F) 21-32 21-12; Women's singles; N Destion (Eng) bit / Hermandes (Sp) 22-20 21-35; Destion feet to A Costee (F) 21-14 10-21 56-21.

MASTERS OF CHAMPIONS WOMEN'S TOURNAMENT (Franklur, Ger): Group 1: Althings (Swit) bit A huber (Ger) 64 7-5 Group 2: Miljoli (Cros) bit L Daverport (US) 2-5 6-2 52. SENIORI SINGLES AND DOUBLES CHARM-PICHSHIP (Royal Albart Hall, London): Senior Singles (Accord Grospi): J McErroe (US) bi, Borg (Swe) 2-6 6-3 (McErroe wor deciding behraik 10-7).

Sheffield's announcement that Amacchi was donating his fee to the Manchester bas-Sheffield against Worthing kethall project run by his Immer junior each, Joe For-Amaechi's signing was ber, also appears to have left announced yesterday morn- the owners unimpressed. ing with Chris Wright, the

TODAY

- FA Carling Premiership

 1 Aston VIIa v Coventry City 2 Blackburn v Bolton
- Derby v West Ham .
- First Division 8 Bury v Middlesbro 9 Crews v Huddlers
- 16 Reeding v Chartton 17 Swindon v Oxford
- Third Division
- ednestord v Derling lacelesfield v Welsal
- Cambridge Utd v Stevenage
- Auto Windscreens Shield
- Bell's Scottish League
- First Division 36 Airdrie v Dundee 37 Falkirk v Partick 38 Raith v Morton
- 39 St Mirren v Hemilto 40 Stirling Albion v Ayı Third Division
- Tennents Scottish Cup First round East File v Stranger Fraserburgh v Clyde Triverness CT v White
- GM Vauxhall Conference
- Dr Martens League
- TOMORROW FA Carling Premiership
- FA Cup second round Boumemouth v Bristol City (U)
- Bell's Scottish Leag Premier Division

Wanchope's wierd route to renaissance man

Two and a half years ago Paulo Wanchope was on a basketball scholarship at the University of Southern California. A career in football was not in his plans, let alone in Derby, a town he had never heard of. Today he is being hailed as one of the Premiership's most promising foreign legionnaires, which seems only appropriate for a man whose middle name is Cesar. Nick Horris A 21-year-old, 6ft 4in Costa Rican has entranced English football this season, flailing his arms and intriguing observers with the efficiency of his irregular style. Paulo Wanchope's spontaneity gives foreign imports a good name.

On his Derby County debut, against Manchester United at Old Trafford in April, he produced one of his trademark gangly runs, fended off all attempts to dispossess him by dodging and weaving, and finished the move with a measured left-foot shot. Derby won the match 3-2. inflicting on the champions one of only four Premiership home defeats since 1992.

reports.

Wanchope, shyer in conversation than on the pitch, seems genuinely modest as be recalls the game. "Really against Manthe ball straight into the box. If I have the space, I try to go." His analysis does not do full justice to his methods, but he concedes that his first sport has influenced his game.

"Sometimes I make the moves of a basketball player to get away from a defender or to very important." The statistics certainly suggest this is beneficial. Despite a cartilage injury that goals in 12 games since.

As a teenager, the aspiring boop-shooter left Costa Rica for west coast America. By 17, be had won a sports scholarship, and at 18, all he thought about was basketbell. Then he went home for a holiday and was spotted playing football with his friends. "The manager of Herediano [one of Costa Rica's leading sides] saw me play and he asked 'Who's that player?'. And he gave me the opportunity to be in a professional team and I decided to stay." Within weeks he was a firstteam regular and within months he was drafted into the national squad for his country's World Cup qualifying campaign, where his performance against the United States attracted the attention of ex-Arsenal defender and part-time agent, Bob McNab. In January this year, McNab arranged a trial for Wanchope (and his compatriot Mannicio Solis) at Queen's Park Rangers. The pair were rejected, but McNab telephoned his old friend I'm Smith and the Derby manager did not hesitate in signing them both.

Thus far Smith appears to have done little to temper his new star's flamboyance and has settled for telling him where to play, but not how. "The manager cannot do anything in the game. [He] cannot be near you telling you 'do this' or 'do that' specifically. You have to be spontaneous," Wanchope said. It is something he believes Smith sees as an asset rather than a problem. "He signed me chester United I didn't beat a because he saw that my style is lot of players," he said. "I took good, If I change my style it's not Wanchope." (For the record, he pronounces his name "Wancho-pay"). "It would be very boring if a player always does the same. And it will be easy to defend if you always do the same." He adds that his style does occasionally upset Smith, but ultimately he believes the end of use my arms in the box, so it's his attacks justify their means. "Sometimes he [Smith] argues with me when I don't do it simple or when I don't pass the ball. kept him out of the game for four But that's part of the game, bemonths, he returned to action I1 cause if I take three or four or three and lose the ball, that's ing a part of the Pride Park setthe risk of the game. We have to take the chance. If the striker doesn't take the chance, you never score, Wanchope's role in Derby's recent renaissance is part of a wider internationalisation at the club. He is one of 11 overseas players currently in the squad. but sees their common aim as a uniting factor rather than their diverse origins being a barrier. "In football there is a football language that is always the same. lplayers) and score, nobody it's not a problem," he said. He - Boyz of Jamaica prog says nothing, but if I take two appears to genuinely relish be- ahead of them.

The Wanchope creed is 'you have to be spontaneous'

up. "It's very exciting. We have a good stadium and it's nice to play in a full house with a good pitch, good team-mates. So I'm very proud to be in Derby." He was also proud to have represented his country in World Cup qualifying, and despite the disappointment of his side not making it to France next year, he can take some consolation that he was Costa Rica's highest goalscorer as Mexico, the US and the Reggae

His immediate ambitions in English football are clear. "For this team to be in Europe and to end in the top six in the League," he said. He added: "And to score lots of goals. And I don't like to say how much goals I'll score. I only wait until the season is finished and I'll see."

Whether or not he can match the strike-rate of the Premiership's leading goalscorer (and his opposite number for West Ham today, John Hartson) remains to be seen, but at least

Success comes before beauty

FAN'S EYE VIEW
NO 235
LINCOLN CITY BY GARY PARLE

Saturday 22 November abouts. A car full of fans somewhere in Colchester.

The tension had been mounting ever since James Alexander Gordon had read out the results of Exeter City and Notts County. Both had drawn. Barely had he said Peterborough United than we knew by the tone of his voice that they had also drawn.

"We are top of the League, say we are top of the League," chorused five voices in unison. Such was the excitement that we missed our turning and paid an unscheduled visit to Colchester town centre. Never mind, because Lincoln City were top for the first time in several seasons.

Two seasons ago such a position at the head of the Third Division was unthinkable. On the pitch we were in a similar position to Doocaster Rovers, well adrift of the pack, but off it we had none of the problems that blight Rovers. After sacking two managers in 42 days, John Reames, the City chairman, turned to a man who had been out of the game since be was sacked by Preston North End after seven successive defeats -

Beck is probably one of the most loathed managers in football - at least by fans at any clubs other than Cambridge and Preston. His appointment wasn't exactly grected with enthusiasm by City fans, but he kept his promise to keep us in the

In his two years at Sincil Bank he has attracted controversy, but on the positive side he has brought to Sincil Bank a set of players who do not easily accept defeat and, interestingly for those who despise him, many of them have played for him in the past. If fans don't like him at least there is no short- around the country, but if we age of players prepared to are still singing "We are play under him at more than top of the League" in May Beck's game plan is sim-1997, 5.05pm or there- ple. Every player is a team player who knows where every other player will be at any time. The ball is moved into the opposition's defensive third as quickly as possible with the aim of winning throw-ins, corners or creating a scoring chance. One loan signing this season failed to make an impact because he was an individual and wouldn't conform.

Some might say such a system produces players who are nothing more than Gareth Ainsworth to Port Vale for £500,000 proves that individual talent can still shine in a disciplined set-up.

It doesn't always work and many times a long ball up field fails to find its target, or its intended target hasn't done his job and is out of position. The result is an endless chorus of boos and cries of "Play it to feet". It isn't pretty to watch at

Speed or Newcas times, but it is effective. Opposition managers and even City fans say it is so predictable, but if that is the case why do most teams struggle to cope with it? This season the goals

والمراجع والمستوان المصيني

haven't flowed for City which is unusual for a Beck side. He keeps reminding us that at Cambridge he produced sides who were top scorets in the country for several seasons. Our paltry tally of 20 in 19 games (up to 22 November) is countered by a defensive record of conceding just 14 and keeping seven consecutive clean sheets away from home.

Being top in November, while very nice and far preferable to being bottom, will mean nothing in May. There is room for improvement, not least in scoring.

Many Lincoln fans will continue to moan about how City play and Beck will still be reviled by fans

Harford can take QPR job

The West Bromwich Albion tion. Barker, a former assistant clubs abided by a code of conmanager, Ray Harford, is free manager at Sheffield Wednes- duct in the Football League, to take over at Queen's Park day and manager at Shrewsbury, with the final word resting with Rangers after an "amicable Stoke and Notts County, was an independent tribunal, it agreement" at the High Court appointed as Albion's chief yesterday.

Albion were due to go before a judge in chambers today for Trewick, remains the club's No an injunction preventing Har- 2 as Albion begin the search to ford, who resigned late on find their third manager of the Wednesday evening, from mov- year. John Barnwell, chief exing. But after discussions outside ecutive of the League Managers' court, the two First Division Association, said the case highclubs issued a joint statement lighted the need for a code of that they had reached an "am- conduct in the Football League icable agreement", as a result of similar to the one already opwhich Harford was free to join erating in the Premiership. QPR "with immediate effect".

to accept this resignation, claimecutives would make no further comment "at this stage".

following Harford's resigna- LMA believe if managers and scout by Harford in September.

Albion's coach, John

"When the Premier League Albion had initially refused was formed in 1992 we sat down with the new chief executive ing that they required six Rick Parry and drew up a set of months' notice of his intention rules which have worked very to leave. Harford and club ex- well for both parties," he said. "It's very regrettable that the clubs should lock horns legally West Bromwich put their over this and we feel a code of chief scout, Richie Barker, in conduct would eliminate these caretaker charge of team affairs undignified squabbles. The would cradicate such disputes.

"For the LMA it just flags up what we have been saying about the need for a code of practice to be included in the Football League rules."

 Liverpool's teenage striker Michael Owen has been called into the England Under-21 squad for the first time to try and help salvage their hopes of reaching the European Championship finals. Owen is included for the second leg of the play-off with Greece at Carrow Road on December 17 when England must overcome a two-goal deficit.

England won their qualifying group by seven points but scored only seven goals in eight group matches, with another blank in the play-off first leg in Crete. - Jon Culley

England Under-21 squad, Sporting Digest, page 21

Women of Tehran storm stadium in defiant mood

AROUND THE WORLD BY RUPERT METCALF

IRAN

Tens of thousands of Iranian football fans, including women who ignored an official order banning their presence, packed Tehran's Azadi stadium on Tuesday to welcome home the national squad, who qualified for next year's World Cup finals last weekend.

An estimated 70,000 flagwaving fans, with about 3,000 young women in their midst, cheered their team. Observers said the women rushed through gates despite police attemots to enforce a ban on female fans attending the event. Once inside, they were seated in separate stands from the male fans.

State radio and television earlier read a statement by the Iranian Football Federation saying women would not be admitted into the stadium.

able space and in order to safeguard Islamic dignity, sisters will be strictly prevented from entering the Azadi stadium," the statement declared. "Sisters can witness the fervent ceremonies [on live television] at home." In 1994 Iran hriefly suspended the ban oo women going to football stadiums, which dates back to the 1979 revolution which toppled the Shah. But the authorities reimposed the ban after a few weeks following protests by conservative Islamist newspapers, which said the womeo's presence was at odds with norms of cootacts between the sexes.

Iranian football administrators have said that the ban was partly prompted by the "immoral" language and behaviour of some fans, which they claimed made football possible targets.

"In view of the lack of suit- games unsuitable as family outings.

Vieira's success in steering Iran to the finals, it looks as mal" in South America. though he will be replaced as coach soon.

According to the president of the Iranian football federation, Dariush Mostafavi, the Brazilian "was appointed as a temporary coach, and we are looking for a new coach."

Vieira had just been appointed as Iran's Olympic team coach when he took charge of the national team after the former coach, Mohammad Mayeli Kohan, was sacked last month.

"After the huge celebrations we owe it to our people to raise our standards." Mostafavi said. He named Johan Cruyff and Carlos Bilardo, the former coach of Argentina, as Meanwhile, despite Valdeir Away from the World Cup, club football continues as "nor-

> A horrendous tackle by the Argeotinian international midfielder, Sergio Berti, marred the first leg of the South Americao Supercup final on Thursday as Argeotina's River Plate held on for a 0-0 draw away to São Paulo in Brazil.

Berti raised his left foot and kicked the São Paulo midfielder Alexandre in the genitals early in the second half. He was instantly sent off by the otherwise tolerant Chilean referec. Mario Sanchez.

"That was criminal." the former Braziliao international Rivelino, who was commeotating for television, said. "If he [Berti] had hit Alexandre's knee, he would have crippled the lad."

One tongue-tingling taste of our Peanuts Indian Relish, or our spicy new nuts and you'll happily kiss all Oriental Dipped.

Get reacquainted with our Dry Say helio to Planters new Crunchy Roast or Honey Roast Peanuts.

By rights, you'll soon be singir their praises from the rooftops. Albeit, an octave alker and Dixc

leager to follow the

Tabe.

4.00 - - -

THE GAFFER TAPES

Franzi's got a dull reputation but he's actually a laugh-a-minute guy

Anyway, after I'd left the motor in Tesco's car park over the road I came back to find three of his mates in a meeting with the chairman. All were wearing big coats, thick moustaches and bulges where most people keep their wallets. Either Mark Lawrenson, Graeme Souness and Tom Selleck were joining the board or there was something even more sinister going on. Miss Moneyecu, our latest secretary, explained they were a party of Belarus businessmen who wanted to buy the club. They were offering a cash deposit - in a variety of currencies. They didn't need a receipt as they were sure Sir Hirem Firem's word was his bond. can enjoy them.

sson for £750,000 from IFK

Little, was known to be chasing the 25-year-old, along with the Leeds United manager, George

Graham, Alexandersson, however, will have to wait a week to make his debut as the club have not received international clearance in time for him to play sson, who has signed a three-and-a-half year deal and will watch his new club against Barnsley, will be expected to provide goals from midfield, having scored seven in 25 games for Gothenhurg and deal with a finance house which Dalglish, who is also keen on the late Matthew Harding. The ligament damage playing for will enable them to buy Stam-deal, hased on a 10-year investment bond from SBC Warhurg Dillon Read, will also mean the club can clear their dehts and complete the rede-

Mark Bosnich, has received a

Uefa Cup reprieve from the Australia coach, Terry Venables.

He was due to fly out on Monday with the other English-based players in Venables' squad to play in the Confederations Cup in The Aston Villa goalkeeper.

velopment of the stadium.

Chelsea have signed a £75m

three for Sweden.

could happen soon afterwards. ford Bridge from the estate of international Niclas Alexander- Saudi Arabia, but Venables has

The 26-year-old Alexander-against Barnsley on Monday.

Aston Villa's manager, Brian

Full Speed ahead

Gothenburg.

for Newcastle

As Everton languish at captain, Gary Speed may

Kenny Dalglish is making a £5m offer for the Everton captain,

Gary Speed. The Newcastle

United manager is ready to take on Ron Atkinson in the race for the unsettled Welsh interna-

Speed has had talks with his manager, Howard Kendall, who is naturally not keen on losing him, and there will be no sale before what is likely to be a stormy

AGM on Monday, but the deal

Norwich's injured Keith O'Neill, is short of left-sided players, and the Welsh captain has kept on top of his game this season de-not in a position to match Newcastle. He could offer players in Atkinson yesterday made his first signing since returning as manager of Wednesday three weeks ago, buying the Swedish

Places in the third round

Dixon were team-mates at Sheffield Wednesday are also keen on Speed, hut Atkinson is spite Everton's problems.

exchange, however.

the foot of the Noton reports.

tional midfielder.

Premiership, their be about to move to

Newcastle United. Alon

Strange goings on at the Old This is not generally regarded Cornfield this week. I arrived as the case: even the Chichester Club won't allow him a slate at the bar anymore, but Dave the harman tends not to settle his dehts in blood - I suspect these guys will.

Sir Hirem was not quite convinced about the deal and, once I discovered they intended to bring in their own manager, neither was I - we've enough foreign coaches already. So I nipped off to make a quick call to the local nick. Minutes later Inspector Cools drove up in full dress uniform. We introduced him with a nod and a wink as the club's "security officer", and they made their excuses and left. This was probably a good thing as we've a special visitor today. Apparently Prince Harry wasn't too impressed by Arsenal last week so he's come to watch us instead - he thinks there'll be more goals, though t think he's a bit ebecky asking to go in the away end so he given Bosnich, who missed three

Villa games while on World Cup play-off duty, an extra 48 hours

so he can play against Steaua

Bryan Richardson, was making another attempt yesterday lo lure the Liverpool midfielder.

Michael Thomas, to Highfield

Road. Thomas turned down

Coventry's first approach, as he tain, Roy Keane, injured against

Leeds in September, may play before the end of the season.

Keane's cruciate ligament operation is now adjudged successful.

and the injury may mend by May.

pool and Tottenham striker, Paul

Walsh, has retired because of a knee injury. Walsh, 35. suffered

Portsmouth last year.

The former England, Liver-

In an 18-year career he won a League Championship and FA Cup winner's medal, and played five times for England.

He has been working as a players' agent since surgery failed to repair the knee and hopes

Stuart has tested positive for cocaine and marijuana. He is the fifth Charlton player to test positive for drugs.

Charlton Athletic's Jamie

to move into management.

Manchester United's cap-wants to return to London.

The Coventry chairman,

Bucharest on Tuesday.

We were going to carpet the away end in red shagpile (personally tested by Miss Moneyecu and 1), erect a special canopy over his seat, and invite him in an executive box for preand post-match tea and truffles, But the hrat insists on being treated just like an ordinary fan. So we've arranged for him to sit behind a pillar next to a foul-mouthed anti-royalist bigot. On the other side will be an incontinent pensioner who'll get up to go to the toilet whenever an attack devel-

so long queueing for a CJD-

burger that's he's missed the only goal of the game. Some of our most accurate hooligans will be aiming coins at him - with his mum's face upwards - and, after the game, the police'll keep him behind for an hour. Let's hope it's raining and the supporters' bus gets bricked, then he can have the full experience.

I left the arrangements in

Miss Moneyecu's firm but ten- cracked up and wanted to do der hands and headed for it on the night but Fifa said no Marscöles where I helped Franz prepare the Europe side for the World Cup draw go way back; we used to ski together in Kitzhühl. I still treasure the get-well card he sent me after I broke my leg when he led me off piste. For his part he says he still remembers the sore head he had the following year when I led him on the piste. Franzi's got a dull reputaops and spill Bovril over Harry tion but he's actually a laughjust after the Prince has spent a-minute type. No sooner had I checked into my hotel and checked out the bar tban 1 came back to my room to discover he'd draped towels over the TV, the mini-bar and the trouser press. I bad to respond so I got down to training early, had a quiet word with the lads, and when Franzi arrived they all came out of the dressing-rooms goose-stepping

- Incey was brilliant while Köpke was a natural. Franzi

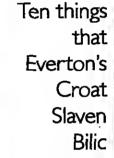

- what spoilsports.

I took the opportunity to have a quick word with Ronalexhibition match. Franz and I do and his agents. They said if we could rustle up £30m he'd love to play at the Old Cornfield. So the chairman's off to Belarus on Monday.

We've already raised a couple of million: Keegan's signed the tea lady and groundsman for Fulham. We were going to bring in a couple of YTS kids to replace them but there have been a few problems - the new tea girl ran over Shaun Prone with her trolley and bruised his hip while Ivor Niggle's twisted his ankle in n hole the groundsman had dug. Apparently be was keeping his fags there in case he fancied a drag while mowing the grass. So, that's those two out for today's game. Wonder if Harry's bought his

Barry Gaffer was talking to Talking of managerial Christians, Glenn Hoddle made quite a mark on both camps, though from Greavsie to Glenda, Spurs have had the better of the deals.

SIDELINES

Jimmy Greaves made lightning look lazy when he scored on his Chelsea debut at Tottenham 40 years ago.

Long before he metamor-

Winning their spurs at Chelsea

phosed into the rotund TV pundit known as Greavsie, this most perfect of predators was one of a large number of play-

Arriving at Spurs via Milan in 1961, Greaves linked with two forwards signed from Chelsea, Bobby Smith and Les Allen, Double-winners both. Terry Venables made the same switch in '66, and as manager would buy Gordon Durie from the

had been in the opposite direction. Two of Spurs' FA Cup-winning side in 1901, John Kirwan and David Copeland, appeared in Chelsea's inaugural fixture four years later. Vivian

Woodward, who scored Spurs' first League goal when he was also a club director and an architect, resurfaced at Chelsea

Others with a dual connection include Danny Blanchflower,

Allan Harris, Tommy Harmer, Keith Weller, Micky Hazard, Graham Roberts, Colin Lee, Clive Allen (son of Les, who was swapped for Johnny Brooks), Peter Shreeves, Jason Cundy and Clive Wilson, back in Spurs' defence under Herr Gross.

I Sunshine. Croatia's bear." Makes a change

2,600 hours of it every year from "Oh dear, doh! I'm

The earliest transfers between the Lane and the Bridge

ers with a niche in the history of both today's opponents.

might be missing today

Europe. (While the blue side of Liverpool lives in darkness at the moment.) 2 The Kajkavian song Everton away wins, it happens annually.

are amongst the longest in

3 The Una, Kupa, Sava, Drava and Danube delta. 4 Salty pilchards. 5 Licko Seniska. A region of natural heauty as opposed to a strange fetish

"Deer, doe, boar and the plug-hole.

bored, I can't bear this." 7 101 things Dalmatian. 8 The shrine of Marija Bistrica, where the Virgin Mary has been seen and festival in Krapina. Like miracles have been experienced after prayer. Howard Kendall has obviously never been there. 9 Plum and herb brandy.

10 The rejuvenating spas at Umag, Opatija and Crikvenica. As hot as a post-match Goodison hath, hut the contents 6 Huntsmen's cries of aren't as likely to go down

HISTORY

LESSON

As Aston Villa attempt to overcome a 2-1 deficit in the second leg of their Uefa Cup

third-round tie against Steaua

Bucharest next week they can find some encouragement from their own record ever lost the first leg in Europe but gone on to win on one occasion, they did so in impressive style. In the first round of the 1983-84 Uefa

Cup, Villa lost 1-0 away to Vitoria Guimaraes, but n

Peter Withe hat-trick helped them to a thumping 5-0 win in the second leg. Villa lost

4-3 on aggregate to Moscow

Spartak in the next round.

Villa have played in the Uefa Cup four times in the

Although Villa have only in European competition.

Poor old Hartlepool are arguably the Football League's most consistently unsuccessful club, having been in its bottom division for all but three seasons since joining the Third Division North in 1921. They had to seek re-election to the League an unequalled 14 times and have the worst FA Cup record, never having reached the last 16. Changing their name has been about the most exciting event in the club's history: founded as Hartlepools United in 1908, the club changed its name to Hartlepool in 1968 and to Hartlepool United in 1977. Which prompts just one question: why?

THIS WEEK

On 9 December 1989, the draw for the 1990 World Cap in Italy saw England grouped for their first-round games with the Republic of Ireland, the Netherlands and Egypt. The reaction of Bobby Robson, the England manager, was echoed almost verbatim on Thursday by Glenn Hoddle. "It could have been better, could have been worse," they said, eight years apart. In the 1990 finals, draws against their European opponents and a win over Egypt saw England progress to beat Belgium and Cameroon before going out to West Germany in the semi-final. Scotland, drawn with Brazil, Costa Rica and Sweden, fell at the first hurdle.

1990s, but this is the first time they have progressed beyond the second round.

Loans/trials

THIS WEEK'S TRANSFERS

Transfers Chris Coleman (defender) Blackburn to Fulham (621m) Niclas Alexandersson (midfielder) FK Gotherburg (8ve) in Shaffield Wednesday (2750,000) Dean Saunders (lorward) Nottingham For-est to Shelfield Utd ($400,000)

Contributors: Phil Shew, Nick Harris, Paul Newman Readers' contributions welcome. Send to Sidelines, Sports Desk, The Independent, 1 Canada Square, Canary Whari, London E14 5DL

Gary Speed: Wanted by Kenny Dalglish and Ron Atkinson Photograph: Empics

FA CUP SECOND ROUND

Walker and Dixon looking to roll back the years of the FA Cup are at joined his local club in order to stake this weekend. Paul keep fit. Dixon came on in the Newman expects some fourth qualifying round against Rushden & Diamonds and will upsets along the way. again be a substitute today. The Cheltenham-Boreham Wood tie ensures that there will When Clive Walker and Kerry be at least one non-League

Chelsea in the early 1980s they can hardly bave imagined they would be renewing their acquaintance in the FA Cup some there are not more. 14 years later. This afternoon, however, the two men meet when Cheltenham Town entertain Boreham Wood with one of football's great prizes at stake their chances against oppoa place in the Cup's third round. nents from the bottom half of Walker, now aged 40, came the Third Division: Darlington, off Cheltenham's substitutes' bench last month to score the ester respectively. winner against Tiverton Town in Hednesford have been insisting this week that Darlington Ian Foster, who was one of the the first round. On the opposing bench today will be Dixon.

36, who left Doncaster Rovers at the start of the season and over the last two years. Last season the Stafford-third round draw, which will be televised live by ITV at 6.15. However, it will be a surprise if Three GM Vauxhall Conference teams, Hednesford Town, Stevenage Borough and Hereford United, will all fancy

Cambridge United and Colch-

Third Division sided needed a replay, extra time and penalties to dispose of Solihill Borough in the last round and Hednesford have an exceptional Cup record shire side gave Middlesbrough

a scare after knocking out cluh in tomorrow afternoon's Blackpool and York, and in this season's first round they won away at Mark Hateley's Hull. Hednesford are second in the Conference, effectively just five places behind Darlington. Stevenage go to Cambridge. who have been sliding down the Third Division table in recent weeks. On the equivalent day last year Stevenage won at Leyton Orient while Cambridge lost al home to Woking. Hereford travel to Colchester

but will be without the injured should be the favourites, but the heroes of their first-round vietory over Brighton, which avenged the defeat that cost Graham Turner's team their League status earlier this year. Emley's chances of beating Lincoln City have not been helped by injuries to key players, but the UniBond League cluh should take heart from Lincoln's unimpressive performance in the last round. Gainsborough Trinity took the Third Division team to a replay, which they only lost 3-2.

King's Lynn, once a major power in non-League football, will relish the trip to Rotherham United, while their East Anglian neighbours, Wishech Town, are playing in the second round for only the second time in their history. On the last occasion, 40 years ago, they lost

2-1 at Reading. Wisbech are expecting to their money, Gary Childs, manager of the Dr Martens League Midland Division side, says that Rovers "are a foothalling side and that will suit us because that's the way we play. We've got players all over the pitch capable of scoring goals." llkeston Town's Mati Carmichael faces his former elub, Scunthorpe United, Carmichael, who scored both of tlkesion's goals in their firstround victory over Boston United, was sold to Scunthorpe by Lincoln City's then manager, Keith Alexander, who is now in charge of likeston. The most familiar foes of the the non-League game, while his he said.

opposite number. Ted Hardy, is the oldest manager still in the Cup at 68.

Two Ryman League teams who did well to knock out League opposition in the last round will attempt to do so again. Basingstoke Town, who disposed of Wycombe Wanderers, travel to Northampton, while Hendon, who knocked out Leyton Orient last month, are away to Cardiff City, their conquerors a year ago. Basingstoke's manager, Ernie Howe, the former Fulham centre-half, has had Northampton watched and received a 13-page report on the Second Division side. Howevafternoon will be the managers er, he will not be showing it to for Dagenham & Redbridge's his team. "If I read all that to visit to Peterborough. Barry my players they would be fright-Fry, Peterborough's manager, ened to death, and some of served a long apprenticeship in them wouldn't even turn up,"

SCOTTISH FOOTBALL

McLeish eager to follow the Hearts example as he tries to improve Motherwell's fortunes

The Motherwell manager, Alex remains a problem. Motherwell McLeich, recognises that Heart are yel to win at home in the of Midlothian are the example Bell's Scottish League this seahis own club must follow - but is still determined to upset their title momentum at Tynecastle their travels.

McLeish cites the building of a formidable squad by the Hearts manager, Jim Jefferies, as the crucial factor to the Edinburgh club's impressive rise, and is anxious to emulate that at Fir Park, where consistency Division.

son, and McLeish admits his team are finding life easier on

A win at Celtic and a hardfought draw at Hibernian are both a testament to that, and McLeish is confident of causing an upset at Hearts, who are aiming to lift themselves four points clear at the top of the Premier that game against Celtic and since then our approach has been more focused and positive," McLeish said. "I think a lol of our younger players grew in stature after that game and now they have got to develop the right level of consistency.

Celtic face Kilmarnock at Rugby Park keen to hulld on only their second flomes oc trophy this decade, after lifting the Coca-Cola Cup last Sunday

"Our recent run started in with a convincing 3-0 win Coca-Cola Cup performance against Dundee United at

The Kilmarnock manager, Bobby Williamson, believes the much-improved form of the former Chelsea man Pat Nevin could be a crucial factor. "Pat has done really well for us lately including three goals in the last two games," he said.

The Dundee United man-solved to forget last week's flat and return to winning ways at home to Dunfermline. "Nohody at Tannadice can deny that the last couple of weeks have been a hig let-down for the cluh," McLean said. "But we have got to pick our- manager, Alex Miller. selves up from that and react in the proper manner. The best way for us to prepare for Tuesager. Tommy McLean, has re- a good performance and result against Dunfermline.

Elsewhere, the bottom club, Aberdeen, have encouraged supporters to arrive early for the home meeting with St Johnstone because they are anticipating a higher crowd than usual to welcome their new Tomorrow's televised fixture sees Rangers take on Hibernian at throx without their day's clash with Hearts is to get England midfielder, Paul Gascoigne, who begins a fourmatch suspension.

San San San

Blatter combines a safe pair of hands with inspiration

Billions watched him on television but the only thing most knew about the man conducting the World Cup draw was that he wants to ban tackling. He does not, but Fifa's general secretary does have a purge planned for the summer. Gem Moore, in Marseilles, listened to the thoughts of one of the most influential men in world football.

There were some jeers when he stepped on stage but mostly puzzlement among the 38,000 spectators at the Stade Vélodrome and the billions watching around the globe. Who was this little, balding man? Why was he running the World Cup draw instead of Franz Beckenhauer, Micbel Platini or one of the other luminaries involved in Marseilles on Thursday night.

The man was Sepp Blatter, the 62-yearold general secretary of Fifa, the game's world governing body. At that moment he looked just like the "Swiss watchmaker" his friend and boss, João Havelange, had affectionately called him the previous day. An bour later Blatter had the audience and viewers eating out of his hand. The draw had been conducted immaculately with just the right amount of restrained showmanship. A smile here, a gesture there, a telling pause every now and again as be held a nation's footballing fate in his band before revealing it to the cameras. Thursday night was Blatter's 25th draw

- "my silver jubilee", be said - but be was not doing it, as so often happens, out of egotism. As one veteran of these affairs said; "He does it because it is so complicated he can't trust anyone else not to cock it up."

The draws, however, are a small part of his work. In his day joh Blatter, who is effectively chief executive, provides much of the perspiration that keeps the game functioning and some of the inspiration behind its continued development.

It is fashionable to knock Fifa, as it is all sports bureancracies. But compare football's relatively smooth progress towards world domination to the mess that cricker sports continually find themselves in.

The game is now truly global - "we have 198 members", he notes - and, while Havelange has been the driving force behind football's development outside the traditional Europe-South America axis. Blatter has often been the executor. This aspect was his first job at Fifa after Havelange, soon after his own election as president, had spotted him working for Swiss Timing - though not as a watchmaker - at the Munich Olympics.

In England it is Fifa's tinkering with the ally been for the good but recently it seemed et, both rugby codes, athletics and many oth- Fifa's general secretary, Sepp Blatter, delivers a speech of welcome at the Stade Vélodrome in Marseilles during Thursday's World Cup draw be was going too far. "Blatter wants to out-law tackling" went the beadlines. Does be?

"Football is incredibly popular and sometimes it is a victim of its popularity," he said after we met in Marseilles. "The important thing is we get people to talk about football but sometimes they get the wrong interpretation. This was literally a mistranslatioo due to there heing two words for tackle in German. The point I laws, or rather, as Blatter says, "their in- was trying to make was that we bave banned terpretation", which has been noticed. the tackle from behind but people are still After initial reservations they have gener- making dangerous tackles and we must tighten the regulations on that."

The inspiration for this, incidentally, comes not from Blatter hut from Platini. "In Italy in 1991 Michel said in the task force [a body set up by Blatter to consider ways of improving the game] we should ban tackling. Everyone thought 'you can't do that'. He was pretty radical at the time but as the game has got faster we have seen more tackles from hehind and that is what Michel was really on about. It is not just to prevent ball players like Platini himself - or Marco van Basten whose career was ended by such tackles - hut also the ordinary Saturday afternoon player who gets crunched by people coming in from behind. or from the side, with feet in the air."

This initiative was successfully brought in before the 1994 World Cup. So what will referees, at their March get-together, be told to crack down on next summer?

"There will be a lot of emphasis on the distance of the wall at a free-kick. There is no point talking about giving referees laser zappers shining on the ground and the does the referee zap them off at the knee? The law is there, they should be 9.15 metres from the hall and if they don't get hack it is in the referees' power to give the nearest guy a yellow card - all they have to do is implement it. The World Cup is the shop window, if you can get the referees to apply the laws of the game strictly in it, refcrees and players at lower levels will accept that is the way to do it."

This will, inevitably, lead to a rash of yellow cards and dismissals of players collecting work with Johansson, Blatter will probareferee saying 'get back to there' because two yellows. Two possible disciplinary adplayers won't take any notice. Then what, justments, rugby league's sin-hin and hockey's use of three cards to similar effect, have can be grateful he appears to possess a safe both been rejected partly on administra- pair of hands.

tive grounds: "We have enough people coming and going as it is, with three substitutes in each side."

"The referee should not have a soft option," Blatter adds. "He should be strong enough to say 'that's a yellow or that's a red. There is a large body of thought that thinks the main problem is the yellow card - a lot of referees go for yellow when they know, in their heart of hearts, they should he showing a red."

The use of video to assist referees, which is supported by Platini, is rejected until it is perfect - and then only for assessing whether the ball has gone over the line. The principle of professional referees - though not to the extent it is their sole livelihood - receives favour, the idea of two referees does not.

On to another bugbear, the everexpanding fixture list. "The quickest and easiest way to reduce the pressure on players remains reducing the top divisioo by two clubs - that immediately cuts out fourmatches a season. Obviously the clubs are not too keen as it will have a commercial impact but we should not kid ourselves. Most clubs, when they get an opportunity for a few free days, go off and play a friendly somewhere."

Clubs, especially in Europe, are growing in wealth and, subsequently, power. The prospect of Fifa struggling to retain both control and the primacy of international football is a real one.

We need to maintain an equilibrium. You only have to look at Euro 96 or a World Cup, the whole country is united behind one team. National teams are and always will he essential to the football landscape.

Football has become very attractive to people who bave never been involved in it. Bureaucrats and husinessman think they can get a higher profile for themselves by getting involved, and one of the hig problems in football is not the game itself but the people on its periphery.

They are there because their wallet is in football and, in many cases, they are smarter than those who are there because their heart is in football."

Blatter, while influential, is technically just one of Fifa's 60 salaried employees (average age 35), While he influences and executes policy, Havelange, as president, shapes it. The 81-year-old Brazilian retires next summer and, this week, annointed Blatter his preferred successor with the words: "If my friend wins [the election] I would shake his band. If he lost I would weep."

Very touching, but Blatter has yet to indicate he even wants the post - Lennart Johansson, the president of European football's governing body, Uefa, is the only declared candidate. Will Blatter stand? He gives a classic politician's answer which reveals nothing hut, so long as he feels he can hly be bappy enough to keep juggling the balls he already bas in his grasp. Foothall

When the black market offers a way around the red tape

Every football fan should go to a World Cup tournament; STEVE being part of the beautiful game's greatest gathering is an unforgettable experience. With next year's finals if not ON THE quite coming home then at least visiting the neighbours. many supporters will he OBTAINING A

For UK-based fans, travelling to France is easy - a plethora of trains, boats, cars and planes means that all 10 venues should be easily and affordably accessed. Accom- could choose which fixtures modation, from hotels to and teams to watch. Fans rescamp sites, is plentiful and generally of a high standard. Which just leaves getting hold organisers have long been sic principles. The aim is to sell large blocks of tickets as early as possible to organisations (and even individuals) who then face the task of regames. 200,000 of the 2.5 million tickets available for French citizens bought all 1.27 million France Passes cards covering every group venues, supporters had to purchase a series of cards. Widespread trading and swap- Fifa-approved ticket sales former international ping of these therefore seems inevitable.

BEAUCHAMPE

TRAUMAS OF tempted to make this the one. TICKET FOR FRANCE 98

ident in the remaining 190 Fifamember countries effectively had no such choice. Allocations to the 32 qualifiers for their And it's a minefield. The own matches (France exceptemployed by World Cup and ground capacity. And with five European Championship of the venues bolding fewer than 40,000 spectators, most underpinned by the same ba- countries will find demand out-stripping supply. Allocations for other games are minuscule, and for some fixtures they can be counted in tens.

At least French citizens

The system is crazy. If you distributing or perbaps re- a) wish to follow any country selling them to people who other than the one in which actually intend going to the you reside; b) live in a country that failed to qualify; or c) find that your own country's al-France are being sold to tour location is over subscribed, operators, with a further then obtaining tickets offi-300,000 set aside for sponsors cially means approaching tour and commercial affiliates. operators. Using their dominant market position, they can charge excessively for their packages (I was quoted and round of 16 match at a £1,600 for a trip to the semispecified venue. Effectively, final and final by one English dictable, might bring results.

mechanisms is that (for all but searching for buyers, sometimes right up until match day. Unable to purchase affordably priced tickets in England, I flew to the 1994 World Cup ticketless, targeted five games (two of which organisers insisted were sold out) and got into every one, just once paying above face value, and then only by $5 (£3). One was Cameroon match that they gave fistfuls away outside the stadium before kick-off. So, while frustrated fans agonise over whether to travticket distribution systems ed) are under 10 per cent of el to France, and those with blocks of tickets desperately try to find buyers for them. World Cup organisers can relax, safe in the knowledge that ticket distribution is no longer their problem. Instead. they are able to tell both Fifa and the world's media that high ticket sales have helped marked Israeli FA; a friend's read property of the Panamanian FA. At Italia 90, one sponsor had so many excess

tickets for the England v ensure the tournament's profitability. A fundamental rethink is needed, aimed at getting tickets directly from tournament organisers to those fans who actually wish to attend games. The feasibility of a system which allows tickets to be sold via credit cards and the Internet should be investigated and steps taken to prevent tour operators and national FAs from exploiting and abusing this is a season ticket, but its company). The only alternatheir access to tickets. For inflexibility means that to at- tive for most supporters is France 98, a shambles is guartend games with friends or rel- the black market, which, anteed, but there is still time to atives, or to travel to different though risky and unpre- improve things for Euro 2000 and beyond. A consequence of these Steve Beauchampe is a the higgest fixtures) there are Supporters' Association.

hoping to build bridges Alan Rotbenherg, the United often thousands of tickets States Soccer Federation president, hopes that bis national side's World Cup first-round game against Iran may he used to build bridges. Maybe we can have soccer diplomacy like we had ping-pong diplomacy with China," he said yesterday.

The States and Iran have been enemies since the Islamic revolution toppled the American-backed Sbah in 1979 and 52 hostages were held at the US Embassy in Tehran for 444 days. Eighteen years later, the nations have not resumed diplomatic relations.

"I don't think President Clinton is going to that game." the US captain, John Harkes, said yesterday. Both teams will attempt to avoid the political distractions. "The meaning of Fifa Jihc game's world governing body) is peace and unity," the Iranian football federation president. Dariush Mostafavi, said. "We are thinking only of soccer, not politics. We are friends of the people of the USA. However, I think we have a chance of beating the United States because they are definitely not better With the World Cup than os."

"I don't think it's the group of death." the US coach. Steve Sampson, said. "I think there are one or two more groups that are stronger than ours."

The Romanian captain. Gheorghe Hagi, will retire from international football after next year's World Cup finals.

"Hagi has played for ts years at the greatest level of soccer and this will be enough for him," his agent, Giovanni Becali, said yesterday.

Hagi, 32, led his team-mates to the World Cup quarter-finals in 1994. During the qualifying rounds, he reached a record 32 goals for Romania. His next game will be his 108th for his

United States Small town may face rude awakening

Despite the poor reputation of English supporters, John Lichfield reports from Paris that their hosts for the final World Cup group match next year are looking forward to their presence.

Lens, the venue of one of England's three first-stage matches. is the smallest town ever to stage a World Cup game.

The industrial fown only 40 miles from the English Channel. says it is "delighted" to have drawn one of England's features. Hown, and no one is worried in Whether the pleasure will survive the night of 26 June, when England play Colombia in the last match in Group G is open

The Felix-Bollaert stadium holds 41,275 people (631/1) more sured that supporters of the than the town) and under the ticketing rules. England should be allocated just over 4,000 seats, with a few hundred more available through accredited travel firms. Any tickets re- conducted by the town, Lens turned by Colombia will be sold to people with French addresses and French bank accounts.

With Lens being so accessible from England (30 minutes cautions might be needed. At from Calais by autoroute), this may he a recipe for trouble, with hundreds of ticketless fans erresing the Channel, But officials in the town say they are pleased and honoured to have drawn their near-neighbours; they also hope the Jamaica-Croatia game on 14 June will in attract Londonhased West Indians.

"I have spoken to dozens of officials and politicians in the the least hit," said Philippe Lectory, head of the Lens office of the regional newspaper La toix do Nord. "On the contrary, they think it is a great honour.

"They say they have been as-English national team are not like supporters of the big Engtish clubs. They are much more may be in for a rude awakening indeed. A spokesman at the Town Hall said senior officials would consider what extra prepresent, they were "delighted" with the outcome of the draw, which also gives them Germany versus Yugoslavia and Spain against Bulgaria.

The draw emphasis the inflexibility of the system for allocating matches next year, on the same night, in the same Group. Romania and Tunisia, will be playing the new 80,000 capacity Stade de France near Paris. The organisers could switch the games hut, with a large Tunisian community in Paris, this is said to be extremely unlikely.

English supporters with tickets for the Colombia game should probably consider staying elsewhere (in Lille or on the Channel coast). Lens has only one hotel on the list recommended by the World Cup organising committee. By contrast, imum of 8,000 tickets.

If this is the level of research the venues for England's first phase matches, Toulouse and Marseilles, are among the largest cities in France.

Derby v West Harm

The large North African community in Marseilles makes England's opening match on 15 June almost a home game for Tunisia. Officials in the cities also said yesterday that they had no reason to anticipate trouble with English fans after the generally good experience during the Tournoi de France last summer. Despite Scottish fears that their fans may he squeezed out of the World Cup's opening fixture, against Brazil, organisers were clear yesterday that the usual rules on ticket allocation will apply. Of the $0,000 tickets for the game at St Denis, the French allocation has already been sold or at least accounted for. Of the other 28 per cent. eight per cent will go to tour operators, while the other 20 per cent will be divided between the Brazilian and Scottish author-

Hoddle seeks way to avoid tension

draw finally made, England and Scotland are finalising their preparations and as Glenn Moore discovers, Glenn Hoddle's men may be at home when the Scots open the tournament.

England, like most of their supporters, could begin their World Cup watching Scotland take on Brazil from the comfort of their own living owm - albeit without the case of beer. That is one scenario being considered by Glenn Hoddle as late start to next summer's four- with a week abroad, in Portu- around Lyon and St Etienne.

tions England do not need to are given time off to be with arrive in France until the their lamilies. They would then evening of 10 June, five days meet up at Bisham Abbey, their with Tunisia in Marseille and a out to their World Cup retreat few hours after the Scots open at La Baule, near Nantes. the competition in Paris.

"Uni happy with the draw but not the late start," said Hodelle in Marseille vesterday, "I would prefer to get under way earlier. There will be matches being played, the team will watch them on television but not be able to play themselves. That could lead to a build-up in tension. We could watch the opening ceremony then fly out." he seeks a way to avoid England's preparations are likely to begin nament counting against them. gal. Spain or France, perhaps yesterday. Under World Cup regula- with a game, before the players

> From this attractive Britlantic coast afterwards, Hoddle, who had already scouted Marseille and Lens, flew back for today's Inverpool's Manchester the expense of Argentina or United game leaving FA staff to Croatia. look for overnight accommowere assessing options, mainly good side,"

Both teams will also be srepping up their scouting operation. especially in reference to Tunisia and Morocco, the north before their opening fixture domestic base, before flying. African teams draw by England and Scotland respectively.

Should England qualify secand from their group they could tany resort they will travel to face Argentina, Germany and each match by air the day before Brazil in seven days. Or they the game and return to the At- might face unexpected opposition in the second round though it is hard to imagine either Japan or Jamaica qualifying at

"Whoever we play will not be dation in Toulouse. Scotland are easy," said Hoddle, "If it is a surundecided about their likely prise team they will be there for England's pre-tournament base. Craig Brown and his staff in reason - hecause they are a

France the target for goal-hunters Fowler and Cole

Unpredictable Liverpool could surprise us all by getting the better of Manchester United today in a game that also gives rival England strikers the chance to show their World Cup worth.

Phil Shaw looks at the weekend ahead while Nick Harris (below) analyses the programme match by match.

a spectacle that engaged an entire planet to the parochial business of Premiership success and survival, both Liverpool and Everton have the world to

In their last home fexture, Liverpool lost humiliatingly to the next, this morning, they confront Manchester United. It speaks volumes for their baffling inconsistency and exceptional capabilities that no one will be unduly surprised if they defeat the champions.

Roy Evans' prospects of continuing as Liverpool manager did not look auspicious after the Barnsley débacle. Before United there was the small matter of a trip to Ar-

Marseilles to Merseyside, from in microcosm: Steve McManaman, languid for most of the match, suddenly stirred himself to win the match with a virtuoso goal.

United realise better than most the folly of characterising any game as crucial or decisive before the season has the bottom club, Barnsley. In even reached the half-way stage. Alex Ferguson was no France. more triumphalist after Sunday's rout of Blackburn than he was panicked by defeat at Arsenal last month.

That said, the match could make or break Liverpool's chances of featuring in the title race. They are currently nine points off the pace with a game in hand. A 12-point deficit would present psychological as well as practical difsenal. Highhury presented ficulties, especially now that

As the spotlight swings from their problems and potential. United are all but free to con- Anfield, it could be a bad day miership defeat would leave put clear water between themcentrate on defending the title. Suspension and injury have spared squeamish spectators the sight of Paul Incc and Roy Keane going head to head, hut the match will provide a fascinating comparison between two strikers who may be competing for one place in England's World Cup squad for Robbie Fowler returns for Liverpool, almost certainly to link up with Michael Owen in a hid to expose Gary Pallister's susceptibility to pace. Andy Cole will be striving to show that his glut of goals for United against Barnsley and Sheffield Wednesday can be maintained against Evans' rather quicker defenders. With a 7ft 6in bronze cast of Bill Shankly newly unveiled at for centre-backs to look stat-

25/FOOTBALL

How Everton would love to be in a position where being cast adrift referred to the leadership rather than last place. After another week in which their chairman, Peter Johnson, failed to clarify the position regarding what funds, if any, are available to Howard Kendall, they travel to Leeds seeking to end two desperate sequences. It is a year next week since Everton beat Derby at the Baseball Ground with a lastminute goal, their last away win in 20 games. Worse still, their record at Elland Road shows not a single success in 32 League visits stretching back to 1951.

A sixth successive Pre-

Everton needing to win half their remaining matches to stay up. Leeds, in contrast, have won four in a row for the first time since April 1995 when, coincidentally, Howard Wilkinson was named Carling Manager of the Month as George Graham was yester-

Man for man, Everton's line-up does not look conspicuously inferior to Leeds', the difference is that Graham has instilled a spirit which has helped the Yorkshire side come from behind in the last three victories. Whatever happens today, Johnson is assured of a rough ride at Goodison's annual meeting on Monday.

Chelsea's pursuit of Manchester United collides headon with Tottenham's need to selves and the relegation zone. Precedent does not augur well for Christian Gross in his first home game in charge of Spurs. Chelsea have won five and lost none in eight meetings at White Hart Lane dating back three of Hartson's 17 goals

Arsenal's championship hopes are in danger of becoming history unless they snap out of a six-match run without Pride Park suggests they a win. The trek to Newcastle, who may have Faustino Asprilla back as they try to cling on the leaders' coat-tails themselves, will have given them time to reflect on the resilience which won the day at St James' Park a year ago. Arsène Wenger's team played all but 22 minutes without the sent-off Tony Adams, yet still prevailed with

John Hartson's scor spree, coinciding with six ren outings for Wright. prompted once-unthinka doubts about Wenger's dom in selling the Welshma West Ham. However. come away from Upton P. mirroring his side's return just one point out of 21 on road. Derby's unbeaten sta struggle to break the spell But if Everton, Spurs West Ham feel they are lab ing against the odds, spathought for Coventry. Alre in their customary lowly r tion, and lacking the inju Gary McAllister, they make short hop to Aston Villa kn ing they have never won th despite 23 attempts spi over 60 years.

Aston Villa v Coventry

Leading scorer

Aston Villa's versatile Simon Grayson may start his first game for a month as central defenders Gareth Southgate, Riccardo Scimeca and David Hughes are all doubtful through injury Midfielder lan Taylor will once again be missing as he sits out the final game of a threematch ban, Goalkeeper Mark Bosnich, back from international duty with Australia, is set to return to the side in place of former England Under-21 keeper Michael Oakes. Villa have won only one of their past six Premiership games.

Coventry captain Gary McAllister misses the derby with a knee injury sustained last week. Coventry, who have never won at Villa Park, recall David Burrows after a one-pame absence. He was left out of the side that lost 2-0 at home to Leicester last week because he was involved in proposed transfer swap with Sheffield Wednesday's Mark Pembridge, which has now fallen through Irish midfielder Willie Boland is suspended. Norwegian Trond Soltvedt and Dane Martin Johansen are in contention to take over in midfield,

Blackburn v Bolton

Blackburn's leading scorer Chris Sutton (knee) has had treatment and should be fit, while captain Tim Sherwood and defender leff Kenna have both passed tests on minor injuries. Norwegian defender Tore Pedersen has a minor injury but will be left out anyway, as Colin Hendry returns. Hendry has been out for a month with a back injury and will replace Pedersen, partnering Stephane Henchoz in defence. Kevin Gallacher is now fully fit and available after being on the substitutes' bench at Old Trafford last week.

Bolton defender Gerry Taggart, having completed a six-match ban, is available for selection. Central defender Chris Fairclough and fullback Neil Cox are also available after recovering from injury, but all three may struggle to win immediate recalls. Colin Todd is likely to begin with a back four of captain Gudni Bergsson, Mark Fish, Andy Todd, and Mike Whitlow, with Taggart on the bench. Todd's side will be buoyed by their I-0 win over Newcastle last Monday, and will start Nathan Blake and Dean Holdsworth up front.

wakenin;

Igor Stimac ends a two-month absence when he returns to firstteam football today. The Derby captain has finally recovered from the back injury that has kept him out since October and will replace Dean Yates. Although Stimac is back, Danish defender Jacob Laursen is still out with a knee injury and midfielder Robbie van der Laan misses his eighth game with a damaged ankle, Derby, unbeaten at home in Premiership, will be looking to recover from their 4-0 defeat at Chelsea last week. Stan Lazaridis and Andy Impey are doubts for West Ham today but Paul Nitson should make a return after 10 weeks out with a groin injury. Goalkeeper Ludek Miklosko missed the 4-1 win over Crystal Palace on Wednesday with a neck injury, and might not feature. Midfielder Frank Lampard has recovered from the virus which has kept him out for two games. The Hammers' will be looking to replicate their home form - nine wins from the last 10 games - away, where they have won just once and lost seven times this season.

Leeds v Everton

Two of Leeds' international contingent, Lucas Radebe and Harry Kewell, are doubtful for today. South African defender Radebe, who will fly out immediately after the game for tomorrow's friendly with Brazil in Johannesburg, might play despite a groin strain, but Australian striker Kewell has a knee problem which has only allowed him to undergo light training this week. Captain David Hopkin is definitely out as he completes a three-game suspension. Leeds manager. George Graham, has steered his side to four consecutive Premiership wins.

Everton are likely to recall Andy Hinchcliffe as they attempt to end a sequence of 20 successive away games without a win stretching back to a 1-0 victory win at Derby in December last year. Dave Watson also returns to the squad after injury today. New Norwegian goalkeeper Thomas Myhre has recovered from a midweek training injury and will also be in the squad, although Neville Southall is expected to play, after recovering from bruised ribs.

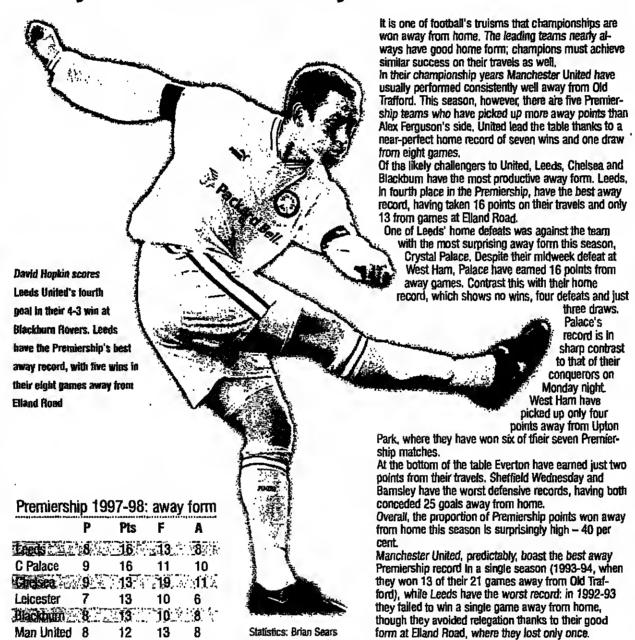

Leicester v Crystal Palace

Martin O'Neill's side are back in the Premiership top six after their

2-0 victory at Coventry last weekend. However, O'Neill could be without eight players today, ian Marshall. Steve Walsh and Steve Guppy face late fitness tests after joining long-term absentee Scott Tayfor on the injury list, while Garry Parker remains absent because his daughter is seriously ill. Emile Heskey is still suspended. Tony Cottee is on loan at Birmingham and Mark Robins is looking for a new club in Greece. Rob Ullathorne could be added to the squad for the first time since breaking his ankle 10 months ago. Crystal Palace are likely to be without Jamie Smith, who limped off after D minutes of the 4-1 midweek defeat at West Harn. Smith may yet recover, otherwise another player with an ankle problem. Andy Roberts, is fit enough to travel and could play as could Bruce Dyer. Attilio Lombardo remains out with thigh muscle injury picked up while training with Italy prior to their World Cup qualifying play-off against Russa Israeli Itzik Zohar could get only his secono Premiership start. .And statistics

Away form holds the key

Best Premiership away record before reduction to 20 clubs

Man United (93-94) 21 13 1, 55 1 3 3 4 4 2 25 1 7 4 4 2 25

Best Premiership away record since reduction to 20 clubs

9. 16.10年,4.2公平26。在1945年第387至

Worst Premiership away record

(Leads (92-93)) + 12 21. (1) Q 10 17 7 2 2 44 没有现在发展的正文: 李经正

FA CARLING PREMIERSHIP: HOW THEY STAND

11

Windledon 7 11 8 7

Acsena 8 10 12 14

- Tottenham 8 5 6 14

Southampton7 3 5 13

10

Liverpool 8

Aston Villa 9

West Ham 9

Everton

_							Hom	e				Ava	,		Form	Upcoming matches
		Pί	Pts	GD	W	D	L	F	Α	W	D	L	F	Α	(UTOS) recent on right)	o peaning meaning
i	Nav Old	16	34	+28	7-	1.	- 0	27	4	3	3_	2 -	13	. 8	WWLWW	E Dec Agentals (H) 21 Dec Emaste (A). 25 Dec Section (H) (B Dec Covere (A).
2	Chelsea	16	31	+ 18	6	0	ı	16	6	4	Ī	4	19	П	WWLWW	13 Dec Leeds (Hi. 20 Dec Sheff Wed (A), 26 Dec Wimbledon (H), 29 Dec Southampton (A)
į	Rhoisen	16-	30	+10	5	-2	Ţ	7	9	- 3	- 4		Ю	8	DDWWL	13 Bec Arsena (Ay 20 Dec Wen Form(F)). 26 Dec Greff Wed (A), 28 Ce: (Pages (F)
4	Leeds	16	29	+7	4	1	3	13	ll	5	I	2	13	8	LWWWW	13 Dec Chelses (A), 20 Dec Bolton (H), 26 Dec Liverpool (A), 28 Dec Aston Villa (H)
5	Access	16	22	+[]	5	2	ាំ	- 18	4-	2	4	1-	.12	- 14	DIWIL	8 Dec Bladburn 8-1): 22 Dec Winkledon (A): 28 Dec Leichier (A): 28 Dec Totterham (A):
6	Leicester	16	26	+7	3	4_	2	11	8	4	1	2	ΙÙ	6	WDLDW	13 Det Southampton (A); 20 Dec Eventon (H); 26 Dec Arsenal (A), 28 Dec Sheff Wed (H)
Ť.	Liverpool	- 5	25	+12	. 5	0	2	#8	6	2	4	2 -	.8:	-8	WDWLW	G: Dec C Palace (A), 28 Det Coventry (B); 25 Dec Leets (A), 28 Det Newcaste (A)
ë B	Newcastle	14	24	0	5	2	1	Ŋ	9	2	Ι	3	6	9	DDWWL	13 Dec Banzley (A); 17 Dec Derby (H); 21 Dec Man Utd (H); 26 Dec Derby (A)
	Derby	5	23	#4	5	2	0	17	5	2	0	ь	П	19	CWLWI.	14 Dec British (A): 77 Dec bleverstle (A): 20 Dec Officer (H): 26 Dec Newcotte (H):
2	West Ham	16	22	-2	6	Û	١	16	6	1	1	7	8	30	ГПММ	 Dec Sheff Wed (H), 20 Dec Blackburn (A). Dec Covernry (H): 28 Dec Wimbledon (A)
	Wimbledon	16	19	-3.	2	2	5	10	4	. 3.	1	2	8	7	WEWLL	Tomorrow (outherption Aft, 12 Dec Everton (P.) 22 Dec Amerial (Ft), 25 Dec Cheixes (A)
: 2	C Palace	16	19	-5	0	3	4	5	H	5	Т	3	II	10	WDWLL	13 Dec Everpool (H): 28 Dec Derby (A). 26 Dec Southampton (H): 28 Dec Blackburn (A)
_	Bolton	16	19	9:	. 3	4	1	.5	3	:I-	3.	4	7	.18	DLDWW	M Dec Decty (1/k 20 Dec Least (A) - 24 Dec Barroley 8-1; 28 Dec Everson (A)
• ••	Aston Villa	16	18	-7	3	T	3	8	12	2	3	5	8	IJ	DLDWL	15 Dec Man Utd (A), 28 Dec Southampton (H); 26 Dec Tonenham (H), 28 Dec Leeds (A)
_	Shelf Wed	K-	8	9	4	1.	3	ß	12	. 1	2	-5	B	25	LIWWW	- Monday Barratey (H): 13 Sinc West Ham (A):
_		lió	17	-6	2	6	ī	10	10	1	2	4	3	II	DWDLL	13 Dec Tottenham (H), 28 Dec Liverpool (A), 26 Dec West Hum (A), 28 Dec Man Utd (H)
Ξ.	Coventry	16	16.	-6	4	1.	4:	J5	ß	.1.	Đ	6	5.:	3	WWWILL	Timmerrow Wimbledon (A); IS Dec Lecester (H); 26 Dec Aston Villa (A); 26 Dec Cristal Palace (A)
-	Southampton	ln	16		 }	2	3	7	6		:	5	ь	H	шш	13 Dec Coventry (A), 20 Dec Barreley (H), 26 Dec Aston Villa (A), 28 Dec Astenal (H),
8	Tottenham	16	13	-29	. 9	- -	. 5	-8	18	2	Ū	6	6	25	LDLWL	Monday Shell Wed (At 13 Dec Blackburn (Ht.: 20 Dec Tottorbarn (At: 24 Dec Bahorn (A)
9	Barnsley	1 . 10	 		 		-		12	1			r_	ŀŧ.	11LLL	13 Dec Warehadon (H) 20 Dec Lecester (A) 24 Dec Man Lad (A) 28 Dec Roton (H) an Ian Wright goal.

Liverpool v Man Utd

Leading scorer

Liverpool, who helped Manchester United last Sunday by Arsenal at Highbury, face up to their biggest test of the seaso out inspirational captain and former Old Trafford midfield Ince, who completes his three-match suspension. Ince's abs compensated for by the return of Robbie Fowler (ban), who ly to replace Karlheinz Riedle and partner Michael Owen in Rob Jones is not yet fully recovered from an Achilles problem Mark Wright (badk) is still not ready for a recall. Out-of-favour Thomas, who has rejected a move to Coventry, is unlikely Manchester United's Gary Pallister (hip) and Nicky Butt (shi needed treatment following last week's 4-0 win over Blackbi both were yesterday cleared by Alex Ferguson to play at today. Ferguson may well leave last Sunday's side unchange Paul Scholes is still suspended, and Roy Keane and Denis Ir injured. United go into the game with a three-point cushio large goal-difference lead at the top of the Premiership.

Newcastle v Arsenal

Faustino Asprilla could eventually make his return for Newc ter tearing a stomach muscle during their Champions' Leaguin Kiev two months ago. He is nearly fully, recovered from tive surgery. John Barnes was thought to have torn a hams last Saturday's 2-1 win at Crystal Palace but it was only a cr he is likely to start along with goalkeeper Shay Given, whose der and ankle injuries have cleared up.

Nicolas Anelka (ankle) is available again for Arsenal after re and could threaten the place of the out-of-form lan Wright Vieira (knee) is still out, although he could return next we Parlour (knee) has an outside chance of passing a late fith Steve Bould completes a three-match ban for five yellow ca Frenchman Gilles Grimandi starts one. Arsene Wenger ha cide whether to change his formation, bringing in a third cert alongside Adams and Martin Keown, or study to his favoure with Alberto Mendez challenging Stephen Hughes for a midfie

Tottenham v Chelsea

Leading scorer

Christian Gross has a number of injury problems. Sol Ca shoulder strain makes him doubtful, although there is a ch will be fit. If Campbell fails to make the team. Gross will captain's armband to Colin Calderwood. Calderwood did ure in the first team towards the end of Gerry Francis' re was employed by Gross in a midfield holding role in last 2-0 win at Everton, Chris Armstrong is still a long-term al while Steffen Iversen (foot) and Rory Allen (anl:le) are both Jose Dominguez has recovered from injury and is back in th Ruud Gullit, yet to field an unchanged Chelsea side in backmatches this season, has no fresh injury wornes after last 4-0 win over Derby but is still without Eddie Newton (bro! and Gustavo Poyet (ruptured knee ligament). Italian strikei ca Vialli, still Chelsea's top scorer with 10 goals in nine gan left out against Derby but is in a squad of 19 today, along t young midfielder Mark Nicholls and Gullit himself.

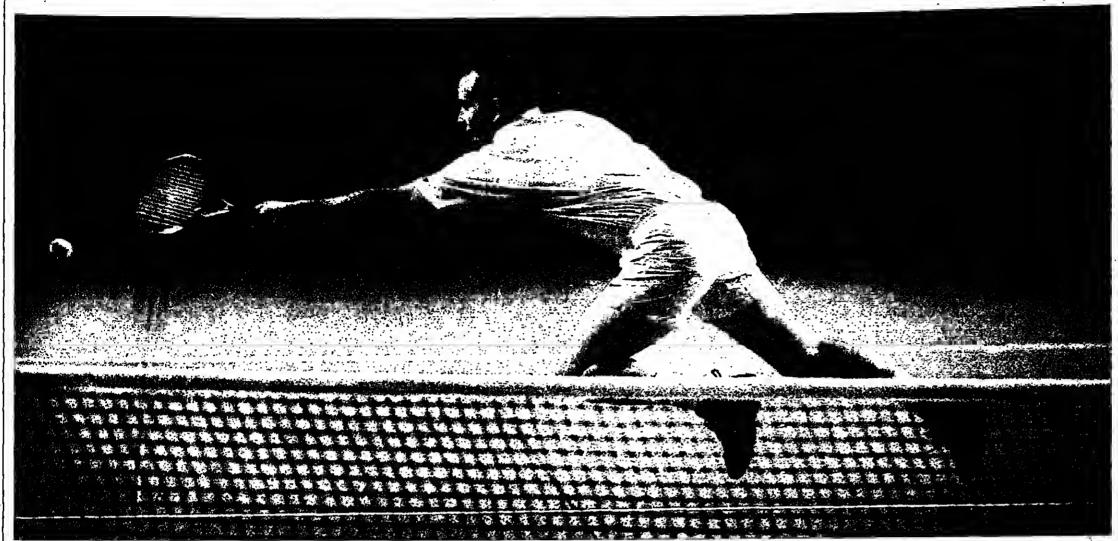

Wimbledon v Southampton Leading scorer

Joe kinnear is without five of his first-team squad for tomo Wimbledon's injury crisis worsens, Jason Euell and John G are long-term injuries and Brian McAllister and Alan Lim not responded to treatment. Efan Ekoku will have a late fit on an injured ankle. Kinnear now hopes that with the Wo finalised, his international players, especially lamaica's Robb will be able to concentrate on domestic matters.

Norwegian international Egil Ostenstad is in contention for to Southampton's starting line-up for the first time in two Ostenstad has not started a game since undergoing ankle in October but the striker scored for the reserves in midter appearing as a late substitute in the 3-2 home defeat against Wednesday last weekend. Kevin Davies, named as joint Car er of the Month for November this week, will tale his pla tack, looking to add to his 10 goals this season as Saints loo a run of three successive defeats.

FAIR PLAY LEAGUE

. 1	Referee Garage Red Yellow Pts Ave	Principle 14700 Miletine
_		1 Everton16 3 34 4
	1 M Reed8 1 32 37 8.17	2 Bolton 16 3 31 4
3	2 G Wallard8 3 34 49 6.13	3 Chelsea16 3 30 4
	3 P Durktr10 2 42 52 5.20
-	4 S Dunn8 1 25 30 5.00	4 Arsenal16 1 36 4
	S G Poli 10 3 34 49 490	5 Blackburn 16 3 25 4
7	6 G Ashby8 1 31 36 4.50	8 Leeds16 1 34 3
]	7 G Barber8 1 29 34 4.25	7 Coventry16 1 33 3
ا د		8 Sheff W16 2 26 3
		9 C Palace17 1 31 2
7	9 J Winter 10 2 32 42 4.20
	10 P Jones 8 2 23 33 4.34	10 Derby16 0 32 3
ן צ	11 P Alcock 8 0 31 31 3.88	Ti Liverpool 15 1 24 2
	12 M Bodenham 8 0 30 30 3.75	12 West Ham17 0 32 3
a	13 U Rennie 9 0 33 33 3.67	13 Newcastle14 1 21 2
	14 D Gallagher 9 2 22 32 356	14 Tottenham 16 1 22 2
9	15 A Wilds9 2 22 32 3.56	15 Soton 16 0 26 2
	16N Barry9 1 27 32 356	16 Man Utd 16 0 25 2
٦ !	17 M Piley8 1 23 28 3.50	17 Barnsley 16 0 24 2
		18 Wimbledon 17 0 25 2
ן ע	18 K Burge8 0 23 23 2.88
	19 S Lodge 9 0 19 19 2.11	19 Leicester16 1 16 4
3	Premiership matches only; Red cards:	20A VIIIa16 1 16 2
11	5pts. Yellow: 1pt; Includes abandoned	Red cards: 5pts. Yellow: 1pt; I
۱ ۱	Derby Wimbledon and West Ham-	abandoned Derby-Wimbledon
1	Crystal Palace matches	Ham- Crystal Palace matches

John McEnroe stretches for the ball during his victory over Bjorn Borg in the ATP Senior Tour of Champions at the Royal Albert Hall yesterday

Report, page 21: Photograph: Robert Hallam

English defence seriously short

Woodward will not be too

Randell at hub,

ALFRED DUNHILL

LONDON

international know-how.

if it is any closer.

RUGBY UNION

Coaches wrestle with different worlds in final Test

If Clive Woodward's England are climbing t purposefully among the foothills of the international rugby , mountain, John Hart's All Blacks are so enjoying the view from the summit of Everest that they are in no hurry to descend. Chris Hewett expects New Zealand to touch even greater helghts this afternoon.

England in turmoil. New Zealand in Arcadia. Four attritional weeks on the road have knocked chunks out of both sides and neither will venture unscathed into today's second Test at Twickenhowever. While Clive Woodwrestling with selection riddles at stand-off, wing, prop and the only dilemma facing the All Blacks was whether Zinzan Brooke, their majestic No 8. should celebrate his 100th and last game for the silver form by scoring to the left of the English posts or the right.

fools of us all, of course, although there is more likelihood of Zinny flummoxing everyone by scoring between the posts than of England turning the world on its head by inflicting what would be only the second defeat on the All Blacks since John Hart took over some 30 matches ago.

Lawrence Dallaglio's men should want this one more than the tourists, if only to carn Woodward some sort of reward for the spirit of adventure he has brought to the national cause. Sadly. England are no better placed to sneak a psyham. The similarity ends there, chological advantage than they are to steal a technical or tacward has spent his week tical march on the finest side to visit these shores since Basil Kenyon's Springboks gave hooker, anyone might have British backsides a fearful been forgiven for thinking that Grand Slam kicking in 1951.

laden 15-9 victory over New Zealand in 1993 that rankles with Hart. He was out in the North Island cold at the time. The grem-Events may conspire to make stemming as it does from events

D Rees.

A Healey

P Grayson

K Bracken

Leonard ...

R Cockerill

D Garforth_

M Johnson .

G Archer

L Dallaglio_

W Greenwood

P de Glanville ...

Hart was genuinely angered we've played at Twickenham by Martin Johnson's assault on before so it won't be happening

It is not England's penalty- Justin Marshall, thoroughly inlin turking under the coach's skin two early tries as the launchpad "Maybe we let the occasion get at Old Trafford a fortnight ago. 10 us." he said yesterday. "but

Sale 14 | Wilson

_Bath 12 W Little

Saracens 9 | Marshall Canterbury capt

...Lexester 13 F Bunce.

Lecester II | Lomu_

Northamoton 10 A Mehrtens

Harleguins I M Allen

Lecester 2 N Hewitt.

Leicester 3 O Brown.

.... Wasps, capt 6 T Randell.

... Saracens 8 Z Brooke

...Leicester 7 J Kronfeld

I Jones..

5 R Brook

Leicester 4

Newcastle

til the final whistle this afternoon sulted by Richard Cockerill's one-man invasion of the haka and we want to end it properly." Intriguingly, Hart wants his and, if truth be told, wholly deflated by his side's failure to use players to seize the day for its

NHarbou

NHarbou

..Canterbur

...Counties

Southland

Aucklan

...N Hartrou

...Aucklan

-Otag

_Auct-lanc

own sake. "International rugby is of far more recent vintage. for something truly memorable. is so special that it makes no I can see us winning it in two be all and end all. We could lose in '99-we're talking about one-ENGLAND V NEW ZEALAND did, would it destroy the things Bath 15 C Cullen might yet achieve in '98? Not in

> "There are things for us to celebrate in this game that will never happen again - Zinny's retirement. Olo Brown's 50th trated in two distinct areas: the cap - and I want us to do right by those landmarks."

my book, it wouldn't.

and, given the fact that the fifth will be against France in Paris. a man of weaker will might he tens and the rest on to the back tempted to revert to English type, play safe on the selection have looked anything but world-

again. Our tour is not over un- front and attempt to kick his class in that theatre of action. way out of trouble. Which is precisely what he will not do. parity or better at the sel-piece,

"If the World Cup was being played this month, we'd be in no position to win it." he said. "But sense to play for anything but years' time. I have a vision of bow the present," he said. "I don't we should be playing and I intend see the 1999 World Cup as the to stick to it, both against New Zealand and throughout the Five Nations in the new year. Yes, off matches, after all - but, if we I'm disappointed we're going into this game without a win. No. I'm we achieved in '96 and '97 and not going to ditch my opinions. This is no time to start fudging the issues that this series against the southern hemisphere sides have thrown up." The issues today are concenrespective front and back threes. The absence of Craig Dowd For Woodward, 1999 is what and Sean Fitzpatrick undenithis exercise is all about. Defeat ally lends New Zealand's front today will leave him without a row a more human appearance victory from his first four Tests and a world-class opposing trio might do enough to force the Brooke brothers, Andrew Mehrfoot, Unfortunately, England

FOOTBALL

Venables 'on brink of leaving Portsmouth'

There was confusion over future of Terry Venables' Portsmouth last night after to denied rumours that he had resigned as the chairman of the First Division club. He confirmed, however, that he would be considering his future at Pompey over the weekend.

Venables, who in his capac ity as the coach to the Australian national side saw them fail to qualify for the World Cup last week, failed to arrive for train ing at Portsmouth's Stoneham training ground yesterday and staff were told he had resigned.

It appeared last night, however, that Venables is involved in a dispute over his stake in the club with his fellow shareholder, Martin Gregory.

Venables blamed a "lack of communication" for the series of events which has seen Gregory decide not to transfer a 51 per cent shareholding in the club to the former England and Tottenham manager.

Venables was said to have withdrawn his offer to come to the financial rescue of the club, which would have meant paying staff wages from his own pockets.

Speaking on Meridian Television last night, Venables said: "As of now I'm still the chairman of the club until such time as I choose different. I expect to make a decision on my future at the club by the end of the

"The club's financial crisis was solved yesterday, you can speak to the bank and I'm sure they'll tell you that everything was solved until last night."

Talking about Gregory, Venables added: "If he is saying I'm Should the lourists achieve spending too much time with Australia, he may or may not be watch out world. Given decent ball and a yard to run in, Chrisright. But it was stressed from day one that I had a contract tian Cullen, Jeff Wilson and with Australia and I had to ful-Jonah Lomu will surely fire enough bullets to penetrate an fill it."

of physical clout, not to mention cided to resign the shares will still be his. He added: "Of still be his. He added: "Of course I will still have direct con-depressed if New Zealand win trol of the club." According to the Gregory & Mail: by 20 clear points - but Hart will family, the shares have never be more than a little cheesed off been registered in Venahles' name, and they have now with-Scotland's fear, page 21 drawn the offer of those shares.

o de la Ligação

ಎ:ಪ್ guerne.

E. H. 100

THE NEW MILLENNIUM WATCH (PRICES START FROM £650) ALFRED DUNITILL WATCHES ARE AVAILABLE AT SELECTED BRANCHES OF THE GOLDSMITHS GROUP. ONE OF THE CEADING QUALITY JEWFLLERS IN THE COUNTRY

GOLDSMITHS & WALKER & HAL

THE INDEPENDENT CROSSWORD

₩.	54 13	. Satu	rday 6 l	Jete	iuver		_	_	_	ь	y of	purie
			1		2		3		4	5
5		7	1										l
3									9				ı
													l
10		Ц		L		11						12	l
													l
13				L		14		L	15				ı
					16		L						ı
17		18				┖		18		20			ı
					L				Ц	Ш			l
21		Щ	22	L	L	L		23	Ц	Ц			Į
					_		24		Ш				ŀ
	25				26		L	 	Ш	Ш			J
	27						1	1	1 1				ı

ACROSS Aussie town in which firm's 1 controlled by Conservative politician's helper (10) Apple variety from Nepal? 2 No. Rhode Island, surpris-il: IS C She (Wasps): I9 D Grewoock (Saracets); 20 K Yates (Bath); 21 M Regan (Bath).

Referee: [Fleming (Scotland)

ingly (9) In fact 1 regularly suffer reduction in interest (4) 10 Girl catching boy's infec-tion. possibly (6) 11 Erect bearing (8)

13 Having no success finding error in record book (6) 4 A clay-pit worked out? That's unusual (8) 7 Worker accepting two hair-styles should be ample? (8) 19 Vehicle in excellent condition (6) 21 City playing Celue, exemplifying different styles! (8) 23 Where you'd have found Greek philosopher solving

25 Boast about period dress • 26 Girl's after musical instru-strument 19) Expensive pieces must be entrusted to English conDOWN

Uncommonly bad opening for article, agreed? It's discarded (9) The men sounded cocky agements: to 5 Pencer (Auckland): Ington): I7 C Spencer (Auckland): Prescon (Auckland): 19 C Barrell helmann (Auckland): 20 C Barrell

Kick-off: 20 (Sty Sports 3)

(4) Contend small child must receive illuminated address, firstly (8) Student element required to assimilate a Woollen garment put on by a chap, originally a heart patient [7] Utensils supplied for meal are new, specially ordered (10) Views given by German people (6) Rich. parsimonious happy medium? (6.4) 15 Cat's-paw seen to be-have timidly? (9) to Scramble in which man's caught in pincer move-ment (8) 18 A service heartless pawnbroker's first to forget (7) 20 Type of acid making ice act unpredictably (6) servation body, sweetie-pie (10)

22 Knilting pattern sailor left in church? (5)
24 Not charged, hence at liberty (4)

The first five correct solutions to this week's puzzle opened next Thursday receive hardbacked copies of the Oxford Electionary of Quotations, Answers and winners' names will be published next Saturday. Send solutions to Saturday Crossword, P.O. Box 4018, The Independent, I Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London El 458L. Please use the box number and postcode and give your own postcode. Last week's winners: B Plaffield, Portleven; T Foster Carris, Howeton; R Galloway, Edinburgh; E Rolls, Leienster, N Swann, Workington.

ON MONDAY

Since 1995 our approach to the game has changed and our fitness is better. This team is definitely the fastest and we play a for more expansive game

Sean Fitzpatrick talks to ion Stafford about leading the All Blacks

TODAY

ELEVEN PAGES OF SPORT BEGIN ON PAGE 16

OPublished by Newspaper Publishing PLC. I Cannot Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 SOL and printed at Mirror Colour Print, St Albans Read, Wasford Back rouge available from Hastone Newspapers, 11,088 840,370, Salunday & December 1947

Reputered as a resempoper with the Post Office

CALL FREE ON 0800 G.O. L.D.S.M.I.T.H.S (0800 46597) THE MARK OF A FINE JEWELLER

PERSONAL FINANCE NEWSPAPER OF THE YEAR

YOUR MONEY

PERSONAL FINANCE, PROPERTY & MOTORING

Photomortage: Jonathan Anstee

Survive Christmas without a financial hangover

Will yours be a plastic Christmas? For millions of us, that's exactly how we propose to spend an estimated 10 per cent of our annual disposable income. Using credit to pay for the festivities is not necessarily a bad idea. But using the wrong card can lead to bad hangovers in the new year. Idin Morse leads us through the options.

DUNHILL

 $f_{\mathcal{Z}}^{-1}(\tau_{2^{\frac{1}{2}}})$

The people who run Harrods vire happy this year. Punters are rolling in through the doors, tills are bleeping and spending at the checkouts is up to the limits one would expect for so famous a store. A Harrods spokesperson says: "We are out of the recession and people feel confident."

But for the rest of us, whose spending is likely to take place in far more prosaic surroundings, the festivities can lead to liquidity problems, and not just the hangover type.

Credit cards are one way of easing cashflow worries. Most of us have one and, with more Than Zemillion Visa cards in the UK, the indications are that our plastic friend will bear the brunt of the Christmas bills.

Royal Bank of Scotland bas researched consumer behaviour over the Christmas period. At RBS, Jayne Goodwin thinks we have learned to use credit cards as a temporary source of bornowing. "We see a lot of card spending in the four weeks leading to Christmas. Last year this totalled £125m, with a 30 per cear increase expected this you use the card just once each year. In January, personal overdrafts and loans take over as customers refinance their bor-

The basic principle of card spending is simple enough. Most offer up to 57 days' interest-free credit on spending up to their limit, usually set at a minimum balance of £500.

But there are some snags, quite apart from whether you can afford to clear the balance. Securing the maximum period of interest- free credit depends on spending at just the right time. This in turn depends on when your monthly card statement is prepared. The art lies in shopping just after this date. The amount will be added to your next statement, with payment due 21 days later. So if your statements are prepared on 10 December, you will have to pay by the end of January. If your statements are dated 20 December, you can delay paying until near the middle of February. Check your last statement for the date it was prepared and shop accordingly.

But if you can't clear the whole balance by the due date, most cards from high street banks offer no interest-free credit. Instead, they charge daily on the whole amount of the balance. Late payment usually costs £10 to £12, with

The exact basis on which interest is charged may also vary. Some cards, like Bradford & Bingley's, charge from date of purchase. Others, like TSB's, from the date at which a purchase is charged to your account. A gap of two days between spending and when the charge is added is average. If month and pay it off in full, then charging from date of purchase will add 24 days of interest to the annual cost of your card.

In exchange for notional periods of free credit, you do pay more expensive annual percentage rates (APRs), mostly between 18 and 21 per cent. Worse still, lenders add between I and 2 per cent to this on credbills, Air Miles and a plethora of special offers. Store cards are more expensive. Aside from John Lewis, charging 18 per cent APR, most levy rates between 29 and 30 per cent. Timecard, valid at Comet, Woolworths the "double-dipping" option.

where spending entitles you to loyalty points, cash off your gas

'We see a lot of card spending in the four weeks before Christmas. Last year this totalled £125m. In january, overdrafts take over'

it balances arising from cash withdrawals. Gold cards, open to those earning £20,000 or more, charge on average 1 per cent less than standard versions. There is often a cost attached to having a card in the first place, but if you have one already, this won't affect your spending either way.

Many cards offer extra "free" benefits; loyalty points, travel insurance and purchase protection. For instance, Alliance & Leicester offers cover against loss, theft or accidental damage for 100 days on purchase values between £50 and £5,000. NatWest top at £20. Cover is all risk, but includes a clause stating "unless the item is otherwise insured", in which case you can't claim. Loyalty points are also on offer from card providers. Spend £250 with Sainsbury's Reward Card and you accumulate points enough for a store voucher worth £2.50. Using credit cards allows and B&Q, comes top with a rate of 31.90 per cent. There are alternatives. New bank cards such as Royal Bank of Scotland's Advanta, are now being launched with discounted rates. Advanta's APR is just 9.9 per cent, but only until July next year, when it goes up to 18.55 per cent, giving you six months to pay for Christmas presents at an attractive rate. Elsewhere, the Co-operative Bank offers its Advantage Visa card with a discounted APR of 7.9 per cent until April, when rates go up to 10.9 per cent. This is cheap borrowing. but there is no interest-free pe-

According to the Co-op's Dave Smith: "We've segmented the market and aim for those who want to use a card as a continuous source of credit." The card is open to non-account holders at the Co-op.

Personal overdrafts charge equivalent annual rates (EARs) on outstanding balances. The best deal comes from Alliance & Leicester at 9.5 per ceat, but most cost 15 per cent or more, with Clydesdale and RBS coming top at 19.56 per cent. Monthly arrangement fees of around £10 will usually be added. To get the best deal you have to switch banks, and it may be too late in the day to do it for this Christmas. Unsecured loans are another option, but care is needed. As a general rule, the shorter the icrm and the smaller the amount borrowed, the bigher the APR. This will be fixed at outset, with monthly repayments combining interest and

If early redemption of the loan is planned, expect to be penalised with an excess charge of two months' interest, On loans of £500 over six months, expect to pay not less than 16.9 per cent from Midland and as much as 25.8 per cent from Yorkshire Bank.

Some lenders also offer flexible loans with no minimum repayment period and lump sum repayment facilities.

Clydesdale Bank is competitive with an EAR of 19.2 per cent on loans between £500 and £5,000, repayments on a weekly, fortnightly or monthly hasis and no early redemption penalty. Drawbacks include a £35 arrangement fee and minimum £100 drawdown, but if you want the early redemption option, this is good value.

If in doubt about whether you can afford Christmas, apply the Scrooge test: which is worse, being in debt, or not spending at all? And remember, be only had to deal with the Ghost of Christmas Past.

Best borrowing deals - a Christmas selection

Cards

Co-Operative Bank Advantage Visa offers 7.9% APR until 31 March 1998, then 10.9%. Phone 0800 109000

RBS Advanta

offers 9.90% APR until 1 July 1998, then 17.9%. Phone 0800 077770

Loans (£500 over six months)

Midland Bank (unsecured) 19.9% APR. Phone 0800 180180

Clydesdale Bank (flexible) 19.2% EAR. Phone 0800 240024

YOU CAN BE SURE OF THE TOP FIXED ONE-YEAR

RATE ON £10,000 AND OVER

The top one-year, fixed-rate account is currently paying an excellent 8.01% gross return (6.43% net return).

it is exclusive to Chase de Vere Investments and comes from one of the UK's top five building societies.

To find out more about this outstanding investment, call us or complete the coupon.

But please act quickly - this is a strictly limited offer and too

Please return the coupon to: Chase de Vers

CALL NOW FOR DETAILS 0800 805 806 FREEPHONE LINES OPEN 24 HOURS

CHASE DE VERE

Investments, FREEPOST, Bristol BS38 7JX
Please send me de one year fixed-rate	tails of Chase de Ve e account	re's
Name	··	·
Address
	-
Post Code	· · · · ·
Tel No	Do8

INSIDE 3/NIC CICUTTI ISAs in all their glory
5/10NATHAN DAVIS Stocking fillers

7/RODDY KOHN Motorway madness 9/FELICITY CANNELL New Monopoly board Break for the border

Hot car speculators burnt

ISAs won't benefit the poor

NIC CICUTTI

Call me an old-fashioned lefty if you must, but I've transfer up to £1,000 a year. always heen in favour of wealth redistribution. The Then again, most lower-paid idea that the better-off in sopeople could never afford to ciety should help out the less save even a fraction of that fortunate appeals to me.

So why is it that when I heard Geoffrey Rohinson, the Government's Paymaster General, saying the Individual Savings Account (ISA) will "benefit the many, not the few". I reached for the Proposals for the ISA were announced this week at a fractious press conference, in which Mr Robinson attempted to justify the £50,000 lifetime cap on tax-free savings into the new account.

It wasn't just the sight of Labour's richest minister, one apparently skilled in the hlack art of tax avoidance, telling me about ISAs which had me gagging. It was the assumption that we would huy the Government's line. This was the claim that its proposals would hit only a tiny minority of the really wealthy, those with £50,000 or more held in PEPs and Tessas by April 1999.

Now, of course, wealth is relative. If you are unemployed, £50,000 is one heck of a lot of money. But for many hundreds of thousands of people, this is simply the amount they have accumulated over the years in the hope that it will help them when they retire. They are the ones who will be hit by the ISA proposals, not the super-rich, people like Mr Robinson, who will always find ways of dodging taxes on their assets. I can already hear plaintive questions: "But what out the worse off? Won't they henefit from the ISA?"

Again, benefits are relative. Yes, millions will potentially benefit. If you are saving money in a building society account, placing it into an ISA instead will earn you more. The ISA will mean banks and building societies offering tax-free savings accounts into which millions of people will

Moreover, the annual cash limit of £1,000 into ISAs is important. It suggests that the Government has another purpose. It is that of capping the amount of tax foregone on savings schemes by the Inland Revenue to an annual limit of £1.5bn or thereabouts.

As for encouraging more people to save, I don't buy a word of it, Imagine the scene. You are at the Tesco checkout and in your hand you have the £5 change from your weekly shop. To the left is the ISA desk, where you are in with a chance to take part in a lottery that will win 50 people a prize of £1,000 each month. To the right is the National Lottery till, where you are in with a chance of £5m or £10m. Even a supposedly serious personal finance editor such as myself can guess which way most of us will turn. The reality is that the ISA is a shabby way of taxing a swathe of hapless individuals who made the mistake of taking at its word a previous government's tax pledges.

Most people who have invested in PEPs and Tessas in the past 10 years are middle class. They aspire to a better future and are prepared to make sacrifices. Their "bargain", if that's the right word, would have meant setting aside more money over 20 or 30 years in order to reach their financial goals.

We may be scornful of their propensity to save, even icalous of the higher earnings that have allowed them to do so. But we should also feel contempt for a Government which uses class war language to justify extra taxes on them, when the richest and most powerful people in our society will, as always, get off MONEY MAKEOVER

If you have cash, it's best to spread it around

Name: Luanne Reed Age: 25

Occupation: Sales and marketing manager for a fashion сотпрану.

The problem: Luanne, who is single and has no dependents. earns £20,000 and has hopes of future salary increases with her company. She has £22,000 in a Barclays Bank High Interest Account, £14,000 of which she recently inherited.

She expects to huy a flat although she does not know how much money she will need for this. She might let a room out to a lodger. Luanne does not wish to commit all her capital on the purchase and would like have some funds left to invest for the longer term.

Her employment contract entitles Luanne to sick pay cover of 10 days a year. She is not eligible to join her company pension scheme as it is only available to directors in the firm, but believes she is in a position to make contributions of £150 per month into a scheme. The adviser: Edward Creasev. client manager at Clark Conway, independent financial advisers, 26 Durham Road, London SW20 0TW (0181-241

The advice: Flexibility is the key to any advice in this case and therefore I would suggest a split of her capital in the following

I would recommend keeping £10,000 in a postal account due to the generally higher rates of return these offer over normal bank and huilding society accounts. One point worth noting is the relatively little difference in interest rates for 30day, 90-day and instant access accounts of this type. On this basis, an instant access postal account would seem most appropriate. When the ideal property is found, capital would then be accessible. The most competitive account at present is offered by Coventry Building Society. which pays 7.10 per cent gross on deposits.

There are one or two accounts offering slightly higher rates but they require a higher balance to be maintained which may not suit Luanne.

I would advise that £9,000 of Luanne's capital is invested for the medium to long term in tax-efficient investments such as Tessas and PEPs. We need to keep in mind that PEPs and Tessas will be subject to changes

Both products will be transferable into Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs), subject to a £50,000 top limit. At present the stock market remains volatile so I would suggest tooking at a PEP with a "phasing-in" option. This type of PEP has the ability to spread the investment of £6,000 over a six-month period, so avoiding the commitment of the capital to the market at an inopportune moment.

Fidelity is one company which offers this option along with a wide range of good performing funds. I would recommend that she also considers a Tessa. One of the top interestpaying providers is Principality Building Society, with a rate of 7.65 per cent paid gross providing the investment is left for a full five years. As an alternative, Luanne could consider a fixed interest rate Tessa. One of the best rates available is offered by Birmingham Midshires at 7.05 per cent.

The remaining halance of Luanne Reed should protect her income

tacks, and permanent health inpolicies. She is young and her capital can be kept in an instant-access account for immediate day-to-day use. As well as considering Luanne's capital position, thought also needs to be given to protecting her income now and when she retires. She should consider the merits of critical illness and income protection healthy so the cover should be relatively cheap.

There is often confusion over the differences between critical illness (C1) cover, which pays out a lump sum on the diagnosis of one of a list of critical conditions, including strokes, cancer and heart atPhotograph: Nicola Kurtz surance (PHI), which provides a regular income in the event of ongoing ill health, probably a more pressing need at pre-There is a wide choice of companies offering cover. Care should be taken when choosing a provider as terms and premium conditions vary consid

If Luanne is unable to join her company pension scheme for some time, I would recom! mend a personal pension plan is started sooner rather than later. Delaying the start of a pension can have a substantial negative effect on the benefits received in retirement.

Any contribution she makes would benefit from tax relief at her marginal rate, currently 23 per cent, which means that for every £77 she pays in, the taxman will add a further £23 to her pension.

The Government has indicated that it will soon be announcing details of its new stakeholder pension and Luanne may wish to wait for these developments hefore committing herself. Whenever she decides to start a pension, I er of premium benefit in her contract, whereby pension premiums are paid by the insurer in the event she is unable to work due to ill health.

Luanne should look to increase her pension contributions each year in line with. inflation, if funds allow. She though she is single and has no immediate dependents, a will is the best way of ensuring her

As a final thought, Luanne mentioned the possibility that if she buys a house she may wish 27 11 11

Let's hope next March's Budget does not change renta-room allowances, which allow someone in her position to re- (77 *: 1 $4. ceive an annual income of up to £4,250 a year tax free.

Such an income can often be the deciding factor when purchasing a first property.

UNDER THE SPOTLIGHT/GUINNESS FLIGHT GLOBAL SMALLER COMPANIES FUND

Global Smaller Companies

The deal: The fund, an openended investment company (OEIC), is managed in Guernsey. Its aim is to achieve capital growth by investing mainly in small companies. It aims to take advantage of show promise of substantial outperformance. The fund, together with its sibling, the Guinness Flight European Smaller Companies Fund, is a sub-fund operating under an umbrella arrangement. This means that it may be possible to switch out of one world-wide opportunities for fund into another within the Flight without incurring capital gains taxes.

Minimum monthly investments are £150, or £2,000 for lump sum contributions, with further lump sums accepted over £500. Payments can be made in US dollars, German marks or Swiss francs.

Charges involve a hid-offer also an annual management fee of 1 per cent. Fees and expenses are charged to income where possible. There may also be additional expenses. Plus points: Guinness Flight argues that over the past few years larger companies have delivered excellent returns to investors, who have tended to parts. As a result, small companies have underperformed. But the time is right for this situation to be reversed and smaller companies should outperform in the coming period. If so, this fund will deliver above-average performance. Potential risks: While Guinness expects to use its own research

It will rely heavily on HSBC ... James Capel's own small companies database, which means . that, to an extent, you have fund management at one remove. The verdict: Guinness Flight has an excellent reputation as a fund manager, but this is one for people prepared to take a risk. Marks out of five: Three.

If all the world's top companies were British, you wouldn't need our Global Tracking PEP.

Not all the best companies are British, which is why not all of the Norwich Global Tracking PEP is invested in British companies. Unlike most other tracking PEPs, we invest in over 2,500 companies worldwide, to give excellent potential for growth. ■ Growth since launch in July 1996 of 22.7% TAX-FREE!, with

- a historic return of 100.2% over 5 years.
- 75% of your investment tracks UK companies and 25% tracks companies in 27 other stock markets worldwide.
 - No initial charges and no charge for transfer from other PEPs.
 - Access to your money whenever you want it. For a free information pack call quoting reference number 11N49.

0800 0562 450

I would like more information on the Norwich Global Tracking PEP. Telephone Number (Day)

BARGAIN BASEMENT

Birmingham Midshires is raising interest rates paid on its savings accounts by an average of 0.25 per cent. The increase hrings its SmartStart children's account to a rate of 7.5 per cent gross on savings of £500 or more. The Quantum Instant Plus Account, where returns are linked to transactions made, will rise by an average of 0.28 per cent, with a top rate of 6.25 per cent on balances above £50,000. First Instant Access, the postal account, rises by 0.29 per cent. Details from hranches.

Portman Building Society is launching an annual travel insurance scheme for families, costing £99. The scheme offers cover for family holidays, winter sports and business travel and includes European motoring assistance. tndividual cover on the same ierms costs £67 a year. Call 0870 6061212 for details.

Fleming Investment Trust Management is offcring investors a discount of 40 per cent on the fees normally charged if they were to selt their Railtrack shares and reinvest the proceeds in one of the company's 19 investment trusts. The offer means a charge of £7.50 on dealing CINIS, down from £12.50, until 31 December, If more than one family member offers shares for exchange, the fee will remain the same. Call 0500 500161.

The Share Centre, the retail stockbroker, is offering huyers of shares in publicly quoted foothall clubs a dealing commission of 1 per cent on purchase, subject to a £2.50 minimum. Buyers will be sent a "gift certificate" in the name of the person receiving the gift. Call 0800 800008.

Yorkshire Bank is offering a one-year fixed-term deposit account, Premium Term Bond, paying tiered rates of up to 7.55 per cent gross on deposits above £45,000. Minimum deposits of £2,000 will earn 7 per cent gross. Call 0113 2472410.

Paws, the pet insurance service, has added two new benefits to its cover for cats and dogs and for crossbreed pets. The provider now offers personal accident cover of up to £250 in cash benefits if an owner has to take time off work after being bitten while caring for the pet following accident or illness. Paws now also offers a vet helpline. Bereavement counsellors will be available if a pet dies. Call 0121 6267891.

Pearl, the insurer, is offering free breakdown cover to drivers who take out its Drivewise Gold motor insurance. In addition to standard cover, Drivewise Gold also offers protection in Europe, including up to one hour's free roadside labour, free transport to a policyholder's destination, alternative overnight accommodation if the car cannot be repaired that day, a message service to friends or family and a 24hour helpline. Call 0645

3/PERSONAL FINANCE

THE INDEFENDENT SATURDAY 6 DECEMBER 1997 around

ISAs won't encourage more people to save

The Government's proposals for a new taxfree Individual Savings Account (ISA) to replace PEPs and Tessas were unveiled this week. ISAs have been heralded as Labour's mechanism for promoting a greater savings culture among the less well-off in our society. Nic Cianti looks at what they mean and how you can maximise the options available to you.

What are ISAs?

y----

T .

y 🖢 🛷 *

海ではいる مين مسور يا نهو

$ - 12 £ ---Andrew F

224 CL 3

38

10

10 to #7.4" 7. °

A TOWN

(CX -- è 🗮) 💯 6 ***

A. 2. 2 .

-

Burner and Carlot

Marks 15 104 17

The Individual Savings Account is the replacement for personal equity plans (PEPs) and tax-exempt savings schemes (Tessas). It will be introduced in April 1999. As with PEPs, income paid from the ISA will be tax free.

Gains on investments inside the ISA will also be tax free. allowing your capital to accumulate. In addition, the Goverament is proposing to pay a 10 per cent tax credit on dividends from UK equities for the first five years of the scheme.

How does the ISA compare with a PEP?

At present, you can invest up to £6,000 a year in a general PEP, which can include corporate bonds. Additionally, you may invest £3,000 in the shares of a single company. Other than the annual allowance, there is no upper limit on PEP invest- Is there an apper limit on ments. Tessas allow a maximum investment of £9,000 over five of £50,000 on the amount that years, £3,000 of which can be can be placed in ISAs. This is ber 1999. Transfers are subject tucked away in the first year, £1,800 in years two, three and years to reach that amount, fine. four, and £600 in the final year. Or if starting from scratch, you They allow withdrawals with loss of tax benefits. Follow-on Tessas, which began to be offered in 1996, allow a maximum in-

ISAs will allow a maximum investment of £5.000 a year. This can be a mixture of cash, shares and even insurance policies (see below).

There is no minimum, unlike most PEPs, which demand regular savings of at least £25 a month. The Government expects that supermarkets and similar outlets will be prepared to set up ISA accounts into which even a few pounds can be can do it in 10 years.

What else is different? vestment in year one of £9,000. allowed to place up to £1,000 of expected to apply to become mto a cash denosit account, with instant access. Withdrawals will not mean loss of tax incentives.

It will also be possible for up to £1,000 of the ISA's annual allowance to be in the guise of an insurance policy, so that they too enjoy tax-free benefits. This is aimed at friendly societies.

funds I can stash in an ISA?

What will happen to PEPs when the ISA comes in? It will be possible to transfer all

ISA. The transitional period in Unlike PEPs, there will be a cap which this is expected to happen is between 6 April and 6 Octowithout time limit; if it takes 20 to the £50,000 upper ceiling.

Will transfers be easy?

The details have not been worked out. But PEP providers, together with banks, building so-Again, unlike PEPs, you will be cicties and supermarkets, will be that £5,000 annual allowance ISA providers. The Government believes they will want to effect transfers for free.

> The theory is that, as with PEPs, providers notify the inland Revenue of subscriptions made. Investors will not be required to declare income or capital gains arising from ISAs on their tax returns.

What happens if I do not transfer my PEPs into the ISA before the transitional period ends?

your PEP holdings into the The consultative document imin equity prices over that periplies you will be subject to tax od. Of course, couples would be on capital gains from the April able to use a double allowance. cut-off point. Income from a PEP will also be taxed at your Should I still invest in PEPs? marginal rate.

> What happens if I have more than £50,000 invested in PEPs? Sorry, the most you can shift into the ISA is £50,000. The rest probably will be subject to tax from April 1999.

mortgage? Lenders calculate that regular premiums of about £160 a month into a PEP/ISA (equivalent to the £50,000 limit over 25 years) will be worth £125,000 at maturity, assuming growth rates of 9 per cent.

This may prove insufficient for homes in London and the South-east of England and takes no account of sharp falls terest is calculated daily, allowing for

At the same time, sums repaid over and above this amount go into a "parallel account". This pays interest at the vari-

By leaving the money in there tand transferring the interest from your Tessa) until you have built up enough funds to pay off the loan, you will continue to earn 7.95 per cent net of tax, equivalent to 12.72 per cent gross for higher rate taxpavers, or 9.77 per cent for those on basic rate tax.

INTERNET INVESTOR

Drive a hard bargain with car insurance

ROBIN AMLÔT

There is something about buying motor insurance which tends to bring out a reaction in many people remarkahly similar to that occasioned by sitting in a dentist's chair with the drill being revved up next to them. If you really cannot face going to see a broker or an agent to sort out your insurance, you can always check out what is available on the web.

Using an on-line insurance provider, you can make your own insurance decisions when it suits you, a principle aiready accepted by the financial services industry in what marketing insiders call the Martini husiness model customers increasingly want to do business "any time, any place, anywhere".

In theory at least, we may reasonably expect the savings thus made to be passed on to us in the shape of more competitive insurance quotations.

Several insurance providers and insurance brokers have websites which offer you a form to fill in. In return, they will, in most cases, email you an insurance quotation.

At present, a significantly small number of websites offer a full on-line service. In fact, there are only two: Eagle Star Direct, the on-line arm of an established telesales uperation, and Screentrade. a new on-line insurance brokerage, quoting premiums from a range of insurers.

Yes, especially if you are a higher-rate taxpayer. Tax exemptions will apply between now and April 1999, including dividends paid in this period and you will be able to transfer into the ISA, subject to the limit.

The Government says you keep your Tessa to the end of its five-year life. Thereafter, you can can transfer the capital from it into the ISA, but not the interest, subject to the £50,000 cap,

Will I be able to keep on pay-

We don't know. If you start one

One potential problem is that only £1,000 of each year's con-

This appears to suggest that most Tessa holders won't be able to keep all their funds in cash

Will ISAs encourage a greater

It's doubtful. Generally, saving money requires a surplus of income over expenditure. Telling someone they will get an extra-

£5 a year (compound) if they save £30 a month for a year is unlikely to be enticing if they don't know where to find the money for their gas bill.

after transfer.

"savings culture"?

What about Tessas?

Eagle Star Direct was set up in 1989 and has had a presence on the web since 1995. it claims to offer savings of 15 per cent for people who pay via the website.

Screentrade Motor offers quotations from a panel of eight insurers: AGF, Bishopsgate, Folgate, GAN, ITT London & Edinburgh, Norwich Union, Royal & Sun Alliance, and Zurich. The site will offer bome and contents cover in early 1998. Screentrade also hopes to add more companies to its panel of insurers.

To insure a car through Screentrade, you access the site and complete the on-line form. Once you have filled in your details and submitted the form, the system returns a list of quotes from which you may make a selection. Alternatively, you can resulmit the form, altering the details in order to reduce the premiums offered by increasing the excess you are prepared to pay or by reducing the number of insured drivers.

If you need to exit Screentrade, you can return up to one week later and not have to re-enter your requirements, providing you have made a note of your session reference number.

This can be useful if you need to exit the website to check the details of your car, or your insurance policy, for example.

Both Eagle Star Direct and Screentrade will accept payment via credit or debit card. Cover takes effect once the card transaction is confirmed and your insurance documentation is mailed out the following working day.

Eagle Star Direct: www.eaglestardirect.co.uk Sereentrade: www.screentrade.com

Make the most of the Tessa loophole that has opened

Perhaps the most significant one is the loophole that appears to have opened up on the Tessa front. As the main piece describes, it will be possible to keep Tessas to the end of their five-year life, beyond

As with all new savings environments, the ISA will both remove opportunities to maximise your income or capital and open up fresh ones.

the April 1999 start-up date for ISAs. At maturity, you shift the money into the ISA, subject to the £50,000 limit. Unfortunately, it is not yet clear whether payments into the Tessa will be allowed to continue beyond then. But even the £4,800 maximum that can be invested before then should mature into a tidy sum. The Government's consultative document implies that transferring interest from the Tessa into the ISA will not be possible. Here, it may be possible to make use of several flexible mortgage products.

Take the Legal & General Flexible Reserve mortgage. It currently charges a variable rate of 7.95 per cent. You agree a monthly mortgage payment on which inspeedier capital repayments.

able rate charged on the mortgage itself.

ing into the Tessa after April THE INDEPENDENT now, you will be able to put in Free guide to Mortgages un to £4,800 before April 1999. BARCLAYS tributions can be held in eash. MORTGAGES

A 27 page guide to the ins and outs of choosing a mortgage For your free copy ball 0800 585 691 Or complete and return this coupon to

Sarclays Mongage Guide

POST PO Box 7, Brentford, Middx, TW8 9BR

Address_ Postcode

Tel (inc STD).

Are you a Barclays Customer? Are you a 1st time buyer? The information on this form will be stored on computer and used to identify produ

Yes No 🗆 Home mover services which might be relevant to you. If you do not wish to receive future information Barcleys Mongages please tick.

Pensions made simple

24 hours a day 7 days a week Now you can pick up the phone and get pensions information or advice and even set up a plan, quickly and without fuss.

SCOTTISH WIDOWS

Looking good for your pension.

Please telephone quoting ref: 288D16 0345 6789 10 or talk in your Independent Financial Adviser. For your protection, your calls to Scottish Widows may be recorded or monitored and information or addisc will only be provided on the arrish Wolou's products. Isolaid to Scottish Widows' Fund and Life Assurance Society. Regulated by the Personal Investment Authority.

innovation from Legal & General visit the mortgages page on our website now and select 'interplan'. Alternatively, call 0500 666 555 quoting ref: Q4 PL22. Lines open Mon-Fri of the property of the ration of presentative only of the Legal & General arketing group, members of which are guitated by the Personal Investment sortey and LMRO for the purposes of bearing Legal & General's name

DIRECT LINE RATES

SAVINGS RATES

Direct Line Instant Access Account UP TO 7.00% GROSS*

PERSONAL LOAN RATES Direct Line Personal Loans

0181 667 1121

₹6,000

All rates correct at 1st December 1997

0181 649 9099 MORTGAGES

0181 680 9966 PERSONAL LOANS

EASY TO TRANSFER

EXISTING

PEPS

LUMP SUM

INVESTMENTS

FROM £1,000

REGULAR

SAVINGS

FROM £50

A MONTH

ONLY 0.3%

ANNUAL

MANAGEMENT

CHARGE

NO EXIT

CHARGES

Mr/Mrs/Miss/Ms.... Forename..

Source: Direct Line Financial Services. For further information about the Direct Line products listed above, please phone the appropriate number quoting ref. INDBB37

YOUR HOME IS AT RISE IF YOU DO'NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS . ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAN SECURED ON IT. ... For your added security selephone calls casy be securded and candensly essentiated. Direct red telephone on wheels are trademarks of Direct Line Descreency ple and most with its p

Little thought has gone into the logic behind Individual Savings Accounts

there are times when I won- ISAs. According to the conthrough the consequences will be a 10 per cent tax adof planned legislation. We vantage in bolding shares now bave a pretty good idea this way and money on deof the shape Individual Sav- posit will not be taxed. ings Accounts (ISAs) will money that can be contributed, the Government is effectively penalising thrift.

Paying for a savings incentive such as this by reducing the amount of tax saved by the better-off so benefits can be handed back to those is very laudable. But there is no evidence that ISAs will encourage savings by those who advantage, but I am not sure do not presently put money by for a rainy day.

ceiling at a level as low as £50,000, they run the risk of chasing the very rich into as people huy more than other areas of tax avoidance one each year at supermarwhich may not be as transparent as PEPs and Tessas benefit the Exchequer. The middle classes could find

Now you may think I am der a while. There are a number of PEP savers who bave nothing like £50,000 well-off is no excuse for discommitted, but intended to couraging thrifty existing pay off mortgages greater in savers. Nice try Gordon. A mechanism already in place. please. What will happen to them? They will have to make other Brian Tora is chairman of the arrangements.

Then there is the lack of strategy committee.

ROYAL &

tracker PEP at just 0.3%.

Royal & Sun Alliance.

icalculated by FTSE International Limited in conjunction with the Invitate & Faculty of Actuaries FTSE International Limited does not spontoe, eadorse or promote this product. All copyright in the desirable and constitutes that was in FTSE International Limited in one tack copyright in the creation of this product.

Tracker

hidden extras.

Invest On-line, FREEPOST 3479, Reading, Berkshire RG10 9ZZ.

FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT

THE ROSE TRACKER PEP CALL FREE ON

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK 8AM-10PM

Far be it for me to carp, but any real incentive to use der if this Government thinks sultative document, there

Assuming £5,000 is intake. ISAs should be more vested, the income might be encompassing and flexible expected to be £200 a year, than existing savings vehicles. so there is £20 of tax to be Yet by limiting the amount of saved. If the management charge for an ISA is more than 0.4 per cent, there is no benefit. Well, capital gains tax will be sheltered. But who really pays capitals gains tax anyway? The current allowance takes care of all but the very seasoned or who might not otherwise save singularly successful investors.

Instant accessibility is an instant investability is. Stories of multiple PEP applications Moreover, by pitching the already abound, particularly as a result of windfall shares. Expect confusion over ISAs ket checkouts.

On balance, I am in symand which will certainly not pathy with the Government's aim to make available a sayings product that is univerthere is not enough of a sally acceptable. ISAs may cushion to relieve the state of work, but I doubt it. Quite the burden of looking after what incentive has to be offered to those who might otherwise spend the money on being over-critical, but pon- lottery tickets or the 2.30 at Romford eludes me, but failing to incentivise the less value through the savings little more thought next time,

STORE CARDS

9/2 says -- 1.39%

Seris & Special 01244 86(80) 1.875 2885 2885 2885

A – Minimum age 22 yms. Holders of comprehensive motor insurance policy or lender's existing APR – Annuralisad percentage rate
ASU – Accident, stdomass, and unamployment insurance
B+ C – Buildings and comergis insurance
B+ Higher rate applies if insurance not arranged
LIV – Loan to value
MP – Mortigage indemnetry premium
W – Introductory rate for a limited period
U – Comprovement insurance

All rates subject to change without notion. Source: MONEYFACTS 81892 500617 4 Dec 1997

Greig Middleton investment

SUNALLIANCE

As you can see, the Rose Tracker PEP has more points in its favour than most.

Not least, the fact that it offers one of the lowest annual management charges for a

It's the latest offer from Invest On-

Unlike some index trackers, the Rose

You can start investing from as little line, the direct investment arm of one of the UK's leading insurance companies,

Tracker PEP spreads your investment over the whole FTSE All-Share Index, not just the

as £50 each month, or with a lump sum of £1000 or more. Even if you already have a PEP it is very easy to transfer your

For your investment guide, call free

now on 0500 100 333 or clip the coupon below. Our friendly and knowledgeable staff will be happy to answer any ques-

≥0M~UIM@

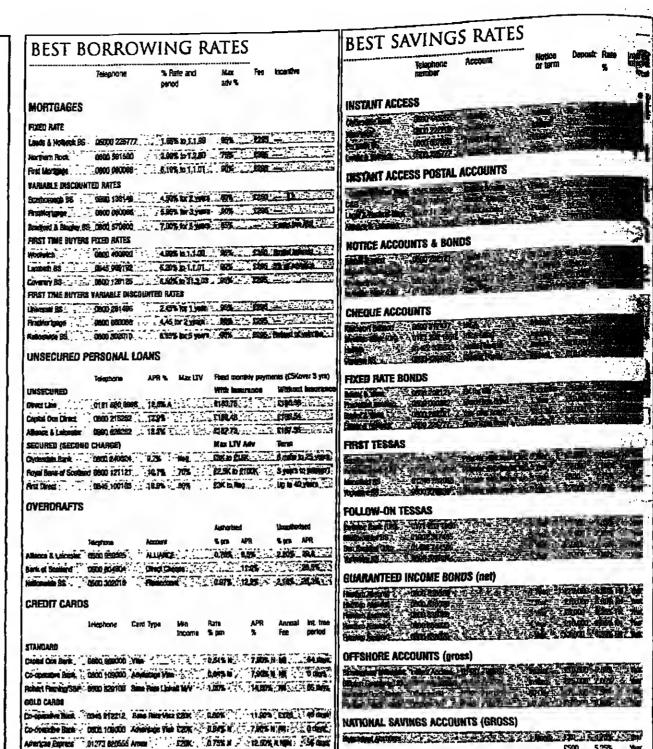

Invest

...Date of Birth.....

funds to the Rose Tracker.

tions you may have.

rop 100 companies, so reducing the risks.

Don't Waste Your Money

180% 1,30% 18.0%

Save more than £11, get 3 extra publications worth £10.40 free and never pay any price incease - ever

The best person to control your savings and investments is you. But to make the 1 most informed choices you need to understand your options. Subscribe to Personal Finance magazine and we'll make your money work harder - right away.

Personal Finance magazine is written especially for those that are new to investing and saving, or have too little time to find out about all the options for themselves.

Each month the magazine explains all the complexities in everyday jargon-free language covering topics such as:

● PEPs ● Pension and savings plan investments ● Investment Trusts ● Unit Trusts ● Life insurance.......and much, much more.

All for only £2.60 each month from your newsagent. But take up this special 3 part subscriber offer, and youll pay less than $1.67 an issue.

If you choose to pay your subscription by standing order - not only need you SEND NO MONEY NOW - but we will hold your subscription at this price forever. THEN THERE'S MORE Part 2 - The jargon-busting Complete Guide to Capital Growthwill help you make your money grow in the way that's right for you.

For subscribers to Personal Finance Magazine it's entirely free.

Part 3 - What PEP gives you all the details on how you can get the most out of saving tax free. Published twice a year, the price of this publication is $3.95 per issue. For you both issues (worth £7.90 will cost nothing at all.

So - whether you select standing order or cash - fill and send back this coupon right away (postage is paid) and we'll help you find out how to make the most of your money.

Part 1 - With this massive 36% discount you may already be reaching for your cheque book. Well, hold on a minute.

I wish to become a subscriber to Personal Finance magazine for only £19.95 for 12 issues and claim The Complete Guide to Capital Growth worth £2.50) and the two editions of What PEP (worth £7.90) both Free
SURSETTION

B — Withdrawale via Benk Clearing System F — Read rate (all other rates variable)

N - Net rate

•	מואונות מווות מווינות
	Account to be debited
	Account No
	All Property and all special states and special states and states and special states are a second Signature(s)
,	441/441919-4-141114-4-14114-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414-4-1414
	4124
	419441171-condition-deal and plantification from 1 and 1
1	To Rank
	Branch
	Address
	utilization and the second sec
, 1	displaying heap it has been specially been specially as a second special speci
	Sort Code
į	Please pay Lloyda Bank, 6 Holborn Circus, London EC1 (30 94 31) for the credit of Parsonal Financa Magazine Account No 0623125 the sum of £19.95, and £19.95 on the same date each succeeding year until butter and Access Visa American Express Diners IN ALL CASES PLEASE COMPLETE YOUR NAME.

i enclose a cheque for £19.95 drawn on a UK bank and mada payable to Charterhouse Communications Group Ltd.

Complete the coupon and return to: Personal Finance, FREEPOST, 4 Tabernacie Street, London EC28 28H same date each succeeding year until further notice in writing and dabit my/our account accordingly.

Stay

ome

Some light reading for the festive season

The state of the s

WW. John J.

47 4.4

Own 5

-

far en

wide to Capital Groat

JONATHAN DAVIS COLUMN

Photograph: Reuters

This has not been a vintage year for published insights into the art of stock market investment. There has been nothing published in the past 12 months, for example, to match the rich insights of Against The Gods, Peter Bernstein's fascinating history of risk, in the previous year.

Nor has there been such a comprehensive analysis of successful investment techniques as What Works on Wall Street, by James O'Shaughnessy, another remarkable title which appeared in 1996. However the past year has not been without its highlights and for those who like to pack their Christmas stockings with useful reading about the riches which they hope the new year may hring, it is not difficult to put together a list of reading matter.

First mention has, however, to go to an extraordinary book by the New York trader Victor Niederhoffer. Education of a Speculator (published by John Wiley) chronicles the life and thoughts of a man who went on from a career as an academic and champion squash player to become the high-profile professional trader, whose clients numbered a place to put your money. George Soros and several othell-known investors.

Alas for poor Niederhoffer, who is no hlushing violet, his hedge fund was wiped out a fcw weeks ago when he punted most of its money in a disastrous bet on the Thai stock market and he became the higgest single casualty of this year's rout in Asian markets.

No such fate awaits Warren

The consequences of the great crash in the Japanese stock market are still being felt Buffett. There have been so many books about Buffett's extraordinary success as a stock market investor that the market for such books is in danger of hecoming overbought. Roger Lowenstein's hiography Buffett (Weidenfeld & Nicolson) throws a lot of light on the character of a man who is now almost as famous for his homespun aphorisms as he is for the prowess which has made him the second wealthiest individual in the United States hehind Bill Gates of Microsoft.

But there are also plenty of gems still to be found in Warren Buffett Speaks (John Wiley) an anthology of the great man's wit and wisdom. Two quick examples from many on the value of stockbroker advice: "Never ask the harber if you need a haircut." On the merits of simple husinesses as ness that even a fool can run because some day a fool will." published in 1978 and reissued There are interesting anecas one of Wiley's Investment dotes and some fuscinating Classics series. historical detail in a new his-The book has an interest-tory of the investment trust ining section on the great crash dustry by John Newlands, Put in the Japanese stock market Not Your Trust in Money, pubsince 1989. The consequences lished by the Association of Inof that crash itself are still bevestment Trusts. The book is ing felt today, as the malaise a useful reminder that there is in Asian markers underlines. nothing new about the phe-It is an open question whether nomenon of widening disor not the Japanese political counts which we have seen system can adapt sufficiently over the past couple of years. well to prevent its severe dose I am not a great fan of how of debt deflation spilling over into a wide-reaching economic to" books but two which I thought were a cut above the crisis for the rest of the world. That issue will be one of the average this year were Bernice Cohen's Armehoir Investor, the crucial tests of how the stock markets perform in 1998. story of how a shrewd whitehaired lady has taken to play-Finally, one oddity brought ing the markets from her home. to my attention by a reader of The Independent, which may and Picking The Right Unit Trust by Bruce McWilliams appeal to number-crunchers. The Science of Winning, by Bur-(FT Pitman Books), a guide to ton P Fabricand, is a detailed the techniques you need to find the most consistent performers handbook on how to apply the in the unit trust sector. techniques of hetting on the This year has seen the 10th horses to beating the stock anniversary of the 1987 stock market averages. market crash, and with it have The author believes that come a host of titles to comshare prices follow a random memorate this and the great walk, but argues that it is possible to study the odds and market crash of October 1929. For insights into how market make profits from hacking companies which have recrashes occur, and why, there's ported earnings increases that still nothing to beat the account by Charles Kindleberger, Maare materially higher than the nias, Panics and Crashes, first market has been expecting.

UNDERSTANDING THE STOCK MARKET

Dorothy Parker, the American writer, once remarked: "Two of the most beautiful words in the English language are 'cheque enclosed'." In the latest in our series on the stock market, John Andrew discusses how to make these magic words appear before our eyes on a regular, and generous, basis.

Shareholders are part owners of a company. Should all go well, they will receive a share of their company's profits. known as dividends, usually twice a year. However, companies do not pay out all of their profits to their sharebolders.

A proportion is retained to plough back into the husiness. Technically, undistributed profits are "transferred to reserves" in years when the profits are not as good, so the company can pay dividends from reserves.

When a company prospers, shareholders' rewards are twofold. In addition to receiving a regular income, they will also hopefully see their shares increase in value.

This is because the profits retained in the husiness will be put to good use. In turn, this should increase earnings and therefore the value of the business. The result to the shareholder will hopefully be an increasing share price, with dividends rising each year.

This sounds ideal - in theory. However, if you look at The Independent's shares page, you will notice that returns are generally low.

High returns are usually associated with riskier shares. The yield column on the page expresses the last gross annual dividend as a percentage of the current share price. It is the exception rather than the rule to find a gross yield above 5 per cent ~ most produce less.

Investors who are seeking income from their shares will terest unit trust.

no doubt be disappointed, as they can generally secure higher returns from simple savings accounts.

Naturally everyone needs a contingency level of savings which provide instant access.

It is also true that higher returns can be obtained from notice or fixed-term accounts. However, maximising shortterm returns with savings accounts can be to the detriment of future income.

It is essential for every investor to have a comfort level of savings.

It is equally important for those who will be relying on investment income to consider taking steps to ensure that their income increases over time, even if this means forgoing income in the early years.

This may not be a route that everyone is able, or indeed would wish, to take. It requires planning and professional guid-

Ideally, in addition to funds in instant access and term accounts, consideration should be given to securing a guaranteed level of income.

This may be achieved by investing in gilts, which are Government securities. These were the subject of this column last month when it was explained that when the current price for a dated gilt is more than £100, it means that the investor will make a loss when the security is redeemed.

Although such gilts pay a high dividend, it must be understood that a proportion of the income paid every year is effectively capital.

When investing for income, the advice is usually that 40 to 50 per cent of a portfolio should be in securities producing a fixed level of income.

If contemplating investing in gilts, professional advice should be sought from a stockbroker or independent financial adviser

However, ordinary gilts do not give protection against inflation. An alternative course would be to invest in a fixed in-

INVESTMENT PERFORMANCE

SINCE LAUNCH

NOV 95 TO DEC 9"

The FTSE All-Share

Index-Tracking PEP that

4 Most PEPs charge 1% or more annually and also have other charges when you first invest."

performs the best

John Hutton-Attenborough. of IFA Berry Birch & Noble. says it may be worth contemplating the Commercial Union Income Unit Trust which currently yields an income of 7.6 per cent.

This need not be to the detriment of the invested capital. Over the past 12 months. a £1,000 investment would now be worth £1,177 if dividends had heen invested. Over five years £1,000 would have risen to £1,780, which is an annual growth rate of 12.2 per cent.

In effect, the fund has grown by a considerable amount more than the amount paid in income over the years.

So as to spread the risk, any shares portfolio should contain at least six holdings spread across different sectors.

In order to absorb the cost of buying and selling the shares, the minimum economic holding per share is around £2,000. This may not be affordable by more modest investors. However, there is a solution unit trusts which invest in a mixture of fixed income stocks and shares. Mr Hutton-Attenborough says the Jupiter Income Unit Trust is well worth considering. With income reinvested, the return over the past year has been 21.6 per cent and an annual equivalent of 27.5 per cent over the past five years.

However, the dividend yield is only 3.7 per cent, This means that £1,000 invested a year ago would have produced an income of just £37.

At the same time, £1,000 invested five years ago would now produce an annual income of £124.51, which is equivalent of 12.45 per cent gross.

This emphasises the fact that that when investing in the stock market for income, one should take a longer-term view and be willing to sacrifice a low initial income for higher dividends later.

Readers contemplating investing in the stock market for seek professional advice.

Single Step alead of Inflation. Argeria Tax Man.

Sounds too good to be true? Well, our 11th Index-linked Issue Savings Certificates allow you to do exactly that.

That's because the value of your investment keeps pace with inflation and, in addition, you'll earn a guaranteed 2.75% pa over five years - all completely tax-free. So your savings will not only keep their purchasing power, but they'll also earn extra interest.

You won't pay a penny in tax and you won't even need to declare your Certificates on your tax return.

All of which makes Indexlinked Savings Certificates a particularly attractive investment. Especially since - like all our products - they are 100% secure, thanks to the backing of HM Treasury.

Apply today. You can invest from £100 to £10,000. Just send your cheque with the coupon below or buy your Certificates at your local post office.

	Please send this form and your cheque to: National Savings, PREEPOST DU 61, Ourham, DH99 19R.
	If you prefer, use a first class stamp for rapid delivery.
	1 i apply to buy 11th Index-linked lesue Savings Certificates to the value of E
	2 Do you siready hold National Savings Certificates? (please pot.) Yes No
	If you do, please quote your Holder's Number 3 MAll forenames
	Permanent Address
	Postcode Dete of Birth FOR NATIONAL SAVENCES USE OF BY
	4 I understand the purchase will be subject pushed to the ferms of the cuttent Prospectus. Your chapte should be crossed "Air Payer" and mode pushed to the cuttent Prospectus. Your chapte should be crossed "Air Payer" and mode to the part of the chapter of the cuttent Prospectus.
	SignatureNATIONAL
	DeteSAVINGS
	Daytime telephone number

The Index-Tracking PEP

WHAT MAKES LEGAL & GENERAL'S FTSE ALL-SHARE INDEX-TRACKING PEP OUTSTANDING VALUE FOR MONEY?

A glance at the table will show that A - since its launch two years ago - this index-Tracking PEP from tegal & General has proved that it offers PEP investors superb value for money.

It follows the FTSE All-Share index. This Index reflects the performance of the entire stock-market, so it reduces the risk of being over-exposed to shares which under-perform and lessen your return, in fact, a lump sum of £6,000 invested in the Legal & General Index-Tracking PEP at launch would now be worth £8,623° compared to just £7.975° in the average UK Income & Growth Trust.

With no initial deducted, more of your money is invested at the outset for maximum

charges

Find out more now-phone free 0500 11 66 22 FREEPHONE Sam TO Spm WEEKDAYS 9am TO 5pm W14 KUDS, PLFASE QUO41 REF: B4D317

growth potential, there are no withdrawal tees and with an annual management charge of 0.5% - the value for money is outstanding.

So make the most of today's opportunities. For further details (including information on our monthly saving option) call now or visit our web site at http://www. legal-and-general co uk

April 1997 the terms and hums for converting an existing PEP into an ISA are being considered as part of the consultation. Legal & General (Direct) Limited, Registered in the Legal & General (Direct) Limited, Registered in the Legal & General (Direct) Limited, Registered in the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are by the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are by the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are by the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are by the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are Talking to an independent adviser is often presented as the sole option for those of us with a range of financial needs. But in some cases, salespeople who are only able to advise on their company's products can be an acceptable alternative. Simon Read dons his cricket pads to tell us the score.

If Ynrkshire County Cricket Club hadn't relaxed its cligibility rules, it's fairly unlikely that the team would have remained a force in county cricket. Until relatively recently, players had to be Yorkshire-boro to play for the county. So while other teams picked from the best in the world, Yorkshire was limited to its own.

The practice was clearly nonsense. In much the same way, comparing a tied agent to an independent financial adviser (IFA) could be said to be nonsense. From one you'll be offered a choice of the best products across the market while the other will only be able to offer you products from his or her own company.

Yet many tied agents are very successful. Why? Partly because we're all lazy and partly because many tied agents are agents in the country. "Our agents offer good at their job and offer decent advice.

The problem with tied agents lies not necessarily with the salesmen themselves, but with their limited product range. When it comes to looking at an individual's situation and recommending a course of action, both an IFA and a tied agent could end up with the same answer.

The difference is that an IFA will recommend the best pension, PEP, nr whatever from across the whole market while a tied agent will be limited to offering his or ber own company's product, whether it's any good or not.

"I think that, in all morality, somebody should not be allowed to sell to the public unless they can rffer a range of good products," says IFA Alastair Conway, managing director of Clark Conway. The idea that people feel they are getting good advice from a tied agent is wrong."
This view is typical of most IFAs. They are fiercely proud of their independent status and it is clearly galling for them to see so many people buy financial products through a tied agent. Worse is the danger that, by choosing a tied agent, people end up with the wrong products.

Yet this view is disputed by companies that use salespeople. Allied Dunbar runs one of the most successful networks of tied good professional advice," says an Allied Dunbar spokesman. "We spend a great deal of time and money training them properly, above and beyond the standards set by the industry. Additionally, our agents have the ability to offer the best possible service, in terms of ease of access and client servicing. They deal with one system which they understand very well, and so can spend more time meeting clients' needs."

Large insurance companies also offer unique confidence and security, according to Allied Dunbar. "We offer a guarantee that if one of our advisers has offered the wrong product or wrong advice, we'll nffer compensation and put the client back in the right position. IFAs may not have the backing tn do that."

When it comes to products, most insurance companies offer much the same these days, claims Allied Dunbar. Therefore it doesn't matter so much which product you buy - wbat matters is the advice you get. This is a debatable point. If a tied agent cannot actually nffer the best product for a particular customer, it is unlikely that be or she will admit that and tell a customer to go cisewhere.

In reality, the tied agent is more likely to make the foot fit the shoe, rather than the other way round.

Salespeople have timited scope, like Yorkshire did before it relaxed its eligibility rules Photograph: David Ashdown

Don't neglect the most important aspect of your portfolio

With shares in around 1,800 companies quoted on the main stock market alone, it is no wonder many investors want an adviser to help them choose a portfolio. Trouble is, finding a stockbroker is often as timeconsuming as selecting individual shares. But, David Prosser writes, it is worth making the effort.

Several hundred brokers offer investment advice in the UK. Unfortunately, there is a matter of trial and error. Nevertheless, there are steps you can take to avoid ending up with an unsuitable adviser.

The first is to decide how much advice you need. For a basic service, you need an advisory stockbroker, who will expect you to approach him with ideas for deals. He or she will execute deals on your behalf but will also tell you whether he thinks potential trades are a good idea. Advisory brokers can also offer views on the general outlook for the stock market.

Some investors are happy with an advisory broker who divulges his opinions over the telephone. One firm, The Share Centre (01442 890800), even has a premium no perfect route to finding the ideal one rate telephone service that you can call for to meet your needs. Sometimes, it can be advice on individual stocks. You then pay bowever, prefer more of a personal service.

The next rung up the ladder in advice terms is in ask a portfolio manager to make your dealing decisions. Advisory portfulio managers won't deal without asking your opinion first while discretionary portfolio nagers take your money and tell you every so often what stocks they have bought nn your behalf and how they're doing.

The more advice you need, the more you will have to pay. Portfolio managers, for instance, levy a fee at least once a year. Advisory brokers take a commission each time you deal. Clearly, charges matter. High fees will eat into your returns quickly. However, if very low dealing charges. Other investors. advice, the quality of that advice is more important than the charges the broker levies.

Once you've selected the type of broker that you need, start looking for an individual firm. Apcims, the private client stockbrokers' association, is a handy starting point. It publishes a list of all its member brokers in the UK, with information on the services they offer. "This is a fairly comprehensive document," says Sarah McGuffick of Apeirus. The guide, which is free, also gives a geographical breakdown of brokers in your area.

With the help of the association, you should be able to identify a number of potentially suitable local stockbrokers. A good way to narrow down the field further is to you're looking for a stockbroker who offers ask friends and relatives.

Then try to compile a shnrtlist of candidates, using the guide to check that they offer any specialist services you require. Do not feel you have to sign up with the first stockbroker you meet. It makes sense to visit four or five firms. The key is to find a broker with whom you feel comfortable. When you visit brnkers, ask about their experience with clients who have similar sums of money to invest as you. A broker should be able to give you an objective indication of how clients have fared with his advice.

It's also important to check on the resources that brokers have available. A very small firm won't necessarily fluff your investments, but a broker who has access to more research materials has an obvious head start. In addition, ask about the qualifications of anyone who will be advising. you and the level of professional indemnity insurance they carry.

Finally, when you find a broker you like. make sure that he or she understands your aims very clearly. Your aims should be reflected in a client agreement letter.

It is possible that even if you're very careful about finding a broker you may end up dissatisfied. If this should happen, talk through your concerns with the broker and give the firm time to improve. Equally though, remember that you can change hrokers whenever you like.

Aprims, 112 Middlesex Street, London EH1 7HY (0171-247 7080).

CHOOSE YOUR PENSION FROM?

Many people put good investment performance high on their list of priorities when choosing a pension plan. Making sense of competing claims can, however, be a difficult business.

Well, our simple table above should give them the facts they need to make an informed choice.

The table shows the number of times a company has appeared in the top ten investment performance results for regular contribution with-profits personal pension plans across all durations measured - according to annual surveys by the industry journal Planned Savings.

The Equitable Life has had a top ten placing in such surveys every year since records began in 1974.

In fact, no other company comes close to The Equitable's tally of 45 placings out of a possible 56 over that 23 year history. Scoring highly one year is laudable, but it is consistency of results year-in year-out that gives people the peace of mind they want.

Please note that not all companies have submitted returns to Planned Savings in every year.

But remember, past performance does not guarantee future performance.

HEADSTART

One good reason why The Equitable has given its investors such great performance over the years is because their money gets a headstart. The Equitable has commendably low expenses and so our with-profits pension plans have the lowest charges on the market. Source: Money Management, October 1997. That means that more money is invested on your behalf.

Indeed, The Equitable received a Five Star rating for its personal pension plans in a recent survey by Money Management magazine. So, if you want to feel confident in your choice of pension plan, ask for more information today by calling (0990) 38 48 58, or by completing the coupon opposite.

With The Equitable Life great value leads to great www.equitable.co.uk

INFORMATION ADMITE WILL CALLY HE GIVEN ON EQUIDABLE GROUP PRODUCTS REGULATED BY THE PERSONAL INVESTMENT AUTHORITY THE BOUTTABLE LIFE, PRESPORT WALTON STREET, AVIESBURG, BUCKING HUMSHING HOST 7BB To: The Equitable Life, FREEPOST, Walton Street, Ayleshury, Bucks HP21 78R. I would welcome details on The Equitable's pension plans l am self employed 🗍 NAME (Mr/Mrs/Miss) Tel: (Home) We guarantee that no company outside The Equitable and as entwichance will receive these detail II, towever, you would prefer to receive no further information from its, please rick this box.

> The Equitable Life You profit from our principles at, talk, dr

15 E 25 E 7

Reau

financial

A EN can run was there

the market - length delice

Call for over face consequences

7/FINANCIAL PLANNING

THE INDEPENDENT SATURDAY 6 DECEMBER 1997

Eat, talk, drive - repeat each day

Breakfast at the Crest Hotel in Bristol is not quite the same as Breakfast at Tiffany's. This is the unglamorous side of life as an independent financial adviser (IFA). But, Roddy Kohn believes, it's all part of meeting his clients'

It's 7.30am and the breakfast meeting is to see how suitable HSBC's two-year PEP would be for my clients. Robin Kemp, managing director of HSBC. obviously thinks it is, as it provides capital security with the prospect of 20 per cent growth and matures just after the planned introduction in April 1999 of Individual Savings Accounts (ISAs), Labour's new tax-saving scheme, Rohin is persuasive and I'm inclined to support his view.

This is the hidden side of my "practitioner" role, meeting fund managers and company executives to keep ahreast of product and market develop-

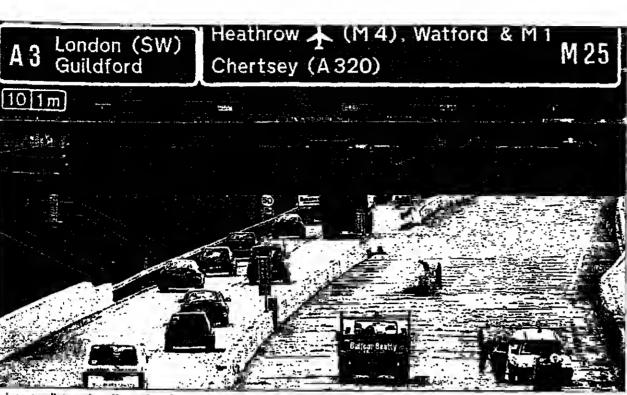

It falls into that category called "research" that appears on our fee notes to clients, to whom it must appear like a hlack hole into which they throw their money.

At 8.30am, I return to my office in Bristol. Twenty minutes later, I am in the Kohn Cougar offices, shouting out "Good morning" to the staff, My first joh is to look at the post. Anything of relevance will be discussed with my colleagues, Neil and June, at 9.15am.

At 9.40am, I meet two new clients, Steve and his partner, who have travelled to see me from Oxford. I start with the regulatory formalities.

We rapidly move on to the main concern - should Steve transfer a pension he has with a past employer?

Although the fund is worth me £40,000, he is startled to the emerging markets.

Driven to distraction: Just after 2pm, lunch is over, man and car are refuelled, and I head to London and the excitement of the M25. Life doesn't get better than this' Photograph: David Rose £400 and £800 to find out the best course of action.

Our fees include an allowance for professional indemnity, technical knowledge, regulatory fees, obtaining quotes, checking surpluses in any existing pension funds or whatever, and a whole host of other subjects concerning ture prospects. In the end, I tell the client to remember that there is £40,000 at stake and that he has a lot to lose in the long run if he is poorly advised. He confirms he wants us to proceed with the research.

clients, including health and fu-

After they leave, it's II.15am and I travel to Basingstoke for a client's annual review. Before arriving, there are phone calls to he made -I'm glad I've had a hands-free phone installed in the car. One of the calls is to a client in Bath to tell him he has his trustees' agreement to invest some pension fund capital in Europe and London who wants to arrange an income protection plan.

We talk about her likely income, what she needs to live on and what capital can be used before she would need to make a claim, I remind her about adding waiver of premium to her existing pension policy. This would take over the premium payments if she is ill for six months or more and will go on paying them until her sclected retirement date or she re-

This is something a permanent health policy will not do as the income it pays is not regarded as relevant earnings for pension purposes.

At 12,45pm, it's time to lunch with my client and we cover all his policies and investments. Some of his funds have done exceptionally well. showing returns of more than 40 per cent, while others have had mixed fortunes, especially his Johnson Fry Hv5 PEP and Hyl single-company PEP. These are based on an Amerlearn that It will cost between Another call is to a client in ican system of choosing the five agenda.

highest-yielding shares in an index with a computer-driven "huy and sell" operation for Both PEPs are suffering from a range of factors including regulation and poor sector sentiment. I advise him to sit tight because we always encourage elients to take at least five-year view with investments, to which he agrees. Just after 2pm, lunch is regular changes.

over, man and car are refuelled. and I head to London and the excitement of the M25. Life doesn't get hetter than this. Once again, hands-free, I use the phone to call the office and check my messages. It may be a pain, but the mobile phone is probably the most effective new technology toy that I own.

Ian Bowden calls from the Personal Investment Authority, the financial regulator, to request confirmation that the minutes of the last Small Business Practitioners Panel, that 1 chair, can be approved. We also chat briefly about next month's Arriving at my London destination, it's now 3,30pm and I meet one of my female clients.

We complete a gift and loan

This includes fielding the trust application form for a odd technical question from the company accountant, whose dry sense of humour and laid-back manner disguises a razor-rush hour has started. I use the slow journey home to make some useful dictation, warning clients about the dangers of high-income bonds. Among the phone calls that interrupt is one from the office to discuss rive back in Bristol at 7.45pm.

The night's my own, with no client meetings and no husiness dinners arranged - only to-

Roddy Kohn is an IFA at Kohn

Cougar of Wellington House,

Wellington Park, Clifton, Bristol

BS3 2UR (0117-946 6384).

morrow to look forward to.

My day finishes when I ar-tomorrow's agenda.

As the meeting ends, the £100,000 investment.

sharp mind.

a good return on your money, while a review of your insurance and pension provisions could save you thousands of pounds over the long term.

Setting your financial for your financial security.

IFAs can give "best advice". This is because IFAs scour the most suitable for your needs. unlike tied agents and appointed company represenand sell products from the company they work for.

Being able in choose from the whole market tends to he better than only being offered one company's products. No company will always have the best products or best performing funds in every investment sector. And few companies offer the full range of investments and savings products available on the market. With an IFA, not only do you know you are getting expert advice, but it also is unbiased. Of course, this ad-

IFAs make their money in

Get advice on putting your money to work one of two ways. Either you affairs in order is no ceive commission from the fieasy task. Over time, nancial products they sell you. you may have started up savings, investment and insurance schemes. But are these still appropriate for your needs or could your money be put to better can charge more. Alternatively, your IFA use elsewhere? Abigail

Montrose seeks advice. Choosing the right investments can mean the difference between a mediocre and

An independent financial adviser (IFA) can review your overall financial situation and give you expert advice on making the right provisions

All financial advisers seek to give good advice hut only whole market, looking for the best financial products tatives, who can only advise on vice does not come for free.

IFAs working on a fee hasis charge from £50 an hour. The rate may vary depending on the type of advice you want. This may seem steep, but other professionals, such as accountants and solicitors.

can pay a fee or they can re-may be commission-based. You will not have to pay any money up-front for the advice you receive, but you will pay it indirectly. Many financial companies pay commission to advisers when they sell one of their products, and this is added to the cost of the financial product you buy. If your IFA is fee-based, he or she can ask for no commission to be charged or paid. Alternatively, the IFA can split the commission with you.

By law, your IFA has to tell you how much commission he or she is being paid. Commission payments vary between 1 per cent and 5 per cent of the amount you invest, depending on the product. Beware a sting in the tail: commission on some regularpremium products is based on a calculation of the premiums you are expected to pay over the lifetime of the product. This is typically an up-front payment, which means most of your first year's premiums will go in commission. IFAs have to hold professional qualifications. The basic qualification is the Financial Planning Certificate, but some IFAs go on to take more advanced exams and will specialise in a particular area such as investments, tax planning or mortgage business.

Choosing an IFA you are happy with can take time, bearing in mind that you want to deal with someone you are comfortable with and who you can trust. Recommendations from friends, a solicitor or an accountant can be a good starting point.

You may even find your solicitor or accountant is able to help you himself," says Anne-Marie Martin, acting chief executive of IFA Promotion (IFAP), a body which promotes financial advice.

"Some solicitors and accountants are qualified to give independent financial advice. If they are not qualified themselves, they may have an IFA arm or someone in the company who is qualified and deals specifically with financial planning."

To check if your solicitor or accountant is authorised to offer independent financial advice, you can call the Financial Services Authority central register on 0171-929

If you are unable to find an IFA via a recommendation, you can call the IFAP hotline on 0117-971 1177 for details of three IFAs in your area. IFAP recommends talking to at least a couple of IFAs before deciding which one to select. Most firms are happy to give potential clients the names of wo of their clients.

When you meet an IFA, he or she should carry out an indepth fact-find into your financial arrangements. This enables them to huild up an overall picture of your financial affairs, Your IFA can review your arrangements. It could be that some of your investments are no longer performing particularly well and you could do more with your money elsewhere.

IFAP has produced a guide on the types of financial advice that are available, as well as a factsheet on how your IFA is paid. For copies, contact the IFAP holline on 0117-971 1177.

Thought for the day

Young Ridgway & Associates Limited are specialists in providing advice and guidance for people who wish to make the most from their retirement.

We provide completely independent advice as to how you can achieve the

MAXIMUM INCOME & CAPITAL GROWTH

from your investments necessary to maintain your standard of living and to protect your capital.

Young Ridgway & Associates Ltd are regulated by the Personal Investment Authority and are authorised to provide you with all the information you need. If you are approaching retirement you should find the time to complete and return this coupon - no stamp required - and we will send you a free copy of our 'Retirement Planning Guide' which will give you the information you need to know.

Young Ridgway & Associates Ltd

Independent Financial Advice FREEPOST - 10 Borelli Yard, Farnham, Surrey GU9 7BR. Telephone 01252 727122

Planning For Retirement?

Please send me a FREE copy of your 'Retirement Planning Guide' br	RP7	A 100
Name tMr/Mrs/Miss)		Young Ridgway & Associates Li
I am rentred Yes No I intend to retire in	months/yrs	independent Linancial Ac

THIS ADVERTISEMENT APPEARS ON BEHALF OF BRITAIN'S INDEPENDENT FINANCIAL ADVISERS AND HAS BEEN APPROADD BY A FLESCON FOUNDATION IN THE PROPERTY SATINGS WILL DEPEND OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PROPERTY AUTHORITY ELIGIBILITY TO INVEST IN A PER AND THE VALUE OF TAX SATINGS WILL DEPEND OF THE OFFICE THE PARTY OF THE GOVERNMENT PLAN TO REPLACE PERSON. FOR THIS WAS THE COURT OF THE GOVERNMENT PLAN TO REPLACE PERSON. THE WAS THE COURT OF THE GOVERNMENT PLAN TO REPLACE PERSON.

8/UNIT TRUSTS

| Heart | Hear Hallander Ornstehend 17/186
Hallander Ornstehend 18/186
Hallander Harmstehend 18/186
Hallander Harmstehend 18/186
Jahrender Ornstehend 18/186
Jahrender Ornstehender 18/186
Jahrender Ornstehen 18/186
Jahrender Ornstehen 18/186
Jahrender Ornstehen 18/1 ### 1997 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 | 1000 00 62 140 05 25 14 474 00 260,70 101 60 45.54 1,5 85 70.27 ES 67.74 6 79.04 25 70.06 31 91.06 4 00.96 64 66.51 68 64.77 70 STANDARD &POOR'S Bloomberg www.bloomberg.com

ts can prove it

ndon is Ci

Across the board, London is changing

Among those who have never visited London, and many who live in the city. Mayfair will forever be a rich - and expensive - navy blue, while poor Old Kent Road remains a dull brown. The reason? Monopoly, the ever-popular game which appears to have set house prices in those areas In stone. Felicity Connell investigates whether the board's assumed property valuations still hold true.

Monopoly's fame spreads far and wide. So wide, in fact, that the US resort of Atlantic City has even named its streets after those on the board.

But while Mayfair and the Old Kent Road are still well known, what about Vine Street, Coventry Street or Northumberland Avenue? A black cab driver may know their whereabouts, but a foreign Monopoly player might be somewhat disappointed.

These streets are part of a list which Victor Watson, head of Waddington's, the games firm, compiled as prime London landmarks with his secretary after a stroll around the city in the 1930s. Today, with the massive development of parts of London that would never have been seen from a tour bus 60 years ago, it may be time to update the Monopoly

Savills Property Consultants ranks Chelsea, Knightsbridge and Kensington as the top three most desirable residential locations in central London.

Knightsbridge and Sloane Street would have to be the new élite areas on the new board. Harrods was, after all, world famous even before the Fayed connection. And Harvey Nichols, (Absolutely Fabulous store, darling) ranks even -

Does Mayfair still deserve a top spot? Of course, the area is prime office location for smaller companies who want a central London base. But, as Robert Bailey of Strutt & Parker, the estate agent, points out in the inimitable salesspeak that can make silk purses out of sow's ears: "Mayfair now appears good value for money in y comparison with other prime ar-

We can only see this trend increasing with the decentralisation of many international compa- per sq ft, the most expensive benies in London giving up their gracious offices, converted from es [into] modern day office com-

Good value for money, indeed. For instance, Strutt & Parker has just sold a two-bedroom flat of just under 1,000 sq ft, in Charles Street, Mayfair, for £250,000. With other parts of central London fetching double that amount. Mayfair may have to be off our new board.

On the other hand, Park Lane must remain in second place, with its views over Hyde Park and, partly, as access to Oxford Street. Other areas of W1, most notably "Fitzrovia", estate agent talk for the streets around Oxford Circus -Portland St., Great Titchfield St - are becoming as popular as Conversions from offices to luxury blocks are dragging in residents who want a central London address, while Oxford Street itself remains one of the richest shopping streets in London, despite some of the tackier shops along its length. Bond Street also holds its place, particularly with the birth of the designer megastore - Versace, Donna Karan, and the oth-

If Northumberland Avenue were to go, one would at least expect Whitehall to be unchanged. Not at all. "It seems now that nothing can be taken for granted in Westminster," says a spokesman for London Residential Research of an area with a severe homelessness

The Treasury Building in Whitehall is under threat from developers, and "if 25 or more residential units are proposed, Westminster planners might just seek a social housing component. Not many people would have ex- we must go to the real tourist pected council housing in the Treasury building."

Not all changes to the board are due solely to the rise and fall. higher among the shopping in an area's fortunes. For instance, Wapping can rightfully claim the place of Fleet Street and Strand loses out to the South Bank, which along with its galleries, theatres and concert halls also has one of the new prestigious addresses in London, the White

The building overlooks the river, with apartments selling at an average of £450 per sq ft, and penthouses at £1.5m. Further along on the Albert Embankment, Peninsular Heights penthouses fetch around £800

ing a cool £3.25m.

It is now respectable (just what were originally private hous- about) to venture south of the river, so the South Bank ranks alongside Covent Garden and Soho, both of which have seen huge increases in residential desirability, particularly with the removal of Covent Garden market in the late 1970s. Residential space in both Soho and Covent Garden, nonetheless, has strong competition from the smaller trendy businesses and shops.

From Long Acre, Covent Garden, take a trip along to St Katherine's Dock, With its combination of office and residential use the Isle of Dogs easily deserves

The penthouse in the Berkeley Tower, Canary Riverside, is priced at over £2m, and both Fairsought after addresses in London", with penthouses at Dun-cry. "but I wouldn't want to live there!" You don't have to. You follow the lead of Far Eastern landlords. Buy it up, and charge everyone studies of Monopoly games, Marlhorough Street and Bow Street

For a likefor-like comparison,

Circus and Charing Cross Road.

From here it is but a short slippery slope to Whitechapel Road and Old Kent Road, which still "represent the last resort of the underdog to hold out against the oppressive forces of the Navy Blue bomermonders.

The original train stations on the board represented the different railway companies. After nationalisation they became briar Homes and Barratt are vying to produce "one of the most Lock, respectively. "That's all very well," you else the rent. According to computer-assisted most visited sites on the board.

sites of Leicester Square, Piccadilly

Angel Islington, having moved up a peg, leaves Caledonian Road to slot in with Euston Road and Pentonville Road, which can only gaze in envy at their neighbours, the conservation area of Barnsbury and spiralling Blooms-and now we have come full circle. However, the different companies are now far be too numerous to mention, so the stations will gain a place in view of their importance. King's Cross is still there, but will soon lose its lion's share of the Channel Tunnel responsibility to Stratford, in the East. Victoria deserves a place, being the gateway to the rest of the world via Gatwick Airport. Marylebone, in reality only hanging on by the skin of its teeth, can go, as can Fenchurch Street. That leaves a space for Paddington to serve the west of England.

VISITING

And as for the Free Parking square, parking at any price would the new board. In central London you can expect to pay up to £100,000 for a garage. Rents are more affordable, if you can secure one, at around £5,000 per year for a garage, £1,500 for an underground space. So along with the green houses and red hotels, little black garages will really clobher your opponents.

Bloomsbury

£120

Fitzrovia

C100

And forget about going straight to jail. The easiest way to immobilise a player is to wheel-

Fictitious property games: should the world-famous Monopoly board, loved by millions, be subject to change as areas in London move in and out of fashion?

£100

THE ANGEL

Pests can prove lethal for your finances

A midnight trip to the kitchen to pour a drink for her toddler led Fiona Brandhorst to the fleshcreeping discovery that something other than cobwebs was alive and thriving in her house. Here, she explains what to do to get rid of creepycrawlies that can go crunch in the night.

Stepping, or rather sliding, barefooted on a slimy slug the size of a small rodent, sent me reeling. It was just the start of a nocturnal nightmare – slugs of all sizes were regularly found hanging out of the larder or silently gathering in a great pow-wow on my ceramic tiles. Criss-crossed silvery trails were the tell-tale signs every morning of our unwanted visitors. We tried slug peliets - too dangerous for the cat and our toddier grapefruit halves filled with beer placed strategically in the garden - a waste of good beer and they didn't catch any slugs anyway. In the end the solution was simple and environmentally friendly. Plant a half barrel in the garden, fill I with water, add plants and the magic ingredient - nature's slug predator - the common frog. Our house is now slug free and our hostas are no longer reduced to a stalk by midsummer.

However, some pests are more difficult to track down. Jane Hayball discovered a loaf of bread savaged in her kitchen one morning. "Then we kept finding walnuts scattered around the house, but the crunch came when some avocados disappeared one by one."

Mice were eliminated from the suspects list as "there were no droppings", and Jane finally laid the blame on squirrels. We found a hole under the doorstep where we thought they could possibly get in."

Jane boarded up the hole and thought her squirrel problems were over > spotted a few popping in and out of a gap under the eaves. This time she was taking chances and called in a pest control until a neighbour

ny, who discovered a drey in the roof space.

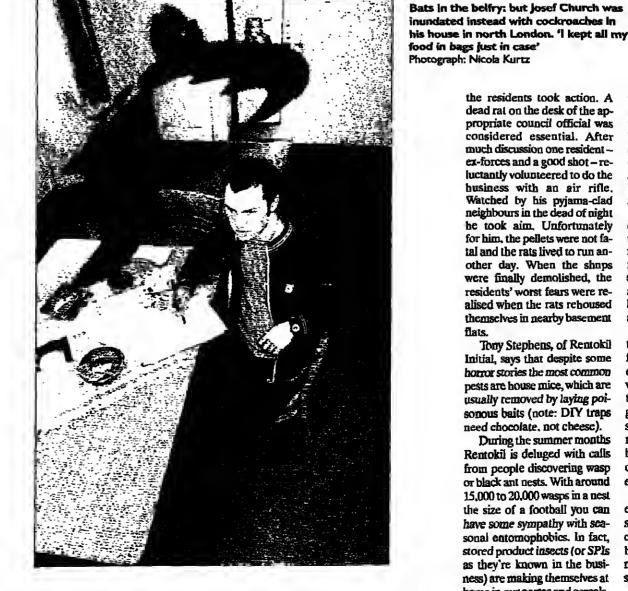

They put down poison and returned to remove the corpses. Jane sees squirrels as major pests. "They love chewing and could do quite a lot of damage."

Whatever pest decides to descend on your house, you're unlikely to get much help from your local authority. Environmental officers will probably point you in the direction of the Yellow Pages to get the problem sorted out yourself, if they don't have their own pest-control teams.

Following complaints from neighbours or tenants, some councils may take legal proceedings against private householders or landlords who refuse to get rid of pests. In very extreme cases they may even pay for the work to be carried out. although the risk of not recouping the money is a hig deterrent to them.

Josef Church's landlord was most co-operative when he was informed that his large Victorian house in Hornsey, north London, was infested with cockroaches. "I was quite disgusted," says Josef, who was away in his native Sweden when his flatmates signed the contract for the house.

"But I suppose it wasn't the landlord's fault and he did act quickly." After the treatment the flatmates found dead cockroaches everywhere, but a few weeks later they started finding the odd live one again.

"I haven't seen any for about - hly stressed at the thought of a week," notes Josef, "and I'm them in my food." Residents in Ridley Road in pleased I haven't ever found London's East End took matone in my bedroom. I've been ters into their own hands a few keeping all my food in bags just cil seemed to ignore the rats in-in case. My mother kept calling me up from Sweden terrifesting nearby derelict shops. Rubbish from the adjacent street market provided the rats with a ready source of food and after dark they were everyyears ago when Hackney coun-

A petition had no effect so the residents took action. A microscopic hut just as lethal, dead rat on the desk of the appropriate council official was considered essential. After much discussion one resident ~ ex-forces and a good shot - reluctantly volunteered to do the husiness with an air rifle. Watched by his pyjama-clad neighbours in the dead of night he took aim. Unfortunately for him, the pellets were not fatal and the rats lived to run another day. When the shnps were finally demolished, the residents' worst fears were realised when the rats rehoused themselves in nearby basement

Tony Stephens, of Rentokil Initial, says that despite some horror stories the most common pests are house mice, which are usually removed by laying poisonous baits (note: DIY traps need chocolate, not cheese). During the summer months Rentokil is deluged with calls from people discovering wasp or black ant nests. With around 15,000 to 20,000 wasps in a nest the size of a football you can have some sympathy with seasonal entomophobics. In fact, stored product insects (or SPIs as they're known in the business) are making themselves at home in our pastas and cereals. "Although these insects are harmless," adds Mr Stephens, "you can understand the horror of finding an insect doing backstroke in your cereal bowl." Bina and Andrew Martin-Davis's pests were similarly especially to their savings. We'd just moved into our house in Surrey when I was suddenly covered in literally hundred of tiny hites," says Andrew. "The previous owner had five cats, so we suspected

KINGS CROSS

STATION

A spray from a pet shnp didn't work and even treatments by the local environmental health department failed to shift the fleas. "Our son had just started crawling," adds Bina, "but I couldn't put him down un the floor - it was a very stressful time."

There was only one solution. They removed all the floor coverings and sprayed each room around the edges with a pesticide hnught from the local vet. "We hadn't budgeted for replacing carpets, some of them were hrand new," says Andrew. "but we had to get rid of the fleas. It cost us around £3,000 by the end of it." They've been told that the eggs could lay dormant for some time and vibrations and central heating can make them hatch. "It's a good excuse for not doing any DTY," Andrew

And finally, the man from Rentokil would like to set the record straight about a certain dinner party tale. Rats do get into drains and, yes, they can swim up around the U-bend. His advice? Keep your toilet

The easy way to Yuletide

By 25 December, fiveand-a-quarter-million real Christmas trees will have changed hands for an average of around £15 apiece. Five-and-a-quartermillion households will have struggled to stand the thing upright wedged in a bucket with house bricks or fiddled with those infuriating screws on stands which are alleged to be the final solution to leaning-`tree syndrome. Rosalind Russell looks at the alternatives to pine needles on the carpet.

According to the British it sticking through the sun-Christmas Tree Growers' As- roof. sociation, more than 50 per cent of the trees will be Nor- for the charity Barnardos way spruce, 35 per cent nonneedle-drop Nordmann or Noble firs and the rest pine or hive spruce. Although tached to the hranches and most families in the UK put a pack of coordinating decup a Christmas tree, only 20 per cent choose real ones. But hardly any will achieve the twinkly elegance you see in magazines like Perfect Home, where the trees with a traditional tree, real never seem to have light cable draped around like biggest sellers so far this spaghetti, or are capped by year is a fibre-optic shimmer an old fairy that has seen bet-

Alive to the angst of the are stroked. house-proud hut hopeless tree decorator, a number of companies have offered easy options. The Marks & Spencer Home Catalogue has two sizes of artificial trees already fitted with lights: the 4ft 6ins with 80 lights is £65 and the 6ft6ins with 144 lights is £100 (mail order only). The Argos 6ft pre-lit artificial tree, with 150 lights, costs £49.99.

M&S will also deliver a real Nordmann fir, about 6ft high (without decorations or lights) for £65 plus delivery, but including a water reservoir - a cut tree can drink up to a pint of water a day. Although that is about double the price of most play, draped garden centre Nordmann firs that size, at least you will not have an argument with your partner over the shape or have to drive home with

The mail order catalogue sells two artificial-tree styles (frosty or traditional) which come with real pine cones atorations. The 6ft tree with 72-piece pack costs £54.98,

Really trendy home-owners would not be caught dead or otherwise. One of the effect "tree", the tips of which change colour as they

They do not generate heat, so are safe for children who find them fascinating. They sell for around £49.99 in Selfridge's and other hig stores. And John Lewis has progressed the minimalist hundle of twigs idea (promoted heavily by interior designers) by producing a gold twig tree and a silver apple-and-pear tree (£39 each). Heals has sold so many of its red chilli pepper tree lights (at £26.50 a set) it has had to order another delivery. The disaround handsome 5ft cowboy-and-Indian type s ahout as chic as Pot But Katrien van Liefferinge might yet come out at the top of the alternaive tree. Trained as a cahinet maker, van Liefferinge, who lives in Leeds, took an onours degree comics. in three-didesign at Glasgow store in King's Road. Luminosa series No 3. is an inflatable, made of PVC, London, provoked a rush punctuated with white or among owners of loft and multi-coloured fairy lights. warehouse conversions. for whom a trad tree making them look like hizarre hut jolly sorcerers' hats. The 1m size is £75 and the 1.2m is £120. Individually made (so sizes are approximate) the Luminosas are supplied with bulbs and fitted plug. They are part of van Licfferinge's inflatable light objects series, which she says was inspired by an interest in fairytales and

It this is all too easy and you prefer your tree to provide a challenge, there is always the one offered in the Bits & Pieces mail-order catalogue. It is a three-dimensional, double-sided 2ft jigsaw of a Christmas tree. It costs £12,95 and comes with 23 mini ornament puzzles which fit on the assembled tree. There are 750 pieces, so it you start now it might just he ready by Christmas

M&S Home Catalogue 0345 902 902; M&S real tree delivery 0345 704 704; Argos 0990 600161; Barnardos 0870 6039090: Selfridge's 0171 629 1234; John Lewis 0171 629 7711; Heals 0171 636 1666; Katrien van Liefferinge (1113 2570241; Bits & Pieces 01379 649 629.

For an Internet list of members of the British Christmas Tree Growers' Association to find one near you, www.bctga.org.tik THREE TO VIEW/WITH STABLE

Lodge Oast near Tonbridge in Kent was converted into a home 13 years ago. It has a 23ft by 11ft entrance hall and three reception rooms, one of which is in the second roundel, 15ft16in in diameter. The five-bedroom house stands in more than five acres of fenced paddocks and gardens and has a cedarwood stahle hlock and a 45ft haybarn. Agents Langford Rae O'Neill is asking £525,000 (01732 740745).

East Leigh, in the Dales National Park seven miles from heyhura, is a stone-built house with views across Coverdale, With three reception rooms, three bedrooms and a games room, the property has a white Aga and a conservatory with a vine and a stone flag floor. The 23ft drawing room has a fireplace with castiron stove, marble surround and antique carved mantel. There is a stone stable and a five-acre field with mains troughed water supply. £225,000 through GA Town & Conntry (01969 623451).

Rookery House, a Grade II-listed timber-framed farmhouse in Felsham, near Bury St Edmunds in Suffolk, is typical of the area, familiar to viewers of the TV series Lovejoy which was filmed around the village. The five-bedroom house has drawing, dining and sitting rooms, and in the half-acre gardens has a range of outhuildings, including stable, workshop and store. £295,000 through Bedfords (01284 769999).

London Property

REGENT LETTING 0171 916 0313

Luxury one bedroom flat, large lounge, fully fitted kitchen. Separate bath and toilet.

Luxury two bedroom flat, varnished wood floors, furnished to a high standard, security videocom entry phone close to public transport and all other amenities. Available now.

THE GROVE, FINCHLEY CENTRAL, N3

abulous four bedroom house with bath and shower, two WCs. Two large reception rooms and fully fitted kitchen/diner and garden. Close

CHALCOT SQUARE, CHALK FARM, NWI

ully fitted kitchen, two WC's and loft for storage.

tube and amenities. Available t

GLOUCESTER AVENUE, REGENTS PARK, NWI £400pw

ST JOHNS WOOD, NW8

PARLIAMENT HILL, NW3

and heating.

TEL: 0171 293 2222

PROPERTY: RESIDENTIA

FAX: 0171-293-2505.

London Property

LIMEHOUSE

£295,000 £171 515 1595

Summary and analysis of approx. 166 Leasehold /aluation Tribunal decisions on flat owners' claims under Leasehold Reform Act, 1993, Compares Less Landlords' and Tribunals' valuations for approx. 600 flats. Includes Lands Tribunal and landlords' fees decisions. Invaluable reference work for settlements. Approximately 61 pages. Extracts on http://www.leasehold.co.uk

£25 Including pp (Visa/Mastercard accepted) from LEASEHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT LIMITED Chartered Surveyors,

33 St. George's Drive, London SW1V 4DG Tel: 0171 821 8820, Fax: 0171 821 8897

Just think, no more trekking around the Agents, no more wasted weekends viewing, no more stress and strain. Our experts search and find, we match using our database, we view and make a video of your selected properties - and much more - while you just sit back and relax.

Dorset/Hampshire

Coldharbour Cottages Believed to be part of Anne

Timeshare

Buckinghamshire

400 year old timber framed thatched cottage. Grade II isted Well decorated unernall Friendly village of Wendove 50 minutes Marylebouc. Sitting room with ingles dining room, conservatory, or kitchen. 2 bedrooms, en suite shower and bathroom, and

Offers around £195,000 Brown & Merry ULSO 024444

Services

ROOFER

0800 ---

*192192

East Anglia

INDEPENDENT

E BES

Detached family bones. Grade Il Listed, large to be a reception room, billioned a room. 4 bed, 2 bath. Respirite well

2250,000

houe (Daytu

呵責領

GOLDFINCH Goldfinch (Projects) Limited, West Road, Weaverham, Cheshire CW8 3HH

!WAN I ED!

LAND/SITES – without Planning Permission but with possible development potential.

Preferably in village/town locations, in Cheshire and North West.

We are prepared to take all the costs and risks in obtaining mission. Our planning consultants are experts. We are intere In buying any land - from large gardens to serious acreege.

Difficult, nuisance, problem, conversion, renovation, listed, redundar

PLEASE FORWARD LOCATION PLANS AND ANY PLANNING and Unneighbourty sites all considered

Overseas Property

TAYLOR WOODROW LUXURY APARTMENTS IN A PRIVATE MARINA PRICES FROM £220,000 Enjoy the Tax Advantages In a Mediterranean Climate

COUNTRY HOME AYRSHIRE SCOTLAND

Presigious country house in grounds of 9.2 acres including executions unach

Lot No.1

Main House and land a o $260,000

Lot No.2

Tel: 01303 530045

Lincolnshire

Scotland

FREE MAGAZINES To sero to get your PREE capy of the NY hopest prompting property characters.

Herefordshire For your THEE copy cast: 0181-542 906 or water to AMBERSTOCK PUBLISHING LTD

tion of Hall outbuildings and grounds to create 17 residential units act in 18 Acres on edge of town. Spacious spertments, 2 bed lodge, 4 bed detached new build, Prices £110,000 -£300,000. Contact Agents John Goodwin, To Let

LANDLORDS SPECIAL

RATES

No Fee to

84B Camden Rd

London NW1 9EA

Retirement Homes

Tenants

SK

Specialists in Residential letting and management Camden, Regent's Park and Primrose Hill. Regent's Park Office 0171 207 2053

Wiltshire

NORTH 20MERSET - Lixury Dosached Houses at the Old Rectory, East Bront. Exclusive village site of just five beautiful new homes built in a traditional style.
Socialed cui-de-sac position in walled grounds near Church. Five minutes to MS-J222. Commutable to Bristol, Tounton and South Water. 4 Beds., 3 Recaps., 2
Saths., Utility. 193,750
£217,500. Maxim Homes Ltd.
Steve Davles). Tel: 01454
201155. BEAUTIFUL RURAL locations.
Close by Mariborough & Hungerford. 4 & 5 bedforom individually styled new homes. Sulfit to the Highest specifications by Parish Homes. Prices range from £155,000 to in excess of £400,000. Please telephone the Sales office for further dotalls on
tel: 01672 811280.

WHATEVER YOU NEED, SCOOT™

Services

WEMBLEDON VILLAGE, SW20 Selection of luxury newly built 2 bed apts and houses, with fully fitted kinchens, spacious reception fitted kitchens, spacious reception recess and all with en suite buthrooms. Ranging from £350-£450 per week. Unfurnished/ lurnished. Close to all amenities.

0800

To advertise

please call

n maisonette on two floors. Large lounge,

Bow E3: Room to let in Georgian House. Share with 3 others. All mod cons. 2 bethrooms, large garden. Very close to tube and DLR. Fernate preferred. Non-smoker E333pom-4eposat. Tel Evenings 0161 983 3166 ISLMGTON Vit. Lovely turnlehed studio room. Own bathroom. Share kitches. Non-smoker P441-yea. A inclusive. Tel 311-254 4579

0171 293 2343

To Let * AMBERDEN ESTATES

0171 433 3310 6 SOUTH HILL PARK HAMPSTEAD LONDON NW3 25B

Scoot (verb): to save time, money and hassle by calling the free 24 hour finder service and letting them find what you need. As in, "I need an estate agent 'cos l'm moving house. I know, I'll Scoot."

0800 192192 www.scoot.co.uk

ORSET - ldyllic thatched farm COUNTRY HOUSES & Cottages & Suffolk & Essex. Peter Andrews 01449 740080 Sell your home for as little THE INDEPENDENT

To Let Country

Looking for a property to buy or rent?

Find our more - call free on 0800-298 4312

Fast, efficient and affordable - Fees from £30

Well, now you can find the home of your dreams without leaving your favourite armchair

Advertise your property through the Independent and Independent on Sunday's CRANBROOK highly successful Property Gallery; a marketplace that is tried, tested and works. The advertisement appears in the Saturday Your Money or the Sunday Business sections. Your property will appear in the format shown here, with 40 words of description complemented by a full colour photograph of your home.

The more advertisements you book the cheaper the cost per ad:-

as £50 per advertisement

1 x Advertisement costs £95

2 x Advertisements cost £130 (£65 each)

3 x Advertisements cost £150 (£50 each)

0171 293 2037 Fill in this coupon and send payment, a colour photograph and up to 40 words of copy to: The Property Team, Classified Advertising, 19th Floor, Independent Newspaper, I Canada Square, Canary Wharf, London E14 5DL

Deadline for receipt of copyriphoto is at least 6 working days prior to publication. Offer open to private advertisers only, commercial advertis

...TELEPHONE (daytone

I require I 2 3 (tick appropriate box) Advertisement(s) at a total cost of £ Please endose a cheque for this amount made payable to 'Newspaper Publishing Ptc' or fill in your-Vise/Access/Amex/Diners Qub details CREDIT CARD NO LITTLE EXPIRY DATE. For advice or more information please call 'The Property Team' on 0171-293 2343 or 0171-293 2302

break for

AND BOILE AND A PRESENT WEST ----TE 450.43 5" 146 STATE OF LEGICAL

lequires investi percent of pessie.

Spice not have a fun terried and which libuse Treperty Eston resorts, 2 aga complete to come A. WAR AST CLE S. They her sersons

* . . .

£450pw

4 7. 43. 25 al المستعد فكالمراوع المسادة REAL STANSE

11. 14. 1_{2.} 1

الىن ئەر ئالىلىكى ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئالىكىنىڭ ئ

 $\lambda_{i}^{(n)} \leq \frac{1}{2} \epsilon 2 \delta$

 $v \mapsto \sqrt{v} \cdot v$

11/PROPERTY

A break for the border? Don't expect an easy ride

Tricky move; make sure the furniture looks used, if you relocate to another country - and you may need specialist help with the red tape a detour through Switzerland during the recent French lorry strike had a sharp reminder of the days of border bureaucracy. Such a firm's clients might have found themselves rattling around an empty home, while their worldly possessions were stuck at the frontier. Penny Jackson reports on the perils of relocating abroad.

So used is everyone to the free movement of goods within the EU, that the requirements of those countries on the outside can he forgotten. A move to Zurich may seem, on the face of it, to be as easy as moving to Bonn, but it is far more complicated.

"At the border you have to produce proof of employment and a permit to reside in the country, as well as other forms, including an undertaking not to sell anything within 12 months. If you don't have the forms, the customs charge a bond which can stretch to thousands of pounds," says William Karslake, of Ward-Thomas Removals. They can even impound the vehicle.

although that is rare." He suggests checking with companies offering a service to Europe that ev are familiar with the concept of clearing customs. Too many people learn the hard way. Everyone knows you need a lot of paperwork for eastern Europe, but they forget that places such as the Channel Islands and Gibraltar are not in the EU. It is the responsibility of the removals firm to have the correct documentation."

WE'S A D. O. LOWIS BURNESS PROPERTY OF THE

71 916 0313

BATHROWN

0800 102192

@171 293 23¹³

-ic): to save time

id hassle by free 24 hour

rvice and letting and an estate

an moving

. os. filt Scoot.

what you need

04027.5

The cost of moving a household across the Channel varies between £3,500 for, say, Paris, and £5,500 for the south of Spain, at Ward-Thomas prices. It can cost a great deal more to move back into the UK, since services are costly on the Continent. One couple who moved to Denmark for long periods found it cost them £2,000 to move there with a small operator, and £5,000 to return. The second time round they employed a British company to collect their goods from Denmark.

It is also worth reminding people that where duty is payable, it is not n good idea to take new goods. "Make spanking new will be spotted toms. Not a problem for one family moving to France, who not only uprooted their Aga, but took two oak trees from their garden, roughly cut into lorry-length planks.

Even within EU countries, the detail of settling down can he harder than arranging transport. Most companies employ relocation agents to smooth the way, and a European association is in the process of being

At present, the UK leads the field within Europe, with France having the second most organised relocation industry. According to Tad Zurlinden, chief executive of the Association of Relocation Agents, the emphasis differs. Some 86 per cent of the agents' clients in mainland Europe are companies, and 14 per cent individuals. while in the UK it is closer to half and

In Europe, 80 per cent want to rent and only 20 per cent to buy, whereas sure there are signs of use", is the figures for the UK are almost 'Karslake's advice, since anything reversed. Patricia Roe, a partner in Man Relocations, based knows how daunting Belgian bureaucracy can be.

She says: "You have to know the right person to get things moving. Everyone must have commune registration and while some [areas] are very welcoming, others, like central Brussels, can take months, It is a nightmare because you need it for everything."

When it comes to leases, she finds the difference between a fixed term and an open-ended lease poses a trap for the unwary. "It is easy to make an expensive mistake if an assignment is suddenly cut short", says Ms Roe. Even inventories, or the so-called etat des lieux (which, roughly translated.

means "the state of the place") require hours of an expert's time.

"They are massive documents which detail anything from cracks in the parquet to marks on the carpet. Unscrupulous landlords would make the most of them, but now tenants are heginning to be better protected."

your accommodation may possibly he there it is either extremely ornate or us a kitchen, although in co polltan centres it is becoming more common for them to be included, finds Helmut Berg, of RSB Deutschland, a German relocation firm.

Apart from help with registering and opening bank accounts, crosscultural seminars prove useful. "If someone is working with a German team, it does help if they know about the culture and how things are done. This equally applies to the German employees, of course," adds Herr

But when it comes to orientation part of a relocation agent's brief spare a thought for Monique Lamontagne, head of relocation at the European Bank. When its staff started moving into the Central Asian republics, her logistical nightmares

She recently arranged for an English family to move to Almaty, the capital of Kazakhstan, which involved some 20 border crossings, "They took In Germany, it helps to know that all their own furniture, since out out dried food twice a year. In the winter some accommodation does not have a regular supply of fuel, and we are having to arrange for their own generator to be installed. Then you have medical care and security to worry about," she says.

> And now, after all that, she may well have to start all over again; the Kazakh government is looking for a new capital city.

Association of Relocation Agents directory, 01273 624455; Map Relocations, 0032 2658 8080; RSB Deutschland, 0049 69 6 0310 91; Ward-Thomas Removals, 0171 4980144.

PENNY JACKSON

Waves from Far East fail to brake home market

Does any huyer in a new London development ask about the effects of Far Eastern investment? Do they worry that a falling-off in sales will make waves in the home market? Not according to Tom Marshall of Cluttons Docklands office: "They never asked before and they aren't asking now.

"What they do want to know, though, is how many buyers from the Far East are owner-occupiers, That is far more important for them, because understandably they don't want to buy into a development that is predominantly rented out."

Although Far Eastern investors have been of enormous help to the London market as a whole in the past few years by providing a sold financial hase for the developer, the strength of the home market is far more important.

Savills Research finds the percentage of Far Eastern buyers of new huild in the Docklands to be eight per cent. At the present time, the success or failure of a development selling in the Far East is hard to determine. Tom Marshall saw two wellknown developers in central locations return with entirely different stories - one had done well, the other very badly.

Barratt, for instance, might well have hetd its breath during the recent turmoil in the stock markets having sold 50 units at its Globe View development in Upper Thames Street to buyers in Hong Kong in September. Nevertheless, none of the buyers has withdrawn. Prices start at £180,000, rising to £700,000.

Barratt does not take more than 30 per cent of any development ahroad. However, where UK buyers might benefit is where developers either decide it is not worth marketing in the Far East at all, or they cut the number of units for sale there, putting more the way of the British purchaser.

The quality of stock going to auction these days has vastly improved. No longer is it a course of last resort for the vendor, whether private or institutional. At Savills second national auction held in London last week, Thornbridge Hall, a grade II listed neo-Tudor house with a stable block, sold for £850,000 to a Cheshire businessman who intends to restore it for his family's use.

Private individuals, as opposed to dealers, who imagine they can pick up a bargain may find g against iike-minded buyers. Even so, Robert Weaver of Savills finds it gives the most accurate picture of the current market sineethere can be no back-room negotiations: "No one's hand is being forced", he says. "Nor is there any reason to assume that the property has some inherent problem."

On South Ferry Island in Liverpool's Docklands, Crosby Homes is intending to launch the remainder of its Cohurg Quay development over Christmas and the New Year. As the first residents move in, so the next phase, St Lawrence Quay, will be introduced. Apparently, the site appeals across the spectrum from "retired merchant seamen to young professionals." Prices at Cohurg Quay start at £88,950. Sales : 0151 7342220.

Kari Poli and

Scott: despite a favourable survey, their three-storey riddled with dry rot from basement to cost £13,000 to put right

Photograph:

Kalpesh

Lathigra

rafters; it out to be house turned

Caroline

'Requires investigation': the dreaded words that can make a survey valueless

Eighty per cent of people, through either naïvety or stupidity, do not have a full survey carried out when buying a house. They rely on valuation reports, a much less complete picture of the property. Ginetta Vedrickos, who was one of them, offers her personal excuses, but wonders whether a full survey would have helped anyway.

I admit it. I relied solely on the valnation report for what is, yes, I know, the most important purchase I'm ever likely to make.

My feeble excuse is that I loved the house so much that I didn't want to know about its faults. I'm feeble but I'm not alone, Are the smug 20 per cent better off than me when things go wrong?

Karl Poll and Caroline Scott reected two houses after surveys revealed major problems. They believed a building survey, often called a full structural survey, was worthwhile for the third house they saw.

Mr Poll chose a surveyor from the phone book. We wanted the surance of an expert opinion. We talked a lot, and he seemed pasinate about houses, which in-mired confidence." Mr Poll and Ms Sout received a "huge report which the surveyor went through in extrustive detail." It mentioned dry and suggested "further investion". But the surveyor reassured Mr Poli and Ms Scott that it looked bite a localised attack, so they need walked upstairs and immediately spotted dry rot in a different place to the "localised spot".

DOL MOLLA

"I spent a nightmare Saturday ripping plaster off walls. It was horrible finding more and more, and realising how much it would cost."

The three-storey home was riddled from basement to rafters, and cost £13,000 to put right. But should they have sought specialist advice on the dry rot?

"I trusted the surveyor's judgement," says Mr Poll. He believes the surveyor should have spotted the extent of the problem or advised them to investigate: "The report was full of trivia, and more significant things were lost. It was impossible ro judge, because it was peppered with stock phrases such as 'requires further investigation'."

Mr Poll and Ms Scott spent three months in temporary accommodation while their house was being repaired. Were they tempted to sue?

There was probably nothing we could have done, considering the number of caveats in the report, and after the trauma the last thing we wanted was a legal battle."

Would they have a survey next time round?

"I'd trust my own judgement. rather than rely on a so-called expert," says Mr Poll.

A surveyor who wishes to remain nameless insists that he and his colleagues are put in an impossible position. "Vendors jump up and down if we try to have a good look. and buyers leap on us hecause they haven't understood the more significant aspects. Fear of litigation makes us stick in caveats left, right and centre, and reports become worthless." David Parkin, a chartered sur-

On completion day Mr Polt veyor, believes that trivia does creep into reports, and that much hinges on the definition of "significant": "For one punter a leaky tap staining the bath is significant: 10 another it's irrelevant."

But he believes that talking to clients can lead to misunderstandings, and is unnecessary if the surveyor has written a good report: "What I think I've said is not what you think I've said." He advises buyers to read reports white walking around the property, rather than rely on a telephone conversation with their surveyor.

Thalia Thomas, principal researcher at Which? magazine, believes buyers can minimise the problems by choosing the right survey for their property, and by making sure they find a good surveyor. "Speak to a few, and find one you feel comfortable with. A good surveyor should go through the report with you word for word."

Ms Thomas is also concerned about jargon: "Language should be clear and easy to understand," she Terence Denman, consultant to the Plain English Campaign, uses surveyors' reports as examples of how not to write: "They're absolutely addicted to writing in a dull. tedious way. Perhaps they think people are impressed by long reports, but they're soportific, and you switch off."

What are your legal rights, if it can be proved that the surveyor made a serious mistake when assessing your property? Well, the cards are stacked against homehuyers. Even if you are able to prove in court that the surveyor missed major faults that later prove expensive to rectify, you will still have to show that the property would have been worth a minimum of 10 per cent less than other, comparable homes in the area, if you are to win compensation.

In some cases, this 10 per cent limit may in fact he higher, if the house is of unusual design or there are few comparable properties in the neighbourhood.

Harriet Johns is a rare case of someone who won such a legal battle, albeit out of court. One of the 20 per cent who had a survey done, she didn't "switch off". A survev of her Victorian property had shown no major problems. All was well until cracks appeared: "They were everywhere, and went all the way through the walls." An independent engineer found no subsidence, as Ms Johns had feared, but the roof had been replaced and not adequately strengthened. Ms Johns started a legal battle for compensation: "It was engthy and stressful, and by the end I dreaded opening letters." Ms Johns lound the costs enormous both financially and emotionally. Three years later the surveyor settled out of court and paid her £8,000 towards the cost of repairs and legal bills.

For those unable to face a legal battle there's always arbitration, a process which, until last week, could safely be described as farcical. Surveyors had to agree to at-cases were heard in 10 years.

Chartered Surveyors voted, at their extraordinary general meeting on Thursday, to make arhitration compulsory from next year. This move

Perhaps the 20 per cent are right misadvised.

to be smug, after all.

 Valuation report, around £170, is for the huilding society's security. It is not a survey.

 Home buyers' survey and valuation, around £330, not for older or tend and, unsurprisingly, only 68 unusual properties. But the Royal Institute of Building survey, around £450. A detailed but not exhaustive report. Make sure you understand the more significant findings, and be prepared to pay for specialist investigation for problem areas.

gives the chance of redress to buyers who are dissatisfied with a Any problems? Arbitration is survey if they feel they have been compulsory from next year, and will cost £200. A quick, mexpensive way to get an independent decision on your case without going to court.

If there's a bubble, it has to burst. Those who bought the Mercedes SLK at an inflated prices in the hope of selling on at a profit will have had their fingers burnt. The Jaguar XJ220 was another dud for speculators. But, Jomes Ruppert discovers, there are always opportunities.

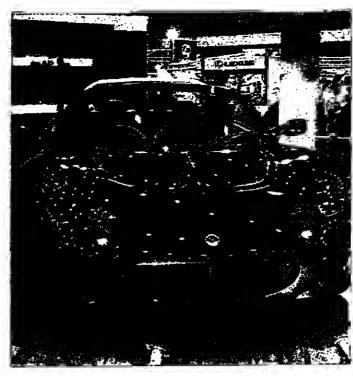

You only get what you pay for and when it comes to cars sometimes the list price just is not enough to huy the model of your dreams. If there is a queue for the car you want, instead of waiting years for delivery, then pay a little premium and get it parked on your drive tomorrow. That is exactly what happened earlier this year with the hrilliantly marketed Mercedes SLK.

A sexy supercharged little roadster which at the push of a hutton became a proper metal-topped coupé and it was priced at only £29,500. That is cheap for a Mercedes, so the SLK was oever going to be short of customers. So unless you were a Spice girl, or Tim Henman, the chances were you could not have one. However, if you paid anything up to of premium is no longer required. A casual flick through the more prestigious motoring classified ads in one newspaper turned up almost 30 SLKs. According to one Mercedes Porsche Boxster owner who was of-dealer, "The problem is that everyone ordered them in silver, a traditional Mercedes colour, mostly with a red interior. They are now everywhere and anyone who thought that they could make killing may well get their fingers burnt. There is now no reason to pay anything more than list price for this car." Even so, dealers are still quoting 18 months' delivery, but those who needed to he seen in an SLK before the Joneses have either paid a premium or can now take their leisurely pick. As supply meets demand and the models roads, then the market inevitably caims down.

price hubbles have burst include the BMW Z3, Porsche Boxster and Lotus Elise. Like the SLK they were renutedly commanding prices significantly above their retail value. The BMW has probably hit the ground hardest, because underneath that James Bond-starring retro roadster styling is a humble 3-series Compact as many owners have discovered. The latest six-cylinder 2.8 version now makes the original 1.9 seem ordinary and there are dozens on sale. Another distorting factor is the increasing numbers of left-hand-£10,000 over the list price an SLK drive Z3s, SLKs and Boxsters arrivcould have been yours. But that sort ing from the Continent. The strong pound has inevitably helped and easily undercut the British retail price by up to £10,000 in some cases. That become a more familiar sight on the Going, going, down: the Lotus Elise, left, the BMW Z3 and Porsche Boxter

Other models whose premium fering his 3,000-mile car at just £500 over list price at £41,800. He was finding that only car dealers were ringing him up, and offering £5,000 less than he originally paid.

You cannot talk premium cars without talking to ooe man in particular, Tom Hartley. Never backward in pushing his premium car husiness forward, the ever quotable Mr "1 may not manufacture cars, hut 1 do manufacture their prices" Hartley is keen to reveal how good the the SLK s been to him this year.

"We had around 30 per cent of the supply, which means we sold over 130. 1'd say it is one of the strongest premium models I have know in my

But its premium life is over and Mr Hartley has moved on to anothis not good news to the private er Mercedes, the CLK 320, which now commands up to £10,000 over the list price, and the latest Porsche £50,000 deposit. Now, the Jaguar 996, "I have sold seven of those so far and some Porsche dealers haven't even had delivery of their demonstrator models yet."

Proof positive that some areas of the premium price market-place is as dead as a dodo, is the dodo-like Jaguar XJ220. Back in the late Eighties Ferraris F40 and Porsche's 959 supercars hecame £500,000 must-have toys and other manufacturers though they could join in.

So did the premium-priced speculators, hence the tragically mistimed Jaguar XJ220. An impressive car, hut in the harsh economic reality that was 1992 £415,554 plus VAT looked a lit-

The lawyers got involved once the speculators could smell their burnt no car 1 can't supply, at a price." walk away and leave behind a Jaguar 01277 216161.

dealer Grange has the last remaining. R-registered, left-hand-drive XJ220s on sale, for £127,550. Plus VAT of course.

Although the Hartleys of this world see them at closer to £100,000

And are there any tips for the future? Mr Hartley does not hesitate in naming the forthcoming M Class Mercedes, an American-built Range

"Already sellers are asking me how much it is worth and buyers want to know how much it will cost for immediate delivery. Like the SLK it will be very good for my husiness and it will definitely fetch a £5,000-plus premium. As I've always said, there is fingers and finally were relieved to Tom Harrley 01283 762762; Grange

GAVIN GREEN

Any car you like, as long as it's green

As posturing politicians and embattled environmentalists meet in Kyoto to help save the planet, it's a good time to look at how we humble drivers can contribute to a greener, more cheerful.

Let's get straight to the point: what's the greenest car on sale in Britain? The most fuel-efficient car, according to EU fuel economy figures, is the Seat Ibiza 1.9 TDi, at 58.9 mpg. But isn't that a diesel, and aren't diesels dirtier than petrol cars? They use less fuel, so create less carbon dioxide, the primary issue discussed in Kyoto. But they pump out more gases linked to respiratory illnesses. Mind you, modern car diesels are miles better than buses and taxis. Nowadays, they're pretty clean. Fine, but I need something higger than an Ibiza. And 1 don't want a car named after a chair. What's the most fuel-efficient car 1 can buy that can comfortably seat four people and carry some higgage? A Volkswagen Passat TDi (53.2 mpg). The turbodiesel Passat is not just the most fuel-frugal hig family car, it's also one of the best. Nowadays, you don't lose any style or driving pleasure by buying economical

I'm still not sure about a diesel though. The stuff is so smelly, and the only time 1 filled up a diesel car it stained my loafers. Then you're after petrol power. If you want to average over 40 mpg, there's a big list of good, small, petrol cars. You could try the Fiat Cinquecento Sporting (45.3 mpg) – which is a real hoot to drive. The Ford Ka (47.9 mpg) is also iud to drive and to look at although the back seat is for kids only. And the Fiesta 1.25 (42.2 mpg) is a brilliant little machine, although it has a face that looks more like a carp than a car. If you need more room, the Fiat Punto erages 41.5 mpg. I've already told you: I need more space. Then buy one of the new Mitsubishi

60 seats four easily and av-

Carisma GD1 models (45.6 mpg), which uses a newfangled direct-injection petrol engine, one of the new "Big" Ideas" which should see petrol power soldier on for another couple of decades, If combines diesel economy and petrol performance. In a few years, most car makers will offer direct-injection petrol engines. It's the future, short- to medium-term.

And long-term? After ally surely petrol cars will always be dirty? Not necessarily: You'd be amazed how cleana modern car's exhaust is although it still pumps out carbon dioxide, the greenhouse gas. But in terms of exhaust toxins, a modern car with catalytic converters and electronic engine manage meot is about 20 times less polluting than a car from the late Seventies. Long term petrol power will disappear though. Some electric "hyhrid" cars which use both petrol and electric power are about to go on sale in Japan, one from Toyota and one from Honda. They're greener than conventional petrol cars, although they re Longer term, we'll almost certainly see hydrogen fuel cells. Most car makers agree it's the answer. Mercedes is probably at the cutting edge. although Bill Clinton recently hinted that the Yanks" are at the forefront, as a way of mitigating their appalling environmental record. Mercedes reckons it will have a fuel-cell version of the A-class on sale in just over a decade.

In quick succession, other car makers will probably offer fuel-cell cars too. Potentially, these cars pump out no tailpipe pollution at all. The Kyoto delegates would

How much do cars contribute to global warming, anyway? About 10 per cent of total carbon dioxide output, according to the OECD, But cars are the fasting growing source, owing to their explosion in the Third World. Buses and trains may be greener. But, as in the West, people would much rather

Registration Numbers

Track to 12

E

Minter ter

445 g (1.2....

Daewoo's time machine: it has nearly caught up with 1997

Once more, without feeling, new Daewoos have arrived. This one is an odd size and seems to have little character. But John Simister sees signs of hope ...

You'll have beard of Daewoo, the Korean conglomerate that sells its cars direct to the public and promises a whole new world of consumer-friendly carbuying. Its original range of two models was as crude and geri- trade will not touch them as airbags, plus a stereo which is atric as the sales pitch was slick, but now these automotive white goods come in three new shapes and sizes. The one you see here is the middle-sized one, called Nubira.

Nubira. A nubile-sounding car, you might think. Or perhaps, if you heard the name out of context, you might think it was a new hrand of mobile tele- at a new Nubira, and you see phone, or possibly, give or take something which might even a vowel or two, a new hallpoint pen. But no, it's a car. The company's eogineers refer to it as the J100, which sounds much er than a Mondeo and not, as more high-tech. A pity the mar-

Daewoos are already seen as also an estate) costs £11,995 as smart huys by those who know a 1.6-litre SE, or £12,995 as a a good car when they see one, 2.0-litre CDX which is the verand who find that a Daewoo does all they want from a car (go from A to B, start first time, and so on). The mainstream motor electric windows and two ceptible personality. Would I re-trade-ins, true, but that is because it has closed ranks against the maverick newcomer. Either that, or the cars are unsaleable second-hand, perish

the thought. To be fair, Dacwoo bas seen this coming, which is why the new cars are proper modern machines instead of General Motors cast-offs. Look stand up on its own merits.

This car is a slightly odd size, bigger than an Escort but smallyet, available as a hatchback.

The four-door saloon (there is plenty of kit, including anti-lock

Chrysler Neon 2.0 LX: E13.795. Like the Daewoo, a lot of car for the money but little so-made not by Daewoo's electrical division but by Sony. It comes complete with a mobile phone, too. It's a Panasonic, as Korean it may be, but the Nuhira is also cosmopolitan.

The body was styled by IDEA from Holden (Australia's equivalent of Vauxhall, so the GM connection is not yet dead), and the whole project came together at Daewoo's technical centre in Worthing. A three-part front grille (Daewoo's heritage starting point) and enormous rear lights give some visual interest, as does the line which extends from the top of the front wheel arch to the car's rear. But some trepidation, for this is a car

it happens.

phistication. Neat looks. Fiat Marea 2.0 ELX: £14,647. More power, more flair than Nu- Four-wheel drive, fine value.

Daewoo Nubira 2.0 CDX

£12,995. Engine: 1,998cc, four cylinders, 16 valves, 132bbp at 5,400rpm. Five-speed gearbox, front-wheel drive. Top speed

122mph, 0-60 in 8.8sec; 25-

30mpg Rivals:

next day? Worried that I would not, I took more copious notes than usual. And trying to relive the experience now, I'm having difficulty. So, let's see some of what member what it was like the

1 wrote. Big boot. Cup-holders in faof Turin, the engine comes cia. No centre console - storage tray extends under dashboard. So far, so informative. Proud Daewoo crests on vellow under-bonnet filler caps. Roomy in back, but cabin narrow. Driver's seat too high despite tilt adjustment, gradations of steering wheel's height and backrest rake too coarse. Irritating chime if key left in igni-

Yes, it's coming back now. So what about when it's actually moving, rather than sitting in a showroom? Floppy, gritty gearchange, steering woolly, rubstraight-ahead, car does not feel naturally stable at speed on the straight. But holds the road well, and handles bends much more precisely than you would expect from the steering. Comfortable ride. Engine quiet, punchy too (so hira. Well made, fun to drive, Rel-

Proton Persona 1.8 SEi:

£13,365. Malaysian-built. Mitsubishi-based, feels cheap, much detter to drive than you d expect.

Subaru Impreza 2.0 GL:

£13,610. Basks in glory reflected from rally-winning Turbo version.

ative of Bravo/Brava.

sweetly.

Hyundai Lantra 1.8 Si: £12,899. Less pace and perceived solidity than the Nubira, but steers more

There's some boning to do, then, before the Nubira nudges the best Western or Japanese standards, but it is, fundamentally, a proper if unremarkable late-1990s car and it does feel more solid and better-built than Hyundai Lantra (its main Korean rival). Easy to be cynical, but open your mind. There, the notes even contain a trace of self-admonishment.

it should be with 132bhp), but accelerator snatchy.

I wouldn't want a Nubira but. given the warranty and free servicing package (three years for both), I would entirely understand if you did. Who knows, one day Daewoo might even have a history if the Far East's economic collapse doesn't prove terminal.

MOTORING

Metro Hearts

Another good reason to try the Personals?

Introducing The Independent Voice Personals*- on exciting new telephone dating service for our readers, designed to make your search for someone special easier and more successful than everl

> To place your own FREE personal ad, call 0800 216 318

...EVEN THE CALL IS FREE For FREE live assistance from a Vaice Personals® representative call Manday-Friday 9am-8pm,

Voice personals

Voice Personals^e appears in The Independent each Saturday in the Time Off section and in The Independent on Sunday in the Real Life section.

To advertise in this section please call the Motoring Team on 0171 293 2742.

OF ATTRACTIVE

HAVE YOU A REGISTRATION MARK YOU WISH TO SELL?
We will purchase outright or sell on a commission rate. For a written quotation, complete the form and post to: MARKET RESEARCH CAR NOS. 33 DAISY HILL DRIVE, CHORLEY PR6 9NE REGISTRATION MARE: Is the mark on a retention document? If so, please give the expiry date: If the mark is on a vehicle, give:
MAKE: MODEL: TAX EXPIRES: MOT EXPIRES: YOUR NAME: ADDRESS: HOME PHONE: WORK PRONE:

Citroen

Independent Readers Will Know A Quality Buy When They See One XM 2.5 VSX TD ESTATE XANTIA VSX 2.01 16V Metallic Blue. Suplustre Black.
ONLY 25 miles!
Reg. Air Conditioning
Two Years Warranty.
Six Months Tax. £13,495 01442 871234 (Main Dealer)

42,000 miles. 'M' Reg. Full History! Six Months Tax £11,995 with £1,000 01442 871234 (MAIN DEALTA)

MY WORST CAR/ GLEN BAXTER'S PEUGEOT 405 GTX ESTATE

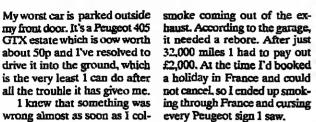

sion I drove. You certainly get 1 approached the Nuhira with brakes, air conditioning, four which appears to have no per-

I had a fire extinguisher with me. A pity, really my front door. It's a Peugeot 405 haust. According to the garage, GTX estate which is oow worth it needed a rebore. After just about 50p and I've resolved to 32,000 miles 1 had to pay out drive it into the ground, which £2,000. At the time I'd booked is the very least 1 can do after a holiday in France and could all the trouble it has giveo me. not cancel, so I ended up smok-1 knew that something was wrong almost as soon as I col- every Peugeot sign I saw. lected it fresh from the showroof and switching on the indicentric in a brand new car was £3,000. using band signals. I tried to get home to Camberwell by only via Norwich.

Of course Peugeot themroom seven years ago. I made selves weren't that interested the mistake of opening the sun- and all I got was a snotty letter from their called customer. cators, which blew a whole load couldn't care less department. of fuses. I ended up without any 1 got the same response when indicators. People must have the car needed a new engine at been wondering why this ec- 62,000 miles, which cost me

By this time I'd had enough and wrote to the Peugeot in I'd bought a fire extinguisher turning left, which meant driving France enclosing examples of my work in the Libération news-Just as the Peugeot was out paper and hinting that I could of warranty a cyclist stopped me get some anti-Peugeot propabeing written off. So I'm still and said that there was a lot of ganda into their media. They stuck with it.

Baxter up on weren't impressed and just sent back a snotty letter with a French accent.

Me and the Peugeot reached the low point in our relationship last year when the electrics caught fire. I opened the bonnet and inside was Dante's Inferno. Unluckily as it turned out another Peugeot. and managed to put it out. I lost my no-claims bonus and the car was just a few pounds away from Fundamentally it isn't a bad car. The bodywork is still in good condition, it's roomy, comfortable and bas nice upholstery. But when it comes to minor details like the engine and electrics, the car is rubbish. That is why I will never, ever buy

Glenn Baxter's 'Gotormet Guide' is published by Bloomsbury at £12.99 A selection of Glen Baxter tableware is available from Abill for refurbishin les of two royal stan.

A My flu warning

oles hit by HIV